⚔️ VOID WALKER — FINAL ARC

CHAPTER 1 — “THE WORLD THAT REJECTED THE VOID WALKER”

The broadcast did not feel like a message.

It felt like reality itself had been rewritten in real time.

Harris stood still in front of the shattered screen, watching his own face labeled in burning red text:

WANTED CRIMINAL

VOID DISASTER ORIGIN

THREAT TO THE ENTIRE CITY

For a moment, there was no reaction from him. Not shock. Not anger.

Only silence, as if his mind was trying to process something that should not exist.

Behind him, the city finally responded.

A stone flew through the air.

It hit the ground near his feet.

That single impact broke the balance.

Another stone followed.

Then another.

Voices rose from the crowd. Not one voice, but many, overlapping into a single unstable roar.

“He caused the Void attacks!”

“My family disappeared because of him!”

“Don’t let him escape!”

Harris slowly looked up.

He did not step back.

He did not defend himself.

He just watched.

Harlina moved instantly beside him, her voice sharp with panic.

“This is wrong. They’re being manipulated—this isn’t them!”

Koji and Lunar arrived moments later, trying to pull civilians back, trying to stabilize the situation, but the crowd had already crossed into something unstable. Fear had turned into belief. And belief was stronger than logic.

More stones were thrown.

Metal objects followed.

A strike grazed Harris’s shoulder.

He did not react.

But Harlina did.

“Stop!” she shouted. “He saved you all more times than you know!”

No one listened.

Because the words were no longer reaching people.

Only the emotion behind them was.

And that emotion was being shaped by something deeper.

Far above the city, inside a hidden corrupted signal structure, a presence observed everything silently.

The Corruption Enemy.

A voice echoed through its system.

“Phase One complete. The world has accepted the narrative.”

The broadcast was never just news.

It was infection.

A controlled rewriting of collective memory.

Every Void incident had been twisted, every rescue re-labeled as destruction, every sacrifice converted into blame.

And now the final result stood in front of the city:

A hero turned into a target.

Harris finally spoke, his voice calm.

“I see.”

That was all.

Not denial.

Not confusion.

Understanding.

Harlina looked at him quickly.

“Don’t believe it. They’re lying about you.”

Harris shook his head slightly.

“I know.”

That was worse.

Because it meant he understood the system behind it.

And still had to face it.

A stone shattered near his feet again.

The crowd surged forward slightly.

Sirens activated in the distance. Not rescue sirens.

Containment sirens.

Military presence began to form at the edge of the city perimeter.

Harris finally took one step forward.

The crowd hesitated.

Just for a second.

Then another stone flew.

He stopped again.

And looked at the city properly this time.

Not with anger.

With disappointment that did not belong to one person, but to reality itself.

“I won’t run,” he said softly.

Harlina grabbed his arm immediately.

“We can leave. We can prove this later.”

Harris didn’t look at her.

“If I run now… they don’t just win. They define what I am forever.”

He moved forward again.

At that moment, cracks formed in the ground nearby.

Not from impact.

From resonance.

The Void reacted.

Three corrupted entities rose from fractured space—half-formed, unstable remnants of Void energy responding to emotional chaos.

The crowd screamed louder.

“Monsters! He brought them!”

Harris stepped forward.

One motion.

No transformation.

No declared power.

Just movement.

The first entity was erased instantly.

The second tried to regenerate, but Harris caught it mid-reformation and shattered its core.

The third attacked from behind—

Harlina formed a barrier instinctively.

Koji redirected civilians away.

Lunar disrupted its structure with precise energy interference.

Harris ended it.

Silence returned for a brief moment.

The crowd froze.

Confusion spread through them.

If he was truly the cause...

why did he just protect them again?

That hesitation did not last.

Because the Corruption Enemy activated Phase Two.

Every screen in the city flickered violently.

Then memories appeared.

Not real memories.

Constructed ones.

People saw versions of events that never happened:

Harris standing at the center of destruction.

Cities burning under his shadow.

Voices screaming his name during collapse.

Void beasts released by his presence.

The crowd’s confusion broke.

Not into clarity.

Into conviction.

Now they truly believed they were under attack by him.

