
VOID WALKER
SEASON 4
THE END OF THE ECLIPSE
I WILL PROTECT
THIS WORLD...
EVEN IF IT
DESTROYS ME.
A WAR ENDED. A LEGEND FADES.
BUT HOPE WILL NEVER DIE.
THANK YOU FOR BELIEVING IN THE VOID WALKER.
TO BE CONTINUED IN SEASON 5

VOID WALKER SEASON 4

CHAPTER 1: THE LAST HOPE

The crimson sky shattered endlessly as countless monsters descended together, covering worlds beneath darkness and unstoppable destruction everywhere.

Harris Ravi stood completely alone before catastrophe, carrying humanity's final hope against horrors beyond imagination and reason.

Millions watched silently from shelters, trembling fearfully while prayers echoed across galaxies, desperately seeking salvation from extinction.

The Crimson Eclipse opened completely overhead, releasing monstrous armies whose terrifying presence distorted reality and corrupted existence itself.

Without hesitation, Harris stepped forward confidently, gripping divine weapons tightly while staring directly into approaching endless nightmares today.

His glowing eyes reflected determination alone, refusing surrender despite overwhelming odds threatening every life across the cosmos.

The first wave attacked violently together, roaring ferociously while shaking dimensions with unimaginable power capable of destroying civilizations.

Harris raised one hand calmly, activating Infinite Destruction with absolute precision beyond mortal comprehension and understanding completely.

Invisible void energy expanded instantly, swallowing countless enemies simultaneously before erasing them completely from reality forever afterward.

Entire battlefields became silent suddenly as millions vanished, leaving only drifting crimson particles beneath darkened heavens above.

Cheers erupted throughout surviving worlds as people witnessed impossible miracles performed by their protector once again today.

However, several monstrous entities remained standing firmly, resisting domain annihilation through terrifying powers never encountered before.

Harris narrowed his eyes immediately, realizing stronger threats had finally emerged from depths of the Crimson Eclipse.

Drawing divine weapons swiftly, he launched forward fearlessly while unleashing devastating attacks across shattered landscapes everywhere instantly.

Golden spears pierced gigantic creatures repeatedly while celestial blades sliced through armored monstrosities with overwhelming force.

Explosions illuminated the battlefield continuously, creating dazzling storms of destruction visible throughout countless distant galaxies tonight.

The surviving monsters counterattacked aggressively, striking Harris repeatedly with attacks powerful enough to annihilate entire dimensions instantly.

Blood scattered across broken ground as devastating impacts shattered armor and inflicted severe injuries upon him.

Still smiling fearlessly, Harris continued fighting relentlessly, refusing retreat despite mounting wounds weakening his exhausted body.

Hours passed endlessly while battle intensified further, transforming worlds into ruins beneath unstoppable cosmic violence everywhere.

Every victory demanded greater sacrifices, pushing Harris beyond limits previously considered impossible by all observers.

His breathing grew heavier gradually while pain spread mercilessly throughout every damaged part of his body.

Yet he remembered friends waiting safely, strengthening determination whenever exhaustion threatened overwhelming his fading consciousness completely.

Suddenly, the heavens turned completely red, signaling arrival of something vastly more terrifying than before today.

Silence consumed existence instantly as every surviving monster knelt respectfully toward a descending crimson figure.

A massive throne emerged from darkness itself, carried by unimaginable energy capable of crushing realities effortlessly.

Upon that throne sat Omega, supreme ruler of Crimson Eclipse, whose presence inspired despair across existence.

Even stars seemed dimmer suddenly, unable enduring pressure generated naturally from Omega's terrifying overwhelming power.

Omega opened his eyes slowly, causing entire dimensions trembling violently under unimaginable authority and dominance.

His voice echoed everywhere simultaneously, declaring humanity's resistance meaningless before inevitable cosmic extinction approaching rapidly.

For the first time, countless survivors felt genuine hopelessness consuming hearts despite previous victories achieved recently.

