VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 1: “PEACE THAT WAS NEVER MEANT TO STAY”

The war had ended… but nothing inside Harris understood what “ended” meant anymore.

For so long his life had been built around destruction, survival, and the endless pressure of the Void pressing against reality itself. So when everything suddenly went quiet, it didn’t feel like peace. It felt like something had been removed from the world and nobody had noticed what was missing yet.

Harris stood in the remains of the battlefield where gods once fell, where the sky itself had cracked open during the final clash against Omega Crimson Eclipse. Now there was only wind moving through broken land. No screams. No collapsing universes. No Void pressure crushing existence.

Only silence.

But Harris knew silence could be more dangerous than war.

Because silence meant waiting.

And waiting always meant something was coming.

He exhaled slowly, forcing his face into calm. Around him, his friends were still recovering from the aftermath. Koji was injured but hiding it behind irritation and jokes. Lunar was exhausted but pretending to be fine. Reku, Roku, Lina, and Mika were all carrying invisible damage that no medicine could fully fix.

And Harlina…

Harlina was the only reason Harris was still standing like a human instead of a broken weapon.

But even she didn't know how much he was hiding.

Every step Harris took sent sharp pain through his body. The final battle had not left clean wounds—it had left something deeper, something that resisted healing like it refused to accept that the war was truly over. Still, he smiled when they were around. Still acted like he was fine. Still pretended that the past wasn't slowly eating him alive from the inside.

Because if he stopped pretending…

Everything would collapse again.

That evening, instead of resting like he should have, Harris insisted on taking everyone to the hospital. They all thought it was just routine checkups after a war. None of them questioned it too deeply. Even Koji didn't realize how serious Harris actually was.

At the hospital, chaos of small injuries, bandages, doctors moving quickly, voices overlapping in tired relief filled the building. Everyone was finally getting treated properly.

But Harris stayed outside the main rooms.

He didn't sit.

He didn't rest.

He just stood there quietly like someone waiting for a war that hadn't arrived yet.

Every now and then his hand would tighten slightly, a silent reaction to pain he refused to acknowledge. His mind was somewhere else entirely. Somewhere far beyond this moment.

Because deep inside him...

Something had started to stir again.

Something he thought was gone forever.

By the time everything finished, night had already fallen over the world. The group slowly separated, returning home one by one, tired but alive. Their laughter was weaker than before, but still present. Still human.

Harris and Harlina walked together alone.

No urgency.

No mission.

No world ending behind them.

Just two survivors trying to understand what comes after survival.

The air between them didn't need conversation. It never really did. Everything important had already been said during the war when words meant nothing and actions meant everything.

When they reached home, exhaustion finally caught up to both of them. The house felt strangely normal, like it belonged to a version of life that shouldn't exist for someone like Harris.

Harlina collapsed onto the bed first, completely drained. Harris sat beside her for a long time, just watching her breathe. That simple rhythm was more powerful than anything he had experienced in battle. It grounded him. It reminded him that not everything in existence was meant to be destroyed.

Eventually he lay down beside her.

She shifted in her sleep, unconsciously moving closer to him, like even her body refused to accept distance between them anymore. Harris slowly wrapped his arm around her. His expression softened for a moment he would never admit out loud.

For the first time in a long time...

He wasn't preparing for death.

He was simply existing.

But even peace had limits for him.

Pain still lived inside his body like a second heartbeat.

And deeper than that...

Something else was waiting.

Morning arrived like a quiet intrusion into their fragile peace. Light slipped through the curtains softly, touching the room like it was afraid to wake the past. Harris woke first, as always.

Harlina was still asleep beside him.

For a moment, he didn't move. He just looked at her, as if confirming she was real and not something the war had left behind in his imagination.

Then, slowly, carefully, he brushed her hair away from her face.

She stirred slightly, confused and half asleep.

Before she could fully wake up, Harris leaned in and kissed her forehead.

Then her cheek.

Her reaction was immediate.

She froze.

Then turned completely red.

Then buried herself under the blanket like she wanted to disappear from existence itself.

Harris couldn't stop himself from laughing. Not loudly. Not proudly. But softly, like something fragile had cracked open inside him and let a real emotion slip out.

He got up and walked toward the kitchen to make coffee.

The house was quiet again.

Too quiet.

And that was when everything changed.

As he stood there alone, the world didn’t make any sound—but his mind did.

A pressure entered.

Not physical.

Not emotional.

Something beyond both.

The Third Voice.

And behind it…

The Creator’s presence.

It wasn’t speaking loudly. It didn’t need to. The message formed directly inside his consciousness like reality itself was being rewritten.

“Find it.”

Harris froze completely.

His hand loosened.

The cup slipped from his fingers.

It shattered on the floor.

The sound echoed through the house like a warning that something far bigger than peace had just returned.

And then—

He collapsed.

Harlina rushed down immediately when she heard the sound. She found him on the floor, unresponsive. Panic filled her instantly. She shook him, called his name, splashed water on his face, trying to pull him back.

Nothing worked.

Until her hand accidentally pressed one of his hidden injuries.

Harris snapped awake instantly with a scream that shook the entire room.

Harlina stepped back, shocked, fear mixing with frustration.

“What is wrong with you? Why do you keep hiding everything?!”

Harris tried to respond, tried to lie like always, but this time something inside him cracked.

She slapped him lightly.

“Tell me the truth.”

Silence.

Heavy silence.

Then slowly, Harris lifted his shirt.

The wound underneath was still open in places, deeper than anyone expected, still carrying traces of energy that didn’t belong to this world. Harlina’s expression changed completely.

Fear.

Then anger.

Then concern so deep it almost hurt more than the wound itself.

Without hesitation, she grabbed him and forced him to go to the hospital.

Harris resisted at first when they mentioned injections. Not because of pain—but because something about it triggered an old fear buried too deep to explain. But Harlina didn’t let him escape it. She leaned closer and kissed his cheek softly.

That single action broke his resistance completely.

The injection went in.

And for a moment…

He was human again.

When they returned home later, everything looked normal again from the outside. But inside Harris's mind, nothing was normal anymore. The Third Voice had changed its tone.

It was no longer a whisper.

It was a warning.

"Find it."

The words repeated endlessly, as if something inside existence itself was trying to wake him up.

Later, Koji arrived.

The moment he saw Harris taking medicine, he immediately knew something was wrong. Lunar followed soon after. Both of them confronted him, shouting, demanding answers, frustration mixing with concern.

Harris only smiled weakly.

“I’m fine.”

Koji looked at him like he didn’t believe a single word.

Then, suddenly, Koji announced something unexpected.

A trip.

Everyone needed to leave the city for a while. Just a break. Just something normal. Something human.

Harris agreed without resistance.

The next day, while everyone prepared, Harlina went out with the others to buy supplies for the trip. Harris stayed behind alone for a while.

The silence in the house felt different now.

Not peaceful.

Not calm.

Empty.

He walked to the entrance and stood there.

Waiting.

He didn’t know what he was waiting for.

But he waited anyway.

Hours passed.

Then finally…

Harlina returned.

She found him asleep near the gate, whispering her name even in unconsciousness.

Something inside her softened immediately.

She woke him gently.

The moment he saw her, he pulled her into a tight hug like he had been waiting for her for years instead of hours.

“Why are you late?”

She laughed softly.

“Sorry…”

And for a moment…

Everything felt normal again.

The rest of the day passed like a fragile illusion of peace. Shopping, laughter, small arguments, teasing, choosing clothes, preparing for the trip. It all felt like a life they should have had long ago but were only now stealing from fate.

That night, they watched a horror movie together.

Harlina kept hiding behind him during every scary scene, holding him tightly without realizing how still he had become—not because of fear, but because of how real she felt against him.

At some point she noticed and became embarrassed, pushing him lightly while turning red.

“Stop staring at me!”

He only smiled.

Later they cooked together. Ate together. Fed each other like it was the most natural thing in existence. For a while, Harris forgot everything. The Void. The war. The voice.

Everything.

That night they slept holding each other again.

But peace never stayed inside his dreams.

He saw himself in a nightmare.