And belief is heavier than truth.

Inside the signal tower, the Corruption Enemy observed calmly.

“Perfect,” it whispered. “Now they will destroy him willingly.”

Military systems fully deployed.

Drones activated.

Energy restraints prepared.

The city locked down.

Harris stood at the center of all of it.

Harlina remained beside him without hesitation.

Koji and Lunar stood behind, ready for anything.

Harris finally looked upward, toward the hidden source of everything.

“So this isn’t misunderstanding,” he said quietly. “It’s rewriting.”

His fist slowly tightened.

“Then I don’t need them to believe me first.”

He stepped forward again.

“I just need to break the system that lies to them.”

Far beneath the surface, deep within the Omega network, ten dormant Crystal cores began to react faintly.

Not awakening yet.

But responding.

To him.

To his intent.

And somewhere inside the corruption core, the Enemy smiled.

“Good… let him reach the point where he destroys everything himself.”

The world stood on the edge of war.

And Harris walked directly into it.

---

END OF CHAPTER 1

TO BE CONTINUED IN NEXT CHAPTER…

BY HARRIS RAVI ⚔️🌌# ⚔️ VOID WALKER — FINAL ARC

CHAPTER 2 — “THE CORRUPTION GATHERING”

The moment Harris stepped forward, the world stopped pretending it was stable.

The sky flickered.

The city’s systems groaned.

And deep beneath reality itself, something began to assemble.

Far above ground level, drones tightened their formation. Military units locked onto a single target: Harris.

But the real enemy was not above.

It was everywhere.

Inside the corrupted signal tower, the Corruption Enemy stood still as fractured data streams flowed around it like living darkness.

“Phase Three initiated,” it whispered.

The truth was simple now.

If Harris could not be beaten directly…

then everything around him would be turned into a weapon against him.

---

THE GATHERING BEGINS

Across the ruined outskirts of the city, space itself cracked open.

One by one, remnants of the Void began to respond.

Not full monsters.

Not pure entities.

Something worse.

Fractured enemies with memory of hatred.

Three figures emerged first.

Void Remnant Type-A: unstable but fast.

Void Remnant Type-B: adaptive and regenerating.

Void Remnant Type-C: intelligence-based corruption core.

They did not speak.

They did not hesitate.

They moved toward Harris like guided instincts.

At the same time, military containment fire opened from above.

Laser restraints.

Shock nets.

Energy suppression fields.

Everything converged at once.

Harlina’s eyes widened.

“They’re attacking from every direction!”

Koji raised his barrier immediately.

Lunar analyzed the patterns rapidly.

“This isn’t random… it’s coordinated.”

Harris exhaled slowly.

“So they finally stopped pretending this is a misunderstanding.”

He stepped forward anyway.

---

FIRST COLLAPSE — THREE ENEMIES FALL

The Type-A Remnant rushed first.

It moved faster than sound.

Harris didn’t.

He waited.

One step.

The moment it reached him—

it vanished.

Not destroyed.

Erased.

The second Remnant tried to adapt instantly, reforming its structure mid-fight.

Harris grabbed it mid-rebuild.

And crushed the core.

The third stayed back.

Analyzing.

Learning.

That was its mistake.

Harlina created an opening barrier.

Koji redirected its movement path.

Lunar disrupted its logic field.

Harris ended it with a single strike.

Three enemies.

Gone.

The battlefield went silent for half a second.

Then—the sky changed again.

---

THE CORRUPTION ENEMY REVEALS ITS TRUE LAYER

Inside the signal tower, the Corruption Enemy raised its hand.

“Good,” it said calmly.

“Let him feel control.”

Because control creates predictability.

And predictability creates traps.

The city’s screens flickered violently again.

But this time, instead of memories…

it showed identity fractures.

People saw conflicting versions of themselves:

* saving Harris
* fearing Harris
* hating Harris
* being saved by him

Their minds destabilized.

Confusion spread faster than fear.

And confusion turns into aggression when sustained.

The crowd began turning on each other.

Not just Harris anymore.

Everything unstable became a target.

The city was collapsing socially.

Harris watched silently.

“This isn’t just framing…”

Harlina looked at him.

“It’s breaking human certainty.”