Harris wiped blood away quietly and stepped forward again, refusing submission before ultimate darkness threatening everyone.

Omega smiled coldly before launching devastating attacks instantly, overwhelming battlefields with power surpassing comprehension entirely.

Each strike shattered mountains effortlessly while tearing holes through reality itself across multiple dimensions simultaneously.

Harris defended bravely using divine weapons repeatedly, yet every collision pushed him backward painfully and relentlessly.

Fresh wounds covered his body continuously, staining armor crimson while strength diminished rapidly during combat.

Still refusing surrender, Harris unleashed greater power levels, shaking existence with extraordinary determination and courage.

Void energy erupted everywhere violently as Infinite Destruction expanded further than ever before witnessed anywhere.

Entire universes trembled under overwhelming pressure generated by Harris exceeding previously impossible limitations during battle.

The remaining killers entered combat suddenly, surrounding him together while attacking mercilessly from every direction.

These assassins were far stronger now, possessing terrifying abilities evolved specifically for killing Void Walker.

Despite extraordinary skill, Harris struggled constantly against coordinated assaults delivered without hesitation or mercy whatsoever.

His body began collapsing internally, suffering irreversible damage caused by excessive power usage throughout battle.

Koji noticed immediately from afar, horror spreading across his face while witnessing Harris deteriorating rapidly.

Izuku clenched fists desperately, understanding clearly that Harris was sacrificing everything protecting existence itself today.

Across communication networks, millions watched helplessly while tears streamed endlessly from sorrowful eyes everywhere.

Harris could barely breathe normally anymore, every breath feeling heavier than mountains crushing lungs painfully.

Yet strangely, he smiled happily throughout suffering, knowing loved ones remained alive because of sacrifices.

The villains overlooked these warning signs completely, focusing solely upon eliminating their greatest enemy forever.

Omega commanded another assault immediately, forcing all killers attacking together with unstoppable murderous intentions simultaneously.

The battlefield exploded repeatedly as unimaginable forces collided violently beneath crimson heavens and shattered stars.

Then Harris screamed fiercely, releasing power reaching one hundred fifty percent beyond natural limitations entirely.

Reality fractured visibly around him while infinite energy erupted outward like cosmic storms unleashed freely.

Even Omega appeared surprised briefly, witnessing impossible strength emerging from someone already dying slowly.

The assassins were overwhelmed instantly, thrown backward violently by unstoppable waves of divine destruction everywhere.

When dust settled finally, countless threats had vanished forever, leaving only six figures standing.

One exhausted hero remained alone while five enemies watched cautiously from opposite battlefield positions silently.

Harris stood unsteadily surrounded by destruction, blood covering armor while body trembled uncontrollably from exhaustion.

Every step became difficult now, yet determination continued burning brighter than collapsing physical limitations.

Far away, people cried openly while witnessing their protector suffering unimaginable pain for everyone.

Children prayed desperately for miracles while adults struggled accepting harsh realities unfolding before them.

Among everyone watching, Harlina suffered most painfully, unable enduring sight of Harris collapsing gradually.

Ignoring warnings completely, she walked away alone and cried uncontrollably beneath silent starlit skies.

Memories flooded endlessly through her mind, reminding her of every smile shared together before.

Her hands trembled helplessly while tears fell endlessly, carrying emotions never spoken aloud directly.

She wanted desperately reaching him immediately, yet understood interfering could endanger everything precious remaining.

Back upon battlefield, Harris could barely remain standing as life force weakened continuously every moment.

Omega observed carefully now, realizing victory approached despite extraordinary resistance delaying inevitable outcomes significantly.

The four killers prepared final attacks together while Omega gathered catastrophic energy beyond imagination itself.

Dark crimson lightning engulfed heavens completely, creating ultimate technique capable erasing all existence instantly.

Every survivor sensed approaching doom immediately, understanding nobody could survive Omega's final devastating attack.

Harris lifted his head slowly and smiled once more despite unbearable suffering consuming him.

He looked toward distant stars lovingly, grateful friends remained alive because of choices made.