A version of him destroying everything.

Killing his friends.

Standing alone in a dead universe.

He woke up sweating.

Harlina woke immediately.

“What happened?”

“…just a dream.”

She kissed him softly.

“Sleep.”

Morning came too fast again.

Koji called repeatedly.

They were late.

Harris answered calmly.

“We’re on the way.”

Without hesitation, he lifted Harlina onto his shoulder and ran toward the station while she shouted in embarrassment, her face red, trying to escape but not really wanting to.

Behind them…

Something far beyond their world stirred.

Not the Void.

Not the Eclipse.

Something older.

Something watching.

And inside Harris's mind…

The Third Voice spoke one final time before silence returned.

"He has started to notice."

TO BE CONTINUED…

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 2: THE VOICE BEYOND PEACE (PART 1)

The morning sunlight stretched across the streets as Harris ran through the city at a speed that made several people stop and stare.

On one shoulder was a large travel bag.

In one hand was another luggage case.

And on his other shoulder...

Was Harlina.

"HARRIS!"

"What?"

"PUT ME DOWN!"

"We are late."

"We are not late enough for this!"

"We are."

"We are not!"

"We are!"

Harlina covered her burning face while several people turned toward them.

One elderly man looked completely confused.

A child pointed toward Harris and shouted,

"Look! A superhero is carrying his wife!"

Harlina's face somehow became even redder.

"We are not married!"

The child simply laughed.

Harris smiled.

"See? Even he knows."

"HARRIS!"

He laughed loudly and continued running.

For the first time in months...

He felt normal.

Not like the Void Walker.

Not like a hero.

Not like a survivor.

Just Harris.

Eventually the massive railway station appeared ahead.

The train whistle echoed through the air.

People rushed around carrying bags and tickets.

Harris immediately spotted a familiar group near Platform Three.

His eyes widened.

Then he shouted at maximum volume.

"KOJIIIIIIIIIII!"

The entire station turned.

Koji nearly dropped his backpack.

Lunar almost choked on his drink.

Reku looked around in panic.

Roku covered his ears.

Lina jumped.

Mika nearly fell off the bench.

A few seconds later they all spotted Harris.

Still carrying Harlina.

Silence.

Absolute silence.

Harris slowly lowered Harlina onto the platform.

Her face was completely red.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody moved.

Then Koji pointed.

Then Lunar pointed.

Then everyone burst into laughter.

"HARRIS!"

"What?"

"You carried her all the way here?"

"We were late."

"That doesn't answer anything!"

"It does."

"No it doesn't!"

Even Lunar was laughing now.

Harlina wanted the ground to open and swallow her whole.

Meanwhile Harris looked completely proud of himself.

Eventually the train arrived.

Its massive steel body slowly entered the station.

The doors opened.

Everyone boarded.

Their trip had finally begun.

The group quickly occupied several seats together.

Koji immediately started talking.

Lunar joined.

Soon everyone was laughing and discussing the trip.

The atmosphere felt completely different from the battlefield.

No weapons.

No enemies.

No death.

Only life.

Only friends.

Only peace.

Harris sat beside the window.

At first Harlina sat next to him.

But eventually Lina and Mika pulled her into their conversation.

Soon she was talking with the other girls.

Laughing.

Smiling.

Enjoying herself.

Harris quietly watched her.

Nothing else.

Just her.

The sunlight coming through the train window reflected across her face.

The way she smiled.

The way she laughed.

The way she looked genuinely happy.

For a moment Harris forgot everything.

The war.

The Void.

The pain.

Everything.

His chest felt strangely warm.

Then another thought entered his mind.

Nobody was paying attention to him.

Nobody was asking about his injuries.

Nobody was worrying.

Nobody was watching him every second.

Normally that would feel lonely.

But today…

It felt nice.

Because everyone was finally happy.

And that happiness mattered more than anything.

A small smile appeared on his face.

Then suddenly...

Everything changed.

The smile vanished.

A pressure entered his mind.

A familiar pressure.

One he immediately recognized.

His heartbeat stopped.

No...

Not again.

The Third Voice.

The presence became stronger.

Much stronger.

Then another presence appeared.

The Creator.

Before Harris could react—

Darkness swallowed everything.

The train disappeared.

The passengers disappeared.

The world disappeared.

Silence.

Infinite silence.

Harris slowly opened his eyes.

He was standing in a place made entirely of darkness and stars.

Countless galaxies floated around him.

Endless streams of light moved through the void.

It felt larger than existence itself.

Then two figures appeared.

The Third Voice.

And the Creator.

Harris immediately crossed his arms.

"You two again?"

The Third Voice laughed.

The Creator smiled.

Neither seemed surprised.

Harris sighed.

"I thought all of this was finished."

The Third Voice grinned.

"You always think that."

"Because it should be."

The Creator stepped forward.

"It never ends."

Harris rolled his eyes.

"Wonderful."

The Third Voice laughed again.

Harris pointed toward them.

"Tell me one thing."

"What?"

"Why are you here?"

The Creator remained silent.

The Third Voice simply smiled.

Harris frowned.

"The war ended."

Silence.

"My powers are gone."

Silence.

"The threats are gone."

Silence.

"So why are you here?"

The Third Voice suddenly burst into laughter.

The Creator followed.

Harris stared at them.

"...What is funny?"

The Creator finally spoke.

"You still think your powers are gone."

Harris froze.

"What?"

"You never lost them."

The words echoed throughout the cosmic darkness.

Harris couldn't believe what he heard.

"What do you mean?"

The Creator raised his hand.

A glowing image appeared.

Inside the image...

Harris could see his own body.

And deep within it...

Massive amounts of power.

Sleeping.

Sealed.

Waiting.

His eyes widened.

"No..."

The Creator nodded.

"Your power never disappeared."

"You sealed it."

Harris stepped backward.

His mind raced through countless memories.

The Void Throne.

The final battle.

The collapse of the Void.

Everything.

He had truly believed his powers were gone.

Yet now…

Everything was still inside him.

Waiting.

Sleeping.

Hidden.

The realization left him speechless.

Then confusion replaced shock.

"Then why are you here?"

The Creator's smile disappeared.

The Third Voice became serious.

Immediately Harris knew.

Something was wrong.

Very wrong.

The atmosphere changed completely.

The stars around them dimmed.

The cosmic space itself felt heavier.

The Creator slowly spoke.

"The threat to your universe is over."

Harris nodded.

"I know."

"But the threat beyond your universe has begun."

The words hit him harder than expected.

His expression changed.

"What threat?"

The Creator looked directly into his eyes.

Then answered.

"You."

Silence.

Absolute silence.

Harris stared.

"...What?"

"You."

His heartbeat accelerated.

"What do you mean me?"

The Third Voice suddenly laughed.

"Not you."

Harris looked even more confused.

"What?"

The Third Voice walked forward.

"There are countless universes."

"Countless realities."

"Countless worlds."

"And countless Harrises."

Every sentence increased Harris's confusion.

The Third Voice continued.

"You are the protector of Universe Four."

"Universe Four?"

"Yes."

Harris blinked.

"Wait..."

"There are more universes?"

The Third Voice smiled.

"Far more than you can imagine."

Harris remained silent.

His entire understanding of reality was changing.

Then the Third Voice spoke again.

"And another Harris..."

The atmosphere darkened.

"...is destroying them."

Harris froze.

The words felt impossible.

Another Harris?

Destroying universes?

How?

Why?

The questions flooded his mind.

The Creator answered before he could ask.

"Because he sees you as a threat."

Harris stared.

"A threat?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

The Creator looked directly into his eyes.

"Because no Void Walker reached the Third Book."

Silence.

"Because no Void Walker completed the Divine Suit."

Silence.

"Because no Void Walker reached the truth beyond the Third Gate."

The words struck Harris one after another.

The Third Gate.

The Divine Suit.

The Third Book.

Every mystery connected together.

The Third Voice continued.

"You are currently the strongest known Void Walker."

For the first time since the conversation began...

Fear appeared in Harris's eyes.

Not fear for himself.

Fear for everyone else.