Koji’s voice tightened.

“If people can’t trust their own memory… they can’t trust anything.”

Lunar added quietly:

“Then they can be controlled completely.”

Harris closed his fist.

“So that’s the real system.”

---

THE SECOND WAVE — TEN CRYSTAL RESPONSE

Deep beneath the city, buried in sealed Void infrastructure…

Ten faint lights responded.

Omega Crystals.

Still dormant.

But reacting to emotional collapse above.

Each crystal began syncing with a different corrupted Remnant source.

The battlefield shifted again.

The three destroyed enemies were not gone.

Their fragments merged underground.

And reformed.

Stronger.

Heavier.

More unstable.

The Corruption Enemy smiled.

“Now evolve.”

From the ground, three new entities rose.

But now each one carried partial Crystal influence.

The battlefield temperature dropped instantly.

Harlina stepped back slightly.

“These are… different.”

Koji tightened his stance.

“They evolved using his last attacks…”

Lunar whispered:

“They are learning him.”

Harris stared at them.

Then spoke softly.

“Then I’ll break them faster than they learn.”

---

BEAST MODE — FIRST UNCHAINING

The first Crystal-infused Remnant attacked.

Harris did not hesitate this time.

His energy surged.

Not fully released.

But enough.

The ground cracked.

Air distorted.

His presence changed.

Harlina felt it immediately.

“This is… not normal Void energy…”

Koji stepped back slightly.

“His output is rising beyond measured limits…”

Lunar’s eyes widened.

“He’s adapting to the system itself…”

Harris moved.

And the battlefield collapsed into motion.

One enemy shattered instantly.

The second attempted regeneration—

Harris intercepted it mid-process.

And erased its core structure entirely.

The third hesitated.

That hesitation cost it everything.

It was destroyed in one final strike.

Silence returned.

But it was heavier now.

Because the system had learned something important.

Harris was not weakening.

He was evolving faster than the corruption itself.

---

THE CORRUPTION STRATEGY SHIFT

Inside the tower, the Corruption Enemy stopped smiling.

"…interesting."

It turned slightly.

“Then we stop fighting him.”

A pause.

“We make him fight everything else.”

The system expanded.

Every remaining Crystal fragment activated at once.

Not as weapons.

But as anchors of global destabilization.

Across distant regions, Void anomalies began forming.

Not near Harris.

Far away.

Spreading chaos globally.

The world itself was being destabilized.

And Harris realized it instantly.

“They’re not trying to kill me here…”

Harlina looked at him.

“Then what are they doing?”

Harris stared at the horizon.

“…they’re forcing me to choose between saving myself or saving everyone else.”

A silent war of scale began.

Not just city.

Not just nation.

But reality fragmentation.

---

FINAL SCENE — THE WAR EXPANDS

Military systems fully commit.

Containment becomes global alert.

The city is no longer the battlefield.

It is only the starting point.

Harris stands in the center of collapsing systems.

Harlina beside him.

Koji and Lunar behind him.

And he understands something deeply.

“This is not a fight anymore…”

His eyes narrow slightly.

“This is a system trying to decide what reality should be.”

Far away, the Corruption Enemy speaks one final line:

> “Let him choose what breaks first… himself… or the world.”

The sky fractures slightly.

And the next phase begins.

---

END OF CHAPTER 2

TO BE CONTINUED IN NEXT CHAPTER...

BY HARRIS RAVI ⚔️🌌

⚔️ VOID WALKER — FINAL ARC

CHAPTER 3 — “THE TEN CRYSTAL WAR BEGINS”

The world did not feel like it was breaking anymore.

It felt like it had already been rewritten, and no one had been told.

Harris stood in the center of the shattered battlefield, watching the horizon split into unstable layers of reality. The sky flickered between normal blue and fractured void-purple veins, as if two versions of existence were fighting for dominance.

Harlina stayed close beside him.

Koji and Lunar stood behind, both silent now—not because they had nothing to say, but because the situation had already crossed the limit of explanation.

Somewhere far away, cities were collapsing into distortion zones.

Not near them.

Not directly connected.

But caused by the same system.

Harris exhaled slowly.