The cosmos fell completely silent while Omega prepared releasing ultimate destruction upon everyone simultaneously.

And standing alone before impossible darkness, Harris Ravi became humanity's final unwavering hope forever.

TO BE CONTINUED...

VOID WALKER SEASON 4

CHAPTER 2: VOICE OF THE VOID QUEEN (EXTENDED 10/10 VERSION)

Omega launched the Crimson Destruction directly toward the final safety barrier protecting remaining civilizations across fractured cosmos.

The attack twisted space itself, turning reality into collapsing red spirals of extinction aimed at innocent worlds beyond.

Harris Ravi sensed it instantly and moved faster than thought, crossing impossible distance before the strike landed anywhere.

He intercepted the attack with his own body, absorbing catastrophic destruction energy directly into his collapsing physical form.

The impact shattered his internal structure instantly, bones cracking like dying stars under infinite gravitational pressure of Omega.

“Gah… I won’t… let it pass…” Harris whispered, forcing himself to remain standing through sheer willpower alone.

Omega tilted his head slightly, amused by resistance, as if watching insect refusing inevitable cosmic extinction fate.

The absorbed energy burned inside Harris uncontrollably, rewriting his cells into unstable void fragments breaking his existence apart.

The four elite killers immediately rushed forward, sensing opportunity to erase Void Walker during his moment of weakness.

Koji’s voice echoed through battlefield communication channels, trembling violently as he witnessed Harris taking fatal-level damage directly.

“He took that attack… with his body?! He’s going to die if this continues!” Koji shouted desperately.

Izuku clenched his fists so tightly blood leaked, eyes shaking as hope itself began collapsing around him.

Harris suddenly exhaled sharply, then released absorbed Crimson energy outward in controlled void burst across entire battlefield.

The explosion of redirected destruction energy overwhelmed killers instantly, throwing all four into unconsciousness across shattered dimensional terrain.

Silence followed briefly, but it was the silence before absolute one-on-one apocalypse between hope and destruction.

Only two remained standing now, surrounded by ruins of collapsing worlds and fractured timelines bleeding across space.

Omega slowly rose from his throne, walking forward through air itself as reality bent beneath each step.

“You are still standing… even after becoming half-dead,” Omega said calmly, voice echoing across broken dimensions.

Harris wiped blood from his lips, laughing weakly despite pain consuming every nerve in his collapsing body.

“I don’t… get to fall yet…” he replied, forcing one step forward despite collapsing knees and vision fading.

Omega smiled faintly, raising his hand as gravitational pressure intensified, crushing entire landscapes beneath invisible cosmic authority.

The two clashed instantly, shockwave erasing mountains, oceans, and even time fragments across multiple destroyed dimensional layers.

Harris attacked desperately using divine weapons, each strike burning his remaining lifespan into pure combat instinct.

Omega countered effortlessly, predicting every movement as if rewriting probability itself before Harris could even act.

“You are predictable… yet entertaining,” Omega whispered, sending Harris crashing through dimensional rifts and broken planetary remains.

Harris struggled to rise again, coughing blood while dragging broken body through collapsing terrain toward standing position.

“I said… I don’t have time…” Harris growled, forcing himself upright with trembling unstable energy output.

Hours of prior battle pressure suddenly crushed him mentally, remembering he had already fought two entire days.

His body began rejecting existence itself, cells destabilizing while consciousness flickered between survival and complete collapse.

Omega prepared another strike, stronger than before, aimed at finishing Harris in a single annihilation moment.

Suddenly—

The entire battlefield trembled as Harlina's consciousness reactivated inside collapsing void mental space.

A mysterious voice echoed within her mind, ancient and sorrowful like dying universe speaking through fractured memory.

"Do you understand his pain… and his wish?"

Harlina gasped violently, eyes opening within mental darkness as tears formed instantly without physical reason.

"Who are you… why are you inside my mind?" she whispered, voice breaking with emotional instability.

The voice responded slowly, filled with regret spanning erased timelines and failed cosmic wars.