If another version of him existed...

And if that version was destroying universes...

How powerful was he?

The question remained unanswered.

Then something happened.

The Third Voice stepped closer.

His appearance began changing.

The glowing aura around him shifted.

His face slowly became visible.

Harris watched.

Confused.

Then shocked.

Then completely frozen.

Because the face revealed beneath the light...

Was identical to his own.

His heartbeat stopped.

The universe around him seemed to disappear.

He couldn't move.

Couldn't speak.

Couldn't breathe.

The face staring back at him…

Was Harris.

His own face.

His own eyes.

His own appearance.

The Third Voice smiled.

And Harris finally managed to whisper:

"…Why do you look like me?"

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 2: THE VOICE BEYOND PEACE (PART 2)

"...Why do you look like me?"

The question escaped Harris's mouth almost like a whisper.

The cosmic darkness around them remained silent.

The countless stars floating through the endless void seemed frozen in place.

The Third Voice continued smiling.

But this time...

There was something different in that smile.

Something familiar.

Something painful.

Something that made Harris feel like he was looking at a forgotten piece of himself.

The Creator remained silent.

Watching.

Waiting.

For a few moments nobody spoke.

Harris couldn't stop staring.

The face.

The eyes.

Even the expression.

Everything looked like him.

It wasn't similar.

It wasn't close.

It was exactly him.

"Answer me."

The Third Voice looked away.

"Not yet."

Harris immediately became annoyed.

"Not yet?"

"Yes."

"You're showing me my own face and saying 'not yet'?"

The Third Voice laughed.

The Creator almost smiled.

Harris crossed his arms.

"You two are impossible."

The Third Voice stepped forward.

"There are truths you are not ready to hear."

"I've literally survived the Void."

"Exactly."

Harris wanted to argue.

But before he could speak—

The Creator finally raised his hand.

Three glowing books appeared before them.

Floating.

Ancient.

Covered in symbols.

Harris immediately recognized two of them.

"The first book..."

The book that started everything.

The book that revealed the existence of the Void Walker.

The book that changed his life forever.

Then his eyes moved toward the second book.

"The Eclipse Book..."

The book connected to Harlina.

The book connected to the Void Queen.

The book that revealed countless secrets during the Eclipse War.

Then his eyes moved toward the third.

And his heartbeat stopped.

Because he recognized it too.

The Third Book.

The book connected to the Divine Suit.

The book connected to the mysterious arrow.

The book he lost during the final battle.

The book that disappeared when the Gate was sealed.

The Creator pointed toward them.

"You must find them."

Harris frowned.

"The first two already exist."

"They are incomplete."

"What?"

"The truths inside them are incomplete."

Harris stared.

The Creator continued.

"And the third book has been lost."

Silence.

The Third Voice finally spoke.

"You need all three."

"Why?"

The Creator answered.

"Because the future depends on them."

The atmosphere became heavier.

Harris suddenly remembered something.

The dream.

The nightmare.

The version of himself destroying everything.

The dead universe.

The blood.

The destruction.

The Creator looked directly into his eyes.

As if reading his thoughts.

Then quietly said:

"You already know."

Harris froze.

The dream immediately returned to his mind.

His breathing stopped.

"How..."

The Creator smiled.

"You have already seen part of the future."

Harris's eyes widened.

No.

Impossible.

It was just a dream.

Wasn't it?

Before he could ask another question—

Everything shattered.

The stars disappeared.

The books vanished.

The darkness collapsed.

And suddenly—

SPLASH!

Cold water hit his face.

Harris's eyes opened instantly.

The train was gone.

The cosmic realm was gone.

The Third Voice was gone.

The Creator was gone.

Only reality remained.

He was sitting on a station bench.

Koji standing nearby.

Lunar standing nearby.

Harlina holding a water bottle.

Everyone looking worried.

Before Harris could even process reality—

His mouth moved automatically.

"How do you know about the dream?!"

Silence.

Everyone froze.

Koji blinked.

"What dream?"

Reku looked confused.

Roku looked confused.

Lina looked confused.

Mika looked confused.

Harlina looked confused.

Only Lunar narrowed his eyes.

Harris immediately realized his mistake.

His brain moved quickly.

Too quickly.

"Harlina disappeared in my dream."

Silence.

Then—

Everyone burst into laughter.

Harlina's face instantly turned red.

"HARRIS!"

Even Koji almost fell off the bench laughing.

"You were dreaming about that?!"

"I thought something serious happened!"

"HARRIS IS AFRAID OF LOSING HARLINA!"

The teasing continued.

Meanwhile Harris forced a smile.

A fake one.

A practiced one.

The kind he always used when hiding pain.

But Lunar wasn't laughing.

Because something wasn't right.

Harris never slept during travel.

Never.

Not even once.

And the look in his eyes…

That wasn't the look of someone waking from a normal dream.

That was the look of someone who had seen something terrifying.

Hours later the group finally reached the campsite.

The place was beautiful.

Large mountains surrounded the area.

A crystal-clear fountain stood near the center.

The air felt fresh.

Birds could be heard singing.

Sunlight reflected across the water.

Everyone immediately became excited.

Tents were unpacked.

Supplies were arranged.

Games were planned.

The entire group became busy.

Everyone except Harris.

He quietly walked toward the fountain.

Then sat beside it.

Watching the water flow.

Listening to its sound.

Thinking.

Always thinking.

The Third Voice.

The Creator.

The books.

The dream.

The other Harris.

The universes.

Everything kept repeating inside his mind.

Eventually footsteps approached.

Lunar.

He sat beside Harris without saying anything.

A few moments passed.

Then Lunar finally spoke.

"Why did you lie?"

Harris smiled.

"So you noticed."

"I always notice."

The smile slowly disappeared.

Silence followed.

Then Harris quietly spoke.

"This isn't over."

Lunar immediately understood.

The peace.

The war.

The future.

Everything.

Harris slowly explained everything.

The Third Voice.

The Creator.

The countless universes.

The mysterious threat.

The other Harris.

The books.

The dream.

As he spoke...

His voice became weaker.

More emotional.

Because for the first time since the war ended...

He admitted the truth.

He was afraid.

Not of dying.

Not of pain.

But of losing everyone again.

Lunar listened quietly.

Then looked toward the sky.

And smiled.

"So the war ended."

Harris laughed weakly.

"Looks like it."

Lunar continued.

"And peace decided to start another one."

Both laughed.

A sad laugh.

The kind shared between survivors.

Before they could continue—

Harlina appeared.

"What are you two doing?"

Both immediately stood up.

Nothing more was said.

Not today.

The rest of the afternoon passed peacefully.

The girls wanted to explore part of the forest.

So Harris and Lunar accompanied them.

Maintaining distance.

Watching carefully.

Protecting everyone without making it obvious.

Eventually the girls noticed.

"Why are you two so far away?"

Lina shouted.

"Come here!"

Mika waved.

Reku laughed.

Harlina crossed her arms.

"You two look suspicious."

Harris and Lunar exchanged glances.

Then both ran toward the group.

Everyone laughed.

For a brief moment...

The future didn't matter.

Only the present.

Only friendship.

Only life.

By afternoon everyone began preparing food.

Cooking together.

Laughing together.

Arguing over recipes.

The campsite felt alive.

When everything was ready everyone gathered together to eat.

Then Harlina suddenly looked around.

"Where's Harris?"

Silence.

Everyone looked.

No Harris.

Lunar immediately knew.

"The fountain."

He stood up.

"I'll bring him."

Nobody questioned it.

Lunar walked toward the fountain.

Then stopped.

Because Harris was sitting there.

Alone.

Crying.

Quietly.

No one else could see it.

But Lunar could.

Years of friendship made some things impossible to hide.

The tears weren't dramatic.

They weren't loud.

They were silent.

The tears of someone carrying too much.

The tears of someone who finally realized peace might not last.

Lunar didn't interrupt immediately.

He simply stood there.

Waiting.

Giving Harris a few moments.

Eventually Harris wiped his eyes.

Forced a smile.

And stood up.

"Let's go."

Neither mentioned the tears.