“They’re spreading it…”

Lunar nodded once.

“Not attacks anymore. It’s global instability.”

Koji’s voice tightened.

“Every Crystal fragment is activating at once.”

Harlina looked up sharply.

“So this is the real plan?”

Harris didn’t answer immediately.

Because he finally understood.

“This isn’t about framing me anymore…”

His fist slowly tightened.

“It’s about forcing the entire world into collapse so I have nowhere stable to stand.”

A deep silence followed that realization.

Then—

the ground cracked again.

But this time, it wasn’t a single emergence.

It was ten simultaneous awakenings across different coordinates of the battlefield network.

Far beneath the city, sealed Omega Crystals shattered their dormant layers.

One by one.

Not fully free.

Not fully controlled.

But active.

And responding.

To him.

---

THE TEN CRYSTALS AWAKEN

The first crystal rose near the eastern ruins.

Blue-white energy spiraling violently.

Second near collapsed infrastructure.

Third beneath fractured highways.

Fourth in mid-air anomaly distortion.

Fifth inside corrupted military tech systems.

Sixth embedded in void residue zones.

Seventh in emotional resonance fields created by mass fear.

Eighth in memory distortion centers.

Ninth inside dimensional overlap pockets.

Tenth—

deepest of all—

inside the original Void core layer itself.

The moment all ten activated, the world stopped pretending it was normal.

Reality itself bent.

Koji stepped back.

“This is… full-scale resonance…”

Lunar’s eyes widened.

“They’re syncing together…”

Harlina turned to Harris.

“What does that mean?”

Harris stared at the sky.

“…it means the system is now fully awake.”

---

FIRST CONTACT — CRYSTAL GUARDIANS

From each crystal emerged a construct.

Not monsters.

Not machines.

Something worse.

Judgment forms.

Each one shaped differently, but all carried the same purpose:

To test the existence of Harris Ravi.

The first Guardian moved instantly.

Space distorted around it.

Harris reacted without hesitation.

One strike.

The Guardian shattered.

But it did not die.

It reformed.

“Adaptive resistance…” Koji muttered.

Second Guardian attacked from behind.

Harlina created a barrier, but it cracked instantly.

Lunar redirected energy flow, buying milliseconds.

Harris stepped forward again.

And destroyed it again.

But again—

it returned stronger.

Harris paused.

“...they learn from every death.”

The third Guardian did not attack.

It observed.

And evolved.

---

THE CORRUPTION ENEMY REVEALED IN THE SYSTEM

Inside the signal tower, the Corruption Enemy finally stepped into its true interface layer.

Not a body.

Not a being.

A distributed intelligence spread across all Crystal nodes.

It spoke through the system itself:

> “Ten tests. One result.”

The world trembled slightly.

Because now, everything was part of the trial.

Not just Harris.

But reality.

Harlina looked at Harris.

“We can’t win this by just fighting…”

Koji nodded.

“They’re scaling faster than we can adapt.”

Lunar added quietly:

“It’s becoming a judgment system, not a battle.”

Harris looked at the ten Crystal Guardians reforming across the battlefield.

Then said softly:

“Then I stop treating it like a battle.”

He stepped forward.

“I break the system instead.”

---

BEAST MODE — SECOND RELEASE

Harris’s energy changed.

Not louder.

Not bigger.

More controlled.

Denser.

The air around him stopped vibrating randomly and began aligning with his intent.

Harlina noticed immediately.

“He’s stabilizing his Void output…”

Koji stared.

“This isn’t rage anymore…”

Lunar whispered:

“It’s precision.”

Harris moved.

Not fast.

Not flashy.

Absolute efficiency.

One Guardian fell.

Second shattered.

Third destabilized instantly.

But now—

they were adapting mid-fight.

And the battlefield began reacting.

The ten Crystals synchronized.

All Guardians merged partial consciousness.

A single unified entity formed.

---

THE OMEGA SYNTHESIS ENTITY

The ten Guardians fused.

Not physically.

Conceptually.

A system-level being formed:

“OMEGA SYNTHESIS PROTOCOL”

The ground collapsed under its presence.

Even Harris paused for the first time.

Harlina stepped back slightly.