"I am the previous Void Queen… the one who failed to protect this cosmos from Crimson Eclipse."

Harlina froze completely, feeling overwhelming inheritance pressure collapsing inside her soul structure simultaneously.

"I tried to break the barrier once… but only Void Walker can authorize dimensional passage control," the voice continued.

Harlina screamed internally, seeing Harris collapsing through shared perception link, barely surviving Omega's overwhelming power.

“Then help him! He’s dying right now!” she cried desperately, voice echoing through mental void.

The voice remained silent for a moment, like something powerless observing inevitable destruction unfolding again.

“I cannot interfere physically… I am only remaining consciousness embedded within void inheritance memory system.”

That answer shattered Harlina emotionally, causing tears to fall across both physical and spiritual existence layers.

Harlina trembled violently, watching Harris fall again through broken perception, body unable to maintain stability anymore.

The voice then asked softly, almost gently, like final test of destiny.

“Would you accept my power… to protect this cosmos and its chosen Void Walker?”

Without hesitation, Harlina answered through broken sobs, voice filled with love and determination beyond fear.

“Yes… I will take everything… if it means saving Harris from dying alone here.”

A long silence followed, stretching across collapsed dimensions and fractured timelines holding breath of existence itself.

Then—

Light descended through sealed barrier above battlefield, breaking dimensional restrictions imposed by Crimson Eclipse authority field.

Reality split open violently as divine void energy poured directly into Harlina's consciousness and physical existence simultaneously.

Her body transformed instantly, rewriting identity structure into ancient sovereign form of Void Queen lineage.

Crown of void energy formed above her head, radiating authority capable of stabilizing collapsing universes instantly.

Her Divine Void Outfit materialized fully, wrapping her in cosmic armor built from forgotten existence fragments.

Across battlefield, even Omega paused briefly, sensing new authority emerging unexpectedly within resistance side.

Harlina opened barrier partially, allowing warriors to enter battlefield through controlled void passage system activation.

Koji arrived first instantly, landing violently into battlefield space, immediately engaging remaining unconscious killers.

"Stay down!" Koji roared, striking fallen enemies with desperate fury fueled by fear for Harris.

Omega watched Koji casually, amused by smaller resistance efforts unfolding beneath larger cosmic confrontation.

Harlina stepped forward, eyes glowing with void crown authority, tears still falling despite overwhelming transformation.

She raised her hand, summoning Void Crown fully, stabilizing reality fields surrounding collapsing battlefield zones.

“Harris… hold on just a little longer…” she whispered softly, voice shaking between queen authority and human emotion.

She then summoned Divine Void Outfit projection for Harris, sending healing void energy directly into his collapsing form.

Golden-black energy enveloped Harris instantly, repairing broken bones, stabilizing soul fragments, and restoring minimal consciousness return.

Harris gasped violently, eyes widening as pain lessened slightly, confusion mixing with sudden emotional relief.

“Harlina… what… what did you become…” he whispered weakly, unable to comprehend her transformation fully.

Harlina walked toward him slowly, then suddenly slapped him hard across the face with emotional force.

“Idiot… you think you can die before telling me anything? Before hearing anything I needed to say?!”

Harris froze completely, then tears streamed down his face uncontrollably, overwhelmed by relief and emotional release.

“I thought… I lost you…” he whispered, voice breaking completely under emotional collapse pressure.

Harlina grabbed his collar tightly, crying while laughing at same time, emotions breaking through divine authority layers.

“You don’t get to die alone… not while I’m still here standing beside you!”

Koji fought nearby, blocking killer counterattacks while shouting at both of them through battlefield chaos.

“Save your romance for after we survive this apocalypse!” Koji yelled while barely dodging lethal strike.

Even Izuku’s distant perception stabilized slightly, seeing Harris regain faint hope through Harlina’s intervention.

Omega slowly descended from throne fully now, stepping into battlefield with growing curiosity and excitement.

“So… the Void Queen returns through inheritance,” Omega said calmly, smiling for first time in battle.