Neither needed to.

When they returned—

Harlina immediately noticed something was wrong.

She always did.

"Why were you sitting alone?"

Harris smiled.

"I remembered something."

"What memory?"

"A lot of memories."

It wasn't exactly a lie.

And somehow that made it worse.

Evening arrived slowly.

The sunset painted the campsite gold.

The fountain reflected the sky beautifully.

Everyone was busy.

Playing.

Laughing.

Living.

Harlina quietly approached Harris carrying two cups of coffee.

She handed one to him.

Then sat beside him.

For a while neither spoke.

Just enjoying the silence.

Then Harris suddenly looked at her.

"Sit here."

She blinked.

"Where?"

He pointed toward his lap.

Immediately her face turned red.

"HARRIS!"

He laughed.

After several moments of embarrassment...

She sat down.

Very carefully.

Very shyly.

Harris smiled.

Then looked toward the sunset.

"Do you remember your birthday?"

Harlina froze.

The question surprised her.

"Which birthday?"

"The night everything changed."

Her expression softened.

Of course she remembered.

Some memories never disappear.

The two sat quietly.

Remembering.

Feeling.

Existing together.

Then suddenly—

"HARLINA!"

Her friends shouted.

"VOLLEYBALL!"

She looked back.

Then looked toward Harris.

"You too."

He shook his head.

"No."

"Come on."

"You go."

"Are you sure?"

"Yeah."

She smiled.

Then ran toward the others.

Harris watched her leave.

The smile remained.

But his eyes looked distant.

Night eventually arrived.

The games ended.

Dinner ended.

The laughter slowly faded.

One by one everyone entered their tents.

The campsite became silent.

The stars filled the sky.

The moon reflected across the fountain.

Everyone slept.

Except Harris.

Because after years of sleeping beside someone...

Sleeping alone felt strange.

Lonely.

Uncomfortable.

Impossible.

Eventually he gave up.

He quietly left the tent.

Walked through the silent camp.

And returned to the fountain.

The same fountain.

The same water.

The same thoughts.

He sat alone.

Looking toward the stars.

Thinking about the dream.

Thinking about the Third Voice.

Thinking about the books.

Thinking about the other Harris.

The one destroying universes.

The one who somehow feared him.

The wind moved gently through the trees.

The water continued flowing.

And deep inside his mind...

One question refused to leave.

Who exactly was the Third Voice?

And why did he have Harris's face?

Far beyond the stars...

Far beyond his universe...

Something watched.

Waiting.

Preparing.

And the peaceful night continued...

Unaware of the storm approaching existence itself.

TO BE CONTINUED...

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI 🖤⚔️📖

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 3: THE CHOICE OF PAIN (PART 1)

The night remained silent.

The camp that had been filled with laughter only a few hours ago was now asleep beneath the stars. The forest was calm. The mountains stood motionless in the distance. The fountain reflected the moonlight like a mirror of silver.

Everyone was sleeping.

Everyone except Harris.

He sat alone at the edge of the fountain, staring into the flowing water.

His eyes never left the surface.

But his mind was somewhere else.

Far beyond the camp.

Far beyond the mountains.

Far beyond his universe.

The Third Voice's words repeated endlessly inside his head.

"Another Harris is destroying universes."

"He sees you as a threat."

"Find the three books."

"Your powers are not gone."

The more he thought about it, the heavier his chest felt.

The war against Omega Crimson Eclipse had finally ended.

Everyone deserved peace.

Koji deserved peace.

Lunar deserved peace.

Reku, Roku, Lina, and Mika deserved peace.

Most of all...

Harlina deserved peace.

Yet somehow another war was already waiting.

A bigger one.

A war beyond universes.

A war that could destroy everything.

Harris clenched his fists.

"No..."

The words escaped quietly.

"I'm not letting that happen."

The wind moved through the trees.

No answer came.

Harris closed his eyes.

For several minutes he tried to contact the Creator.

Nothing.

He tried again.

Nothing.

Then he attempted to call the Third Voice.

Still nothing.

The silence frustrated him.

"Come on..."

Nothing.

The fountain continued flowing peacefully.

Harris lowered his head.

Then suddenly—

An idea appeared.

A terrible idea.

A dangerous idea.

An idea that only Harris would think was reasonable.

His eyes slowly widened.

The last two times he had spoken with them...

He had lost consciousness.

His mind immediately connected the pattern.

"If unconsciousness opens the path..."

He stood up slowly.

"...then I need to become unconscious."

Immediately another voice inside him objected.

His mind.

His logic.

His reason.

"That's stupid."

"Very stupid."

"Extremely stupid."

But another voice spoke.

His heart.

"If pain now saves everyone later..."

"Then do it."

Silence followed.

A long silence.

Then Harris smiled.

The kind of smile that worried people.

"Yep."

He looked toward the sleeping camp.

"Definitely stupid."

Five seconds later he was already doing it.

A few moments later Harris stood beneath a large tree near the fountain.

The moonlight shone through the branches.

He stared upward.

Then sighed.

"Sorry, future me."

And before common sense could stop him—

THUD.

A sharp impact.

Pain shot through his head.

Not enough to seriously hurt him.

Just enough.

Then another.

Then another.

Several scratches appeared on his hands.

Small wounds.

Nothing life-threatening.

Just enough.

His vision slowly blurred.

The world tilted.

The fountain disappeared.

The stars stretched into streaks of light.

And then—

Darkness.

Complete darkness.

When Harris opened his eyes again, he immediately knew where he was.

The endless cosmic realm.

Countless stars.

Infinite darkness.

Galaxies drifting through existence itself.

And standing nearby...

The Creator.

The Third Voice.

Both of them looked completely shocked.

The Third Voice blinked.

The Creator blinked.

Harris smiled proudly.

The Third Voice pointed at him.

"Did you just knock yourself unconscious?"

"...Maybe."

The Third Voice stared.

The Creator stared.

Several seconds passed.

Then both simultaneously facepalmed.

"You cannot be serious."

"I am serious."

The Third Voice looked genuinely disappointed.

"This is the worst method anyone has ever used."

"It worked."

"That's not the point!"

"It still worked."

The Creator sighed deeply.

Even cosmic beings looked tired sometimes.

Finally Harris crossed his arms.

"I need answers."

Immediately both of them became serious.

The joking atmosphere vanished.

The stars around them seemed to grow quieter.

Harris stepped forward.

"Where are the three books?"

The Third Voice laughed.

The Creator remained silent.

Harris didn't laugh.

He didn't smile.

He didn't move.

He simply repeated the question.

"Where are the three books?"

The Third Voice stopped laughing.

Because Harris wasn't joking.

Not this time.

The determination in his eyes was different.

Stronger.

Sharper.

The Creator studied him carefully.

Then finally spoke.

"You are not ready."

Harris frowned.

"Not ready?"

"Yes."

"I fought Omega Crimson Eclipse."

"That doesn't mean you're ready."

"I saved my universe."

"That doesn't mean you're ready."

Harris became annoyed.

"Then what does?"

Silence.

The Creator didn't answer.

The Third Voice looked away.

The response only irritated Harris more.

"I'm asking where they are."

Still silence.

Harris stepped forward again.

His eyes were completely serious now.

The Third Voice noticed immediately.

The playful attitude vanished from his face.

For the first time...

He realized Harris had already made his decision.

He wasn't asking because he was curious.

He wasn't asking because he wanted information.

He was asking because he had already chosen his path.

The Third Voice sighed.

"You really plan on finding them."

"Yes."

"You understand what that means?"

"Yes."

"You'll become a target."

"I know."

"You might die."

"I know."

"You have no powers right now."

"I know."

The Third Voice stared directly into his eyes.

"And you'll still do it?"

Harris smiled.

A calm smile.

A fearless smile.

The smile of someone who had already accepted the cost.

"Of course."

The Third Voice became silent.

Even the Creator looked surprised.

Then Harris spoke again.

"If pain can protect them..."

His voice softened.

"...then I'll accept it."

For a brief moment nobody spoke.

Because they knew he meant every word.

The Creator finally looked away.