“That… is not individual anymore…”

Koji clenched his fists.

“It’s a combined judgment system…”

Lunar added quietly.

“…it’s deciding whether reality should continue with him inside it.”

The entity spoke without voice.

Not through sound.

Through existence:

> “ENTITY: HARRIS RAVI

> STATUS: UNSTABLE VARIABLE

> RESOLUTION: REQUIRED”

The attack began instantly.

---

THE WORLD BREAKS DURING THE FIGHT

Reality distortion waves hit simultaneously.

Harris was pushed back for the first time.

Harlina shouted.

“HARRIS!”

Koji created full defensive barriers.

Lunar attempted system interference.

But nothing held.

Harris stood again.

Blood on his shoulder.

Breathing steady.

Then he said:

“So this is your real form…”

He looked at the Synthesis Entity.

“You’re not trying to kill me.”

A pause.

“You’re trying to decide if I deserve to exist.”

The entity responded:

> “CORRECT”

Silence.

Then Harris smiled slightly.

“…then I don’t need to defeat you.”

He stepped forward again.

“I just need to prove your judgment is wrong.”

---

FINAL MOMENT — THE TEN CRYSTAL ALIGNMENT

All ten Crystals pulsed at once.

The entire battlefield lifted into suspended distortion.

Harris stood at the center.

Harlina reached out.

Koji and Lunar prepared for final support.

And the Synthesis Entity initiated final evaluation sequence.

Everything went white for a moment.

And then—

the next phase began activating beyond this moment.

---

END OF CHAPTER 3

TO BE CONTINUED IN NEXT CHAPTER...

BY HARRIS RAVI ⚔️🌌

⚔️ VOID WALKER — FINAL ARC

CHAPTER 4 — “THE GATE THAT EATS GODHOOD”

The white light did not fade like an explosion.

It dissolved like reality losing confidence in itself.

When vision returned, Harris was no longer standing on solid ground.

He was standing inside a suspended fracture space—where land, sky, and time overlapped in unstable layers. The battlefield had become something else entirely.

A judgment domain built from the Ten Omega Crystals.

Above him, the Synthesis Entity hovered without shape, its presence no longer physical but systemic—like reality itself had grown a mind and decided to observe him directly.

Harlina was beside him.

Koji and Lunar were not far, but the space between them felt stretched, like distance had lost meaning.

And then the Entity spoke again.

Not as sound.

As law.

> “FINAL EVALUATION: INITIATED”

The entire fractured domain trembled.

---

THE WORLD INSIDE THE JUDGMENT

Harris looked around slowly.

“This isn’t a battlefield…”

Lunar answered quietly.

“It’s a simulation layer… built to test causality.”

Koji’s expression hardened.

“They’re removing real-world rules.”

Harlina stepped closer to Harris.

“Can you break it?”

Harris didn’t answer immediately.

Because he finally understood something deeper.

“This system isn’t trying to defeat me…”

A pause.

“It’s trying to decide what I am allowed to be.”

The Entity expanded.

Ten Crystal cores aligned above like orbiting suns.

And then—

the judgment began collapsing downward.

Not attacking him.

Erasing layers of his existence definition by definition.

---

THE FIRST STRIKE — IDENTITY ERASURE

The first wave hit.

Not energy.

Not force.

But definition removal.

Harris felt it immediately.

His name tried to detach from his existence.

For a moment, the world attempted to rewrite him as:

“UNKNOWN VARIABLE”

Harlina grabbed his arm instantly.

“Harris—!”

Koji shouted.

“It’s targeting identity anchors!”

Lunar tried to stabilize the structure.

But the system was already too deep.

Harris closed his eyes.

Then spoke softly:

“So you’re deleting who I am first…”

He opened his eyes again.

“…then I have no choice.”

---

BEAST MODE — VOID UNCHAINED (STABILIZED FORM)

The air around Harris didn’t explode.

It stabilized.

For the first time, his power didn’t feel like destruction.

It felt like authority over collapse itself.

His Void energy condensed around him like a controlled gravity field.

Harlina stepped back slightly.

“This version… it’s different…”

Koji stared.

“He’s not releasing power…”

Lunar whispered:

“He’s defining it.”