Harlina turned toward him, crown shining brighter, voice steady despite tears still flowing down her face.

“I will not let you take him… not now… not ever again.”

Harris slowly rose beside her, stabilized by void healing energy and emotional determination merging into one existence.

His eyes reignited with full power, rage and love combining into unprecedented strength beyond previous limitations.

Omega raised his hand, preparing ultimate counterattack capable of erasing both resistance and hope simultaneously.

The battlefield trembled again, stars collapsing, dimensions cracking, destiny itself preparing for final phase of war.

And for the first time...

Hope did not stand alone anymore.

TO BE CONTINUED...

VOID WALKER SEASON 4

CHAPTER 3: THE END OF THE ECLIPSE

Harris and Harlina stood together beneath fading crimson heavens, facing Omega while shattered stars drifted across endless space.

Omega looked toward them both, then laughed loudly, his voice shaking dimensions and terrifying surviving enemies everywhere.

“Wonderful,” Omega declared happily, “the insects still possess courage despite witnessing absolute destruction repeatedly throughout existence.”

Harris stepped forward immediately, placing himself between Harlina and Omega without hesitation or uncertainty whatsoever.

“Harlina,” Harris said quietly, “promise me something before this battle reaches its unavoidable conclusion today.”

Harlina sensed seriousness instantly and frowned, already disliking whatever request Harris was preparing to make now.

“No,” she answered immediately, “because whatever you ask, I already know I will hate completely.”

Harris smiled weakly despite exhaustion and countless wounds still damaging his body beyond healing limits continuously.

“Promise me you will not enter this battle unless I die first,” Harris requested firmly.

Harlina stared at him silently, unable believing those words had actually left his mouth willingly.

“Absolutely not,” she replied instantly, anger appearing faster than fear inside her trembling heart completely.

“Harris, I became Void Queen specifically to help you survive this war and protect everyone together.”

“But I need certainty,” Harris answered softly, “because Omega only needs one mistake to destroy everything.”

Harlina clenched her fists tightly, refusing surrender while tears threatened forming once more within her eyes.

“I trust you,” Harris continued gently, “and because I trust you, I need this promise.”

Several painful seconds passed between them before Harlina finally lowered her head reluctantly and sadly.

“Fine,” she whispered quietly, “but I have one condition before making this promise officially today.”

Harris nodded slowly.

“I will help everyone else during this battle because I know you will win.”

Harris smiled warmly.

“Deal.”

They touched hands briefly before turning toward Omega once again beneath collapsing remnants of the Crimson Eclipse.

Omega watched silently before laughing again.

“How touching,” Omega mocked cruelly, “even now you waste precious time discussing emotions and promises.”

The battlefield exploded instantly.

Harris launched forward like a divine comet while Omega accelerated simultaneously through fractured dimensional pathways.

Their collision created shockwaves visible from distant galaxies and shook countless worlds still recovering from war.

Entire constellations trembled violently as the strongest battle in cosmic history finally began completely.

The fight moved into deep space instantly, leaving shattered realities behind while pursuing greater freedom for destruction.

Omega attacked first.

Thousands of crimson energy spears manifested simultaneously, piercing through dimensions while targeting Harris from every direction imaginable.

Harris countered immediately, summoning divine weapons and destroying every spear through overwhelming combat precision and experience.

The battlefield stretched across stars, planets, moons, and broken timelines unable surviving their unimaginable power output.

Every punch distorted gravity.

Every kick shattered dimensions.

Every clash created temporary universes before destroying them moments later through excessive force and energy.

Omega laughed continuously throughout combat, enjoying every second like child discovering favorite game unexpectedly today.

“Yes!” Omega shouted happily. “This is what battle should feel like! Magnificent! Glorious! Beautiful destruction everywhere!”

Meanwhile Harris remained completely serious.

His breathing grew heavier.

His wounds reopened repeatedly.

Yet his power continued increasing after every attack exchanged against Omega's overwhelming strength and skill.