The Third Voice sighed.

Then slowly nodded.

"Fine."

The stars around them shifted.

The atmosphere darkened.

The conversation became serious.

"The threat's name is Omega Void Emperor."

The words echoed across the cosmic realm.

Immediately Harris focused.

The Third Voice continued.

"He wasn't always a monster."

Silence.

"He was once a hero."

Harris froze.

A hero?

The Third Voice nodded.

"He was a Void Walker."

The stars around them began forming images.

Harris watched.

A different universe appeared before him.

Another world.

Another sky.

Another version of himself.

The other Harris.

Standing proudly beside friends.

Standing beside a girl who looked similar to Harlina.

Standing beside people he loved.

Then—

Everything burned.

The sky shattered.

The Crimson Eclipse consumed the universe.

The people around him died.

One by one.

Friends.

Family.

Companions.

Everyone.

The images continued.

The other Harris survived.

Alone.

Broken.

Destroyed from the inside.

His eyes lost their light.

His smile disappeared.

His heart shattered.

Harris watched silently.

Because for the first time...

He understood.

The Third Voice spoke quietly.

"He lost everything."

The Creator continued.

"And after that..."

The image changed.

The broken Harris stood among the ruins of existence.

His face emotionless.

Cold.

Empty.

"He decided the Void Walker was the problem."

Harris frowned.

"What?"

The Creator nodded.

"He believed every universe would eventually suffer the same fate."

Silence.

"So he chose to end them first."

The image darkened.

Universes began collapsing.

Worlds began disappearing.

Countless versions of Harris were defeated.

Controlled.

Changed.

Transformed into soldiers.

Entire realities vanished.

Harris watched everything.

His fists clenched tightly.

"He calls it mercy."

The Third Voice's voice grew colder.

"He believes he's saving everyone from future pain."

Silence filled the cosmic realm.

The destruction continued.

Universe after universe.

Life after life.

Everything disappearing.

Finally the image vanished.

Only darkness remained.

Harris slowly lowered his head.

For the first time...

He didn't hate Omega Void Emperor.

He pitied him.

Because somewhere deep inside...

He understood exactly how much pain it would take to become something like that.

The Creator noticed immediately.

"You understand him."

Harris nodded slowly.

"...Yes."

The Creator sighed.

"That makes this even more dangerous."

The Third Voice stepped forward.

"Because now he knows you exist."

Harris looked up.

The Third Voice pointed directly at him.

"And you're the one person he fears."

Harris blinked.

"...Me?"

The Creator nodded.

"Because you don't know your true power yet."

Harris frowned.

"My true power?"

The Creator smiled.

"The power you sealed."

The Third Voice smiled as well.

"The power even Omega Void Emperor never discovered."

Harris froze.

The stars around them grew brighter.

And for the first time since arriving...

He realized this conversation was about to reveal something far bigger than the multiverse itself.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 3: THE CHOICE OF PAIN (PART 2)

The endless cosmic realm remained silent.

Countless stars floated around Harris.

The Creator and the Third Voice stood before him.

Neither spoke immediately.

Because the topic they were about to discuss was something even Omega Void Emperor feared.

Harris stood motionless.

His mind was still processing everything.

The destruction of countless universes.

The fall of another Harris.

The creation of Omega Void Emperor.

The controlled Void Soldiers.

The endless war beyond reality.

And now...

His own hidden power.

Finally Harris broke the silence.

"What power?"

The Third Voice smiled.

"The one you buried."

"I don't remember burying anything."

"You did."

"When?"

The Creator answered.

"At the Void Throne."

Immediately memories surfaced.

The final battle.

The fragments.

The Void Throne.

The sacrifice.

The sealing of the Void.

The end of the war.

Everything.

Harris frowned.

"I sealed the Void."

The Creator nodded.

"Yes."

The Third Voice stepped closer.

"But you never destroyed your power."

Harris froze.

The Third Voice pointed toward his chest.

"You sealed it inside yourself."

Silence.

The words echoed repeatedly in Harris's mind.

His power...

Still existed.

Not gone.

Not destroyed.

Sleeping.

Waiting.

Hidden.

The realization felt strange.

For so long he had accepted being powerless.

Accepted becoming normal.

Accepted leaving the Void behind.

Now suddenly everything was different.

The Creator watched him carefully.

"You are mentally ready."

Harris looked up.

"But physically..."

The Creator shook his head.

"...you are not."

The words annoyed Harris immediately.

"I can still fight."

The Third Voice laughed.

"No."

"I can."

"No."

"I survived the Void."

The Third Voice crossed his arms.

"And Omega Void Emperor could erase you in seconds."

Silence.

Harris hated hearing it.

Mostly because he knew it was true.

The Third Voice continued.

"Even his soldiers are stronger than you right now."

The images returned.

Dozens.

Hundreds.

Thousands.

Versions of Harris wearing dark armor.

Dark eyes.

Broken expressions.

Controlled completely.

Void Soldiers.

Every one of them stronger than his current self.

Harris clenched his fists.

The Creator spoke calmly.

"If you face them now…"

A vision appeared.

Harris being defeated.

Again.

And again.

And again.

The vision vanished.

The message was clear.

He wasn't ready.

Not yet.

The frustration showed on Harris's face.

"So what do I do?"

The Third Voice finally smiled.

"For once..."

The Creator smiled as well.

"...the answer is simple."

Both pointed at him simultaneously.

"Talk."

Harris blinked.

"...What?"

"Talk."

"To who?"

The Third Voice pointed toward his chest.

"The suit."

Silence.

Complete silence.

Harris stared.

"The suit?"

The Creator nodded.

"The Divine Suit."

"It's destroyed."

"No."

"It's gone."

"No."

"I literally lost it."

The Third Voice laughed loudly.

"You never lost it."

Harris froze.

Again.

The Third Voice enjoyed every second of it.

"The Divine Suit exists inside you."

The words struck harder than anything before.

The suit.

Inside him.

Still.

After all this time.

His mind immediately raced.

The battles.

The transformations.

The power.

The armor.

Everything.

Still there.

Waiting.

The Creator continued.

"The suit recognizes only one owner."

"You."

"The suit never abandoned you."

"You abandoned it."

Harris stared in disbelief.

The Third Voice laughed again.

"You really thought it disappeared?"

"...Yes."

"That's adorable."

"Stop saying that."

The Third Voice kept laughing.

The Creator almost looked amused.

For a moment the atmosphere became lighter.

Then Harris suddenly remembered something.

"The books."

Immediately both became serious again.

The Third Voice nodded.

"The books are important."

"Then tell me where they are."

"No."

Harris nearly exploded.

"What do you mean no?!"

The Third Voice pointed at him.

"Because you'll immediately run after them."

"Exactly."

"That's the problem."

"It isn't a problem."

"It absolutely is."

The argument continued for several minutes.

Eventually the Creator raised his hand.

Silence returned.

"You will find them."

"When?"

"When the time is right."

"I hate mysterious answers."

"We know."

The Third Voice looked pleased.

Annoying Harris seemed to be one of his favorite activities.

Then the Creator continued.

"You need allies."

Harris frowned.

"I already have allies."

The Creator shook his head.

"No."

The stars shifted.

New images appeared.

Different universes.

Different worlds.

Different versions of Harris.

Some fighting.

Some surviving.

Some hiding.

Some still resisting Omega Void Emperor.

Harris stared.

The Creator pointed toward them.

"You need them."

Silence.

"Other Harrises?"

"Yes."

The Third Voice nodded.

"Not all universes have fallen."

"Not yet."

The images continued changing.

Different worlds.

Different stories.

Different versions of himself.

Each carrying different scars.

Different losses.

Different hopes.

For the first time Harris realized how enormous the multiverse truly was.

Countless possibilities.

Countless lives.

Countless versions of himself.

The Creator spoke again.

"Some still fight."

The Third Voice continued.

"Some still believe."

The Creator nodded.

"And some are waiting."

Silence.

Then Harris smiled.

A genuine smile.

Because for the first time since learning about Omega Void Emperor...

He wasn't alone.

Somewhere out there...