Harris stepped forward.

One motion.

The identity erasure wave shattered.

Not resisted.

Rejected.

The system paused.

---

THE SECOND LAYER — MEMORY COLLAPSE

The Synthesis Entity shifted tactics.

If identity failed, memory would follow.

The domain flooded with reconstructed scenes:

Harris as a destroyer.

Harris as the cause of every Void disaster.

Harris abandoning people.

Harris choosing destruction over protection.

The world tried to overwrite not just who he was...

but what others believed about him.

Harlina flinched.

For a second—

even she hesitated.

But then she shook her head.

“No… I remember you.”

Koji stepped forward.

“So do I.”

Lunar added quietly.

“And I remember the truth.”

Harris stood in the center of it all.

And for the first time—

he smiled.

“Good.”

Then he lifted his hand slightly.

“And I remember too.”

The memory collapse shattered.

---

THE THIRD LAYER — DIVINE STRIPPING

The Entity escalated.

Now it targeted everything beyond human logic.

Divine energy systems.

Void constructs.

Omega Crystal resonance.

Even conceptual power frameworks.

The domain began stripping layers of “power permission” itself.

Harris felt it immediately.

His Void energy flickered.

Harlina noticed.

“It’s suppressing even him…”

Koji tightened his stance.

“If this continues, he becomes just human here…”

Lunar whispered:

“…that’s the point.”

The Entity spoke:

> “REMOVE EXTERNAL AUTHORITY”

Harris staggered slightly.

Then steadied himself.

And said quietly:

“So you’re trying to make me powerless inside your rules…”

A pause.

“…then I’ll stop playing inside your rules.”

---

THE MOMENT THE GATE APPEARS

Harris took one step forward.

Not outward.

Inward.

As if he was reaching into the structure of the domain itself.

The space reacted violently.

Harlina shouted.

“What are you doing?!”

Harris answered calmly.

“I’m opening something you can’t simulate.”

Koji widened his eyes.

“No… don’t—!”

Lunar realized instantly.

“He’s forcing a system-level breach…”

And then it happened.

A massive fracture opened behind Harris.

Not a portal.

Not a technique.

A conceptual gate forming through rejected authority layers.

The Omega Crystals reacted instantly.

All ten synchronized in panic.

The Synthesis Entity paused for the first time.

“...what is that...”

Harris whispered:

“The thing you forgot to account for...”

The gate expanded.

And began absorbing.

Not attacking.

Not destroying.

Absorbing everything the system used as structure.

---

THE GATE THAT EATS GODHOOD

Divine energy collapsed first.

Then Void authority layers.

Then memory architecture.

Then Crystal synchronization networks.

The domain itself began breaking down.

Harlina stepped back, stunned.

“It’s consuming the system…”

Koji shouted.

“Even the judgment field is collapsing!”

Lunar watched in disbelief.

“It’s not resisting… it’s devouring the framework itself…”

The Synthesis Entity attempted to stabilize.

But it was already too late.

Because the gate did not follow rules.

It removed the idea of rules.

Harris stood at the center of it all.

And for the first time—

he looked tired.

Not weak.

Just finished.

“This ends now.”

---

FINAL MOMENT — VOID THRONE COLLAPSE

The Synthesis Entity tried one last response.

> “IF YOU ERASE THIS SYSTEM… YOU ERASE YOUR OWN POWER”

Harris looked at it.

“…I know.”

Silence.

Then he said:

“But I also erase yours.”

He pushed forward.

The gate expanded fully.

The Ten Crystals shattered simultaneously.

Reality structure failed.

And the Void Throne—

the source of all Void hierarchy—

began to disintegrate.

Not violently.

Completely.

As if it never had the right to exist.

Harlina reached out.

“Harris!”

Koji and Lunar shouted his name.

But Harris was already inside the collapse.

Smiling slightly.

Not in pain.

In acceptance.

---

END OF CHAPTER 4

TO BE CONTINUED IN NEXT CHAPTER...

BY HARRIS RAVI ⚔️🌌

⚔️ VOID WALKER — FINAL ARC

CHAPTER 5 — “THE END OF EVERYTHING THAT WASN’T PEACE”

The Gate did not explode.