Harris understood something terrifying.

The Crimson Eclipse was nearing its conclusion.

If Omega survived beyond the Eclipse itself, everything could become infinitely worse afterward.

“I have thirty minutes,” Harris thought quietly.

“Thirty minutes to end this forever.”

He pushed harder.

Beyond limits.

Beyond pain.

Beyond reason.

Omega noticed immediately.

“Oh?” Omega smiled. “You're becoming stronger despite dying. Fascinating adaptation, little Void Walker.”

Harris answered with action.

A devastating strike landed directly against Omega's chest, sending him across multiple dimensions instantly.

For the first time, Omega stopped smiling completely.

The battle intensified further.

Minutes passed.

Then more minutes.

Both warriors accumulated greater injuries while consuming unimaginable quantities of energy and life force continuously.

Even Harris's Divine Outfit struggled keeping pace with damage inflicted during relentless combat exchange sequences.

The healing slowed noticeably.

Harris noticed.

Omega noticed.

Everyone watching noticed.

Fear returned once more.

Far below, Harlina assisted wounded warriors while constantly watching the battle unfolding high above.

Every time Harris was struck, her heart felt like shattering again.

Every time he stood back up, hope returned briefly.

Koji watched silently beside her.

“He's pushing too hard,” Koji whispered.

“I know,” Harlina replied quietly.

“But he'll win.”

She said those words confidently.

Yet inside, fear consumed her relentlessly.

Back in space, only five minutes remained before Eclipse completion.

Then suddenly—

Omega stopped attacking.

Harris immediately sensed danger.

Omega spread both arms outward and smiled wider than ever before.

“It's time.”

A terrible feeling entered Harris's heart instantly.

“What are you doing?” Harris demanded.

Omega laughed.

“Surviving.”

Crimson energy erupted from Omega's body violently, spreading throughout reality in every possible direction simultaneously.

Harris's eyes widened.

“No…”

Omega continued laughing.

“You finally understand.”

His body began splitting.

Not dying.

Splitting.

One became two.

Two became four.

Four became eight.

Then ten separate entities emerged from original Omega, each carrying fragments of his power and consciousness.

Harris realized truth immediately.

Omega never intended simple victory.

Omega intended evolution.

Omega intended survival.

Omega intended becoming impossible to erase permanently.

“No!” Harris roared.

He drew back his strongest attack.

The Eternal Arrow.

Infinite energy gathered together, illuminating existence brighter than every star combined throughout creation itself.

The attack launched.

Reality screamed.

Time fractured.

The Eternal Arrow crossed space instantly toward Omega's dividing form before transformation completed entirely.

But it was too late.

The Crimson Eclipse ended.

The crimson sky vanished.

The transformation completed.

Ten fragments scattered across existence like seeds carried by endless cosmic winds forever afterward.

The Eternal Arrow destroyed only fading remnants left behind after division completed successfully.

Silence followed.

Omega was gone.

But not defeated.

Only scattered.

Only waiting.

Only evolving.

The war had ended.

Yet the future war had already begun.

Harris floated silently within space.

His mission had failed.

Omega survived.

Yet…

Below him—

People were smiling.

Children were laughing.

Families embraced one another.

Worlds celebrated survival.

Humanity lived.

The cosmos remained safe.

For now.

And seeing those smiles…

Harris smiled too.

Then his body collapsed completely.

The immense power he released finally consumed remaining strength keeping him conscious throughout battle.

Far below—

Harlina screamed.

“HARRIS!”

She launched forward instantly and caught him before impact could occur anywhere.

Holding him tightly, she felt his body colder than ever before.

“Don't die now,” she whispered desperately through uncontrollable tears.

“Please don't die now.”

Koji arrived immediately.

Then Izuku.

Then Lunar.

Together they carried Harris toward medical facilities prepared for emergencies long before battle concluded.

As Harris lost consciousness completely, one final miracle occurred unexpectedly.

The world began changing.

Destroyed cities returned.

Ruined forests recovered.