Other versions of himself were still fighting.

Still protecting.

Still refusing to surrender.

The realization strengthened his resolve.

Then another thought appeared.

A very important thought.

Harris looked toward them.

"One question."

The Third Voice immediately looked suspicious.

"What now?"

"How do I contact you without knocking myself unconscious?"

Silence.

Then both of them started laughing.

Hard.

Very hard.

Harris crossed his arms.

"I'm serious."

The Third Voice laughed even harder.

The Creator covered his face.

"This is why we don't tell you things."

"Tell me."

The Third Voice finally calmed down.

Then answered.

"Just call us."

"...What?"

"Just call us."

"That's it?"

"Yes."

Harris blinked.

Several times.

"That's the answer?"

"Yes."

The Third Voice shrugged.

"If you truly believe we'll hear you."

"We'll hear you."

Silence.

Harris stared.

Then stared some more.

Then finally pointed at them.

"You could've told me that earlier."

"We tried."

"No you didn't."

"We definitely did."

"No."

"Yes."

The argument continued.

Eventually the Creator interrupted.

"If you use that method…"

He pointed toward Harris.

"...everyone will think you're talking to yourself."

Silence.

Harris imagined it.

Walking around.

Having conversations with invisible cosmic beings.

Everyone staring.

Koji judging.

Lunar questioning.

Harlina worried.

The image was horrifying.

"There has to be another way."

The Creator smiled.

"There is."

Harris immediately stepped forward.

"What is it?"

The Third Voice smiled as well.

"Unlock your power."

Silence.

"Then you'll know."

Harris groaned.

Of course that was the answer.

Everything always returned to unlocking his power.

Before he could complain—

The entire cosmic realm suddenly trembled.

The stars distorted.

The darkness cracked.

The connection was ending.

The Creator looked toward him one last time.

"Harris."

The seriousness in his voice immediately caught attention.

"The next time an arrow appears..."

Harris froze.

"The arrow?"

The Third Voice nodded.

"Do not ignore it."

The atmosphere darkened.

Instantly.

The Creator continued.

"Someone is already searching for you."

Before Harris could ask who—

Reality shattered.

The stars disappeared.

The darkness vanished.

The cosmic realm collapsed.

And suddenly—

SPLASH!

Ice-cold water exploded around him.

Harris's eyes snapped open.

He was lying inside the fountain.

Completely soaked.

Completely awake.

The first rays of morning sunlight were appearing over the mountains.

Birds were beginning to sing.

The camp remained asleep.

For several seconds Harris simply stared at the sky.

Then slowly sat up.

Water dripped from his hair.

His clothes.

His face.

Everything.

A smile appeared.

Then another.

Then suddenly—

He stood up.

Raised both fists toward the sky.

And shouted at maximum volume.

"LET'S BEGIN, OMEGA VOID EMPEROR!"

Several birds immediately flew away.

A nearby squirrel fell from a branch.

The mountains echoed his voice.

And somewhere inside the camp—

Someone groaned in their sleep.

Harris laughed.

A loud laugh.

A genuine laugh.

The first true laugh since the war ended.

Because now he finally had direction.

The threat had a name.

The enemy had a face.

The path existed.

And he was ready to walk it.

No matter the cost.

No matter the pain.

No matter the sacrifice.

The Void Walker had taken his first step toward the next war.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 3: THE CHOICE OF PAIN (PART 3)

The first rays of sunlight slowly spread across the campsite.

The mountains glowed gold.

The fountain sparkled beneath the morning light.

The forest was beginning to wake.

Birds sang from the trees.

The cool morning breeze moved through the camp.

And for the first time since learning about Omega Void Emperor...

Harris was smiling.

Not because he was happy.

Not because everything was fine.

But because he finally had a direction.

He finally knew what he needed to do.

Find the books.

Unlock his power.

Find the Divine Suit.

Find the surviving Harrises.

And stop Omega Void Emperor.

Simple.

Impossible.

Exactly the kind of problem Harris always ended up facing.

He laughed quietly.

Then walked back toward the campsite.

Everyone was still asleep.

For a few moments he simply stood there watching them.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

And finally...

Harlina.

Still sleeping peacefully.

The sight hurt his heart.

Because now he knew another war was coming.

And he wanted none of them involved.

Especially her.

He looked away.

Then headed toward the cooking area.

"If nobody's awake..."

A smile appeared.

"...then breakfast first."

Almost an hour later...

The smell of coffee slowly spread throughout the campsite.

Then breakfast.

Then more coffee.

Then somehow even more coffee.

One by one the group began waking up.

Koji was first.

He stretched.

Yawned.

Then froze.

"Harris?"

Harris stood there holding several cups of coffee.

Smiling.

Far too much.

"Good morning."

Koji blinked.

Something felt wrong immediately.

Not dangerous wrong.

Just...

Suspiciously cheerful.

Soon everyone else woke up.

The confusion only increased.

Because Harris was somehow more energetic than everyone combined.

Lunar noticed first.

Then Harlina.

Both immediately realized the same thing.

Harris hadn't slept.

His eyes were slightly red.

Dark circles were visible beneath them.

Yet somehow he looked more motivated than ever.

Lunar narrowed his eyes.

Harlina crossed her arms.

Both knew something was happening.

A little later...

Everyone gathered near the fountain.

The morning atmosphere was peaceful.

People talked.

Laughed.

Prepared breakfast.

Meanwhile Harris stood beneath the falling water.

Thinking.

Trying.

Listening.

Attempting to communicate with the suit hidden inside him.

Nothing happened.

No response.

No voice.

No power.

Only water.

Still…

He kept trying.

Then suddenly—

"HARRIS!"

He turned.

Harlina was standing nearby.

Arms crossed.

Looking annoyed.

"Come here."

Harris walked closer.

Then immediately removed his shirt before jumping into the water.

Splash.

Silence.

Harlina froze.

Her face instantly turned red.

Several nearby campers almost choked laughing.

"HARRIS!"

"What?"

"WHY WOULD YOU DO THAT?"

"I wanted to swim."

"THAT IS NOT THE PROBLEM!"

Harris laughed.

The embarrassment only made her angrier.

Finally she grabbed a nearby towel and threw it directly at his face.

"Answer my question!"

"What question?"

"Why didn't you sleep?"

Harris caught the towel.

Then smiled confidently.

"Because I was alone without you."

Silence.

Complete silence.

Harlina's face became completely red.

Koji nearly fell into the fountain laughing.

Lina screamed.

Mika covered her face.

Even Lunar almost smiled.

"HARRIS!"

The shout echoed across the camp.

Harris immediately escaped into deeper water.

The laughter continued for several minutes.

Eventually Lunar approached him.

Unlike Harlina...

Lunar wasn't interested in embarrassing answers.

He wanted the truth.

The two sat near the edge of the fountain.

Lunar looked directly at him.

"You didn't sleep because of the threat."

Harris remained silent.

Then nodded slightly.

"Partly."

"And?"

Harris looked toward the mountains.

"Loneliness."

That answer surprised Lunar.

Not because it was dramatic.

But because it was honest.

For a brief moment neither spoke.

Then Harris smiled again.

The smile looked genuine.

But Lunar noticed something.

Pain.

Still there.

Still hidden beneath everything.

The rest of the morning became training.

At least...

That was what Harris called it.

To everyone else it looked like fun.

To him it was preparation.

Every movement mattered.

Every second mattered.

Every improvement mattered.

Because Omega Void Emperor wasn't waiting.

Harris returned to the fountain.

He placed several stones inside his hoodie.

Small ones.

Then larger ones.

Then even larger ones.

The weight increased significantly.

Everyone stared.

"What are you doing?" Reku asked.

"Training."

"By carrying rocks?"

"Yes."

Silence.

Nobody knew how to respond.

Eventually Harris tied a cloth around his face.

Only his eyes remained visible.

Koji immediately pointed.

"Why are you wearing a mask?"

Harris grinned.

"If you see my face..."

He pointed toward everyone.

"...you'll hesitate."

Nobody understood.

Except Lunar.

Lunar immediately realized what Harris was planning.