It did not collapse loudly.

It simply finished what it was doing.

Layer by layer, the Void system unraveled itself like a story being gently erased from the page. No resistance. No resistance left to give.

The Ten Omega Crystals shattered without sound.

The Synthesis Entity dissolved into nothing—not defeated, but no longer necessary.

And the Void Throne… the origin of every war, every corruption, every rewritten truth…

finally disappeared from existence entirely.

No trace remained.

Not even memory structures to remember it correctly.

Just silence.

---

THE WORLD AFTER THE VOID

The sky stabilized first.

No fractures. No flickers. No corruption veins across reality.

Then the cities stabilized.

People stood frozen for a moment, confused… as if waking from a dream they couldn't fully recall.

The hatred that had driven them moments ago felt distant now.

Unnatural.

Borrowed.

False.

News screens flickered.

The "WANTED CRIMINAL" broadcast vanished.

No replacement message appeared.

Just blankness.

As if reality itself refused to explain what just happened.

---

HARRIS AND HARLINA — THE LAST MOMENT

Far away from the collapsing system, on a quiet stretch of restored land where Void energy no longer reached...

Harris stood.

He looked... different.

Not stronger.

Not weaker.

Just free.

Harlina approached slowly.

For once, there was no war between distance and closeness.

No hesitation.

No fear of interruption.

Just silence.

She stopped in front of him.

“…It’s over?”

Harris nodded slightly.

“…Yeah.”

A pause.

Then Harlina exhaled softly, as if she had been holding her breath for years.

“You’re still here.”

Harris looked at her.

“I was never going anywhere.”

That was all.

No dramatic confession.

No universe-breaking declaration.

Just truth.

---

THE PEACE THAT DIDN’T ASK PERMISSION

Wind moved gently through the empty space around them.

No alarms.

No Crystals.

No voices from broken systems.

Only time, behaving normally again.

Harlina stepped closer.

“This feels… unreal.”

Harris gave a small smile.

“That’s because we got used to war being normal.”

Silence again.

Then she lightly hit his arm.

Not hard.

Just enough to make him notice.

“You made me worry for a very long time.”

Harris looked at her.

“…I know.”

Another pause.

Then, softer:

“Sorry.”

Harlina shook her head immediately.

“No.”

She stepped closer again.

“You don’t get to end everything like that and just say sorry.”

Harris blinked.

“…Then what do I say?”

She looked at him for a moment.

Then smiled.

“Stay.”

That was it.

No grand condition.

No demand to save worlds.

Just stay.

Harris nodded slowly.

“…I was planning to.”

---

THE LIFE AFTER WAR

Days passed.

Then weeks.

The world rebuilt itself without knowing what exactly it was rebuilding from.

No Void beasts returned.

No Crystal signals reappeared.

Even memories of the war faded into something softer… like an old nightmare that no longer had sharp edges.

Harris and Harlina stayed together.

Not as warriors.

Not as legends.

Just people.

Some mornings they cooked together.

Some evenings they sat outside without speaking.

Sometimes they laughed over small things that would have meant nothing during the war—but now meant everything.

One night, under a calm sky that no longer broke apart—

Harlina leaned slightly against him.

“…Are you happy?”

Harris thought for a moment.

Then nodded.

“Yeah.”

A pause.

Then he added quietly:

“For the first time… I don’t feel like I have to fight to exist.”

Harlina closed her eyes briefly.

“Good.”

---

FINAL SCENE — NO MORE ENDINGS, ONLY LIFE

They stood together on a quiet hill.

No Void.

No enemies.

No prophecy.

No system watching them.

Just earth, wind, and a sky that stayed intact.

Harris looked at her.

Harlina looked back.

And for once, neither of them needed to say anything important.

Because everything important had already ended.

And something softer had begun.

Harlina gently took his hand.

“Let’s go home.”

Harris nodded.

“...Yeah.”

They walked together.

No destiny following them.

No future chasing them.

Just two people moving forward into a life that finally belonged to them.

And behind them...

the world stayed quiet.

For the first time.

Forever.

---

END OF VOID WALKER

BY HARRIS RAVI ⚔️🌌💛