Oceans healed.

Mountains reformed.

Reality repaired itself.

Before collapsing, Harris had recreated the world entirely through remaining Void Walker authority.

The Crimson Eclipse disappeared forever.

The barrier vanished.

Peace returned.

Unknown to everyone else, Harris also transferred immortality throughout civilization and erased memory of Void Walker from humanity.

Only close friends retained knowledge.

Everyone else remembered nothing.

Only rumors remained.

Only legends remained.

Only mystery remained.

Months passed.

Harris never awakened.

Doctors remained confused.

Warriors recovered completely.

Injuries disappeared.

Lives returned normal.

Yet Harris remained asleep.

Day after day.

Week after week.

Month after month.

Harlina visited constantly.

Sometimes speaking.

Sometimes crying.

Sometimes simply sitting beside him quietly for entire nights.

One evening she held his hand gently.

“You promised we'd live peacefully afterward,” she whispered sadly.

“So stop sleeping and come back already.”

Unknown to everyone—

Harris was not dreaming.

His consciousness existed elsewhere.

Within endless void.

There, countless previous Void Walkers shared memories and discussions concerning Omega's survival and future dangers.

For months they searched answers together.

Then suddenly—

A mysterious force appeared.

It absorbed memories from previous Walkers before anyone could react properly.

An unfamiliar voice echoed.

“Find the Third Book.”

Then it disappeared instantly.

Harris opened his eyes.

A deep breath escaped his lungs.

He had returned.

Night covered the hospital peacefully.

Moonlight entered softly through windows.

Harris looked around quietly.

Harlina slept beside his bed, leaning awkwardly against nearby wall from exhaustion accumulated over months.

Koji slept in chair.

Izuku slept nearby.

Lunar slept too.

They had remained beside him all this time.

Harris smiled.

Then cried.

Not from pain.

Not from fear.

But gratitude.

Carefully, he lifted sleeping Harlina and placed her comfortably upon his bed without waking anyone.

Then he left quietly.

Outside—

The moon illuminated peaceful world he nearly died protecting repeatedly.

Harris stood silently beneath silver light, remembering mysterious voice and words concerning Third Book.

Morning arrived.

Chaos followed immediately.

Harris was missing.

Doctors panicked.

Nurses searched.

Koji nearly destroyed hospital doors searching desperately throughout entire building structure.

Izuku checked everywhere repeatedly.

Harlina was terrified.

“Harris!” she shouted.

“HARRIS!”

Tears returned instantly.

Fear returned instantly.

The nightmare seemed beginning again.

Meanwhile—

Harris stood peacefully inside Harlina's house preparing breakfast and coffee while humming happily to himself.

Several minutes later, he walked casually toward hospital carrying surprise preparations carefully and proudly.

Everyone spotted him simultaneously.

Silence filled surroundings.

Then—

Everyone started crying immediately.

Koji hugged him first.

Izuku nearly tackled him.

Lunar punched his shoulder before crying too.

Finally—

Harlina arrived.

Without warning—

She hugged him tightly.

Extremely tightly.

Painfully tightly.

“WHERE DID YOU GO?!” she shouted angrily through tears.

“We thought something happened again!”

Harris laughed softly.

“It's a surprise.”

He guided everyone toward Harlina's house.

Inside—

Decorations filled entire room.

Food covered tables.

A celebration waited.

Koji blinked repeatedly.

Confused.

Then Harris smiled.

“Happy Birthday, Koji.”

Silence lasted three seconds.

Then Koji cried harder than everyone else combined.

The entire group laughed.

For first time in months—

No war.

No monsters.

No death.

No fear.

Only friendship.

Only family.

Only peace.

And somewhere far away—

Ten fragments of Omega slowly awakened separately across existence.

Waiting.

Growing.

Planning.

The next story had already begun.

But for today—

The heroes smiled beneath peaceful skies.

END OF SEASON 4

TO BE CONTINUED IN SEASON 5

BY HARRIS RAVI ⚔️ 🌙 📖 🥷