And he didn't like it.

Not one bit.

A few minutes later...

The entire group stood in an open area.

Each person held several stones.

Everyone except Harris.

Because Harris was the target.

Harlina stared.

Koji stared.

Everyone stared.

"You want us to throw these at you?"

"Yes."

"No."

"Yes."

"No."

The argument continued.

Harlina refused immediately.

Koji refused immediately.

Neither wanted any part of this.

Harris sighed.

Then smiled.

Then made a mistake.

"Come on, pretty girl."

Silence.

Harlina froze.

"What?"

Harris pointed toward Koji.

"And older man."

Koji froze.

The group immediately understood.

He was provoking them.

Deliberately.

Very deliberately.

The result was immediate.

"WHO ARE YOU CALLING OLD?!"

"WHO ARE YOU CALLING PRETTY GIRL?!"

The fury was incredible.

Lunar stepped away.

Reku stepped away.

Everyone stepped away.

The explosion had begun.

Several minutes later...

The stones started flying.

Fast.

Very fast.

Harris moved.

Dodged.

Turned.

Jumped.

Avoided.

Again.

Again.

Again.

The stones missed by centimeters.

Some passed his face.

Some passed his shoulders.

Some nearly hit him.

But Harris kept moving.

Smiling.

Laughing.

Enjoying it.

To everyone else it looked like a game.

To Harris…

It was survival training.

His instincts needed improvement.

His body needed improvement.

Everything needed improvement.

Because right now he was weaker than every Void Soldier.

That reality burned inside him.

So he continued.

Again.

Again.

Again.

The stones increased.

The speed increased.

The weight inside his hoodie increased.

Sweat appeared.

Pain appeared.

His hidden injuries screamed.

But he ignored them.

Hours passed.

The training continued.

Then suddenly—

Something changed.

A sensation.

A feeling.

Danger.

Harris's eyes widened.

Instinctively he turned.

Something was flying toward him.

Fast.

Too fast.

Not a stone.

An arrow.

Without hesitation—

He caught it.

Silence.

Nobody noticed.

The arrow shattered in his hand.

Immediately Harris hid the pieces.

Then smiled.

"Break time."

Everyone accepted.

Nobody questioned it.

But inside...

Harris's heart had already begun racing.

The Creator was right.

Someone was searching for him.

Breakfast came shortly afterward.

Everyone gathered together.

The mood was cheerful again.

Laughter returned.

Conversations returned.

For a while...

Everything felt normal.

Then Harris suddenly stood.

"Volleyball."

Everyone looked up.

"What?"

"We're playing."

Koji groaned.

Reku cheered.

Lina became excited.

Soon everyone agreed.

Then Harris made another announcement.

"I'll play alone."

Silence.

"What?"

"You all play together."

"HARRIS THAT'S NOT FAIR."

"It is."

"It isn't."

"It is."

The argument lasted several minutes.

Eventually everyone accepted.

Mostly because Harris refused to change his mind.

The game began.

And immediately everyone understood something.

Harris wasn't playing volleyball.

He was training.

Every jump.

Every movement.

Every dodge.

Every sprint.

Everything was calculated.

Everything was deliberate.

The ball moved rapidly.

Harris moved faster.

Again.

Again.

Again.

His body screamed in pain.

His shoulders hurt.

His ribs hurt.

His legs hurt.

His injuries hurt.

Yet somehow…

His smile only grew bigger.

Because every second made him stronger.

Every second brought him closer.

Closer to protecting everyone.

Closer to stopping Omega Void Emperor.

Closer to surviving the future.

From the sidelines...

Koji watched quietly.

Something felt wrong.

Not dangerous.

Not evil.

But different.

Very different.

The old Harris trained because he enjoyed challenges.

This Harris trained because he was preparing for something.

Something nobody else understood.

Koji frowned.

"Harris..."

For the first time...

He began suspecting that something serious was being hidden from them.

And unfortunately...

He was right.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 3: THE CHOICE OF PAIN (PART 4)

The volleyball game finally ended.

Everyone collapsed onto the grass.

Some were breathing heavily.

Some were laughing.

Some were complaining that Harris had somehow turned a relaxing vacation into military training.

Harris simply laughed.

The sound felt genuine.

But behind the smile...

His body was reaching its limit.

The hidden injuries beneath his clothes throbbed constantly.

The wounds from the previous night.

The pressure from the stone training.

The intense physical activity.

Everything was beginning to take its toll.

Yet he ignored it.

Because every moment spent suffering now meant another moment protecting everyone later.

At least that was what he told himself.

The afternoon sun rose higher.

The camp became quieter.

Most people wanted to rest after the exhausting games.

Harris immediately stood up.

"I'll prepare lunch."

Everyone looked surprised.

Koji blinked.

"You?"

"Yes."

"You sure?"

"Trust me."

Harlina narrowed her eyes suspiciously.

"You're acting strange today."

Harris smiled.

"I'm always strange."

Nobody could argue with that.

The next thirty minutes became another challenge.

Harris carried ingredients.

Moved supplies.

Prepared food.

Cooked.

Cleaned.

Worked nonstop.

Every movement hurt.

His injuries screamed.

The muscles in his arms burned.

The cuts on his hands reopened several times.

But he continued.

Because he wasn't only preparing lunch.

He was increasing his physical endurance.

Training.

Always training.

Always improving.

Always preparing.

Exactly thirty minutes later—

Lunch was ready.

Everyone gathered around.

The smell alone shocked them.

Reku took the first bite.

His eyes widened.

Roku took a bite.

Then Lina.

Then Mika.

Then Koji.

Then Lunar.

Finally Harlina.

Silence.

Everyone looked at Harris.

"Harris..."

"What?"

"This is amazing."

A proud smile appeared.

Harris bowed dramatically.

"Sorry for the slow service."

Immediately several pillows hit his face.

The entire camp burst into laughter.

For a moment...

Everything felt perfect.

Then it happened.

Pain.

A sudden explosion of pain surged through his body.

His vision blurred.

His breathing stopped.

The injuries hidden beneath his clothes felt like they were tearing apart.

For a split second—

His entire body froze.

But nobody noticed.

Because Harris smiled.

The biggest smile of the day.

A fake smile.

A perfect smile.

The kind he always used when hiding pain.

Then another thought entered his mind.

The arrow.

The mysterious arrow.

Someone had attacked him.

Someone had already found him.

His attention drifted.

His hand moved slightly toward his shoulder.

Then he felt something warm.

Very warm.

His eyes widened.

Blood.

A small drop landed on the ground.

Then another.

Then another.

Silence.

Nobody spoke.

Because everyone had noticed.

Harris immediately stood up.

Too quickly.

"I'll be right back."

Unfortunately…

Nobody allowed him to leave.

Harlina grabbed one arm.

Koji grabbed the other.

The atmosphere instantly changed.

"Harris."

The smile disappeared from Koji's face.

"Explain."

Harris laughed nervously.

"Nothing serious."

"Harris."

"Just a scratch."

"Harris."

"Maybe two scratches."

The danger in Harlina's eyes became terrifying.

Even Omega Crimson Eclipse might have retreated.

Then—

SLAP.

One side.

SLAP.

The other side.

Harris froze.

Koji lowered his hand.

Harlina lowered hers.

The entire group went silent.

"Tell."

"The."

"Truth."

Every word landed like a hammer.

Harris knew he had lost.

Completely.

Several minutes later...

Everyone sat around him.

Treating his injuries.

Bandages.

Medicine.

Disinfectant.

The works.

Meanwhile Harris was enduring an entirely different pain.

The lectures.

The endless lectures.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

And especially Harlina.

Everyone took turns yelling at him.

"You jumped into a fountain!"

"It wasn't that bad."

"You trained with injuries!"

"It helped."

"You let people throw rocks at you!"

"Training."

"You played volleyball afterward!"

"Cardio."

"HARRIS!"

The entire camp shouted simultaneously.

Harris immediately surrendered.

"Okay. Okay. My fault."

Nobody believed his innocent expression.

Eventually the treatment finished.

The wounds were covered.

The bleeding stopped.

The group finally relaxed.

But nobody noticed one thing.

The shoulder injury wasn't from training.

It was from the previous night.

The injury he had given himself.

The truth remained hidden.

For now.

The evening arrived slowly.

The mountains glowed orange.

The sky became beautiful.

The fountain reflected the sunset.

Everyone gathered together once more.

This time Harris prepared coffee.

Fresh coffee.

Warm coffee.

Comforting coffee.

Everyone accepted a cup.

The atmosphere became peaceful again.

The arguments faded.

The laughter returned.

The camp felt alive.

Eventually Harris quietly slipped away.

Nobody noticed.

At least...

That was what he thought.

He returned to the fountain.

The same fountain.

The same place.

The place where he could finally remove the mask.

The smile disappeared.

The confidence disappeared.

The cheerful attitude disappeared.

Only Harris remained.

The real Harris.

The frightened Harris.

The exhausted Harris.

The lonely Harris.

Tears slowly appeared.

He lowered his head.

The weight finally became too much.

The threat.

The books.

The suit.

The arrows.

The future.

The lies.

Everything.

He couldn't tell them.

He couldn't risk it.

He couldn't lose them.

Not again.

Never again.

A few moments later—

A familiar voice appeared.

"Harris."

He immediately wiped his tears.

Too late.

Harlina had already seen them.

She slowly walked forward.

Then without asking permission—

Sat on his lap.

Harris froze.

Her arms wrapped around him.

The warmth felt comforting.

Dangerously comforting.

"Are you hiding something from me?"

The question was gentle.

Almost a whisper.

Harris smiled weakly.

"No."

She immediately narrowed her eyes.

A look that clearly said liar.

Then she pointed at him.

"If you're hiding something..."

She paused.

"...I won't hug you again."

Silence.

Harris stared.

Then laughed.

"Then I'll hug you."

Instantly her face turned red.

"HARRIS!"

SLAP.

A gentle slap landed on his forehead.

Then she ran away.

Embarrassed.

Leaving Harris laughing quietly.

Night eventually arrived.

Everyone entered their tents.

One by one.

The camp became silent.

The stars filled the sky.

The moon shined brightly above the mountains.

But once again...

Harris didn't sleep.

He returned to the fountain.

Sat alone.

Closed his eyes.

And whispered.

"Creator."

Silence.

"Third Voice."

Immediately both voices appeared inside his mind.

"You learned quickly."

"Of course I did."

The Third Voice laughed.

The Creator smiled.

Then Harris became serious.

"The arrow."

The atmosphere instantly changed.

Before they could answer—

A sound appeared.

Very faint.

Very small.

A quiet sob.

Harris froze.

His eyes opened.

He immediately stood.

"Who's there?"

Silence.

He searched around the fountain.

Around the trees.

Around the bushes.

Then finally—

He found her.

Harlina.

Standing behind a tree.

Tears running down her face.

Her body trembling.

Her eyes filled with fear.

Harris's heart stopped.

No.

No.

No.

She heard everything.

"Did..."

His voice shook.

"...did you hear everything?"

She nodded.

Slowly.

Painfully.

Silently.

The world suddenly felt heavier.

Because now she knew.

The multiverse.

The threat.

Omega Void Emperor.

The coming war.

Everything.

Without warning—

She ran toward him.

Then hugged him.

As tightly as possible.

Like she was afraid he would disappear.

"Don't leave me."

The words broke his heart.

"Please."

Another tear fell.

"Don't leave me alone."

Harris wanted to answer immediately.

He wanted to promise.

He wanted to tell her everything would be okay.

He wanted to say he would never leave.

But he couldn't.

Because if she followed him…

She would become a target.

So he did something that hurt far more.

He lied.

"You don't need me."

Silence.

"What?"

His heart screamed.

His mind screamed.

Everything inside him screamed.

Yet he continued.

"After I lost my powers..."

His voice remained cold.

"...everyone started treating me differently."

Her eyes widened.

"In the train."

A tear fell.

"Nobody sat with me."

Another tear.

"During lunch."

Another.

"Everyone forgot me."

Her body froze.

Every word stabbed both of them.

Because Harris knew it wasn't true.

And Harlina knew it wasn't true.

Yet hearing it still hurt.

The pain inside her eyes nearly shattered him.

But he continued.

Because protecting her mattered more than his own feelings.

Finally he turned away.

"Go sleep."

She cried.

She cried harder than before.

Then ran toward the tents.

The moment she disappeared—

Harris collapsed onto his knees.

Tears poured from his eyes.

"I'm sorry..."

The words escaped quietly.

"So sorry..."

Far away...

The camp suddenly exploded into chaos.

Because Harlina had told everyone.

Everything.

Minutes later—

Footsteps approached.

Many footsteps.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

And Harlina.

Everyone arrived near the fountain.

Everyone searching for Harris.

Then they found him.

Standing at the very top of the fountain.

Looking down at the water.

Looking completely alone.

"HARRIS!"

Koji shouted.

At that exact moment—

Danger.

Harris felt it instantly.

The same feeling.

The same presence.

Arrow.

Without hesitation—

He jumped.

SPLASH!

The massive fall injured him again.

But the arrow missed.

Vanishing into the darkness.

Everyone rushed toward him.

Completely confused.

Completely worried.

Then the confrontation began.

The arguments.

The apologies.

The guilt.

The tears.

Everything.

Koji lowered his head.

"We should've talked to you more."

Lunar remained silent.

The others apologized too.

Harris immediately shook his head.

"No."

Then he looked toward Harlina.

"I'm sorry too."

Silence.

Then—

SLAP.

The strongest slap yet.

Everyone froze.

Including Harris.

Tears filled her eyes.

"Now you're treating us like strangers."

Silence.

"You think we'll leave you alone?"

Another tear.

"You think we'll abandon you?"

Harris couldn't answer.

Because deep down...

He was afraid of exactly that.

The argument continued.

Long into the night.

Eventually Harris surrendered.

Completely.

Then he asked for only one thing.

"If something happens..."

Everyone listened.

"Stay behind me."

Immediately Koji refused.

Immediately Harlina refused.

"No."

"We stand beside you."

Silence.

Harris smiled.

A fearful smile.

A grateful smile.

A painful smile.

Because he knew what they were saying.

And he knew what he was planning.

Everyone eventually returned to their tents.

The camp finally became quiet again.

But Harris remained awake.

Looking toward the stars.

Thinking.

Planning.

Preparing.

After returning to town...

He would leave.

A letter.

A goodbye.

A journey.

The books.

The power.

The suit.

The truth.

He would carry the burden alone.

Unaware that two people had already begun watching him closely.

Lunar.

And Harlina.

Because both of them knew.

Harris was planning something.

And neither intended to let him disappear without a fight.

TO BE CONTINUED...

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI ⚔️ 🖤 📖

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 4: THE EMOTION INSIDE THE HEART (PART 1)

The night remained silent.

The camp that had been filled with arguments, tears, laughter, and promises only a few hours earlier had finally fallen asleep.

The mountains stood beneath the moonlight.

The forest moved gently with the cold wind.

The fountain continued flowing peacefully.

Everyone slept.

Everyone except Harris.

He sat alone near the fountain.

His knees pulled close to his chest.

His head lowered.

The smile he always showed others was gone.

The confidence was gone.

The cheerful attitude was gone.

Only Harris remained.

The real Harris.

The boy who was terrified of losing everyone again.

The boy who had already seen countless deaths.

The boy who was preparing to walk away from the people he loved most.

Tears slowly rolled down his face.

He didn't stop them.

For once...

He allowed himself to cry.

The image of Harlina's face appeared in his mind.

Her tears.

Her voice.

Her fear.

"Don't leave me."

The memory stabbed his heart.

He closed his eyes tightly.

"I'm sorry..."

The words escaped quietly.

The wind carried them away.

A few more tears followed.

"I don't want to leave either."

Silence.

Only the fountain answered.

His hands trembled.

Because deep down...

He wanted nothing more than to stay.

Stay beside Harlina.

Stay beside Koji.

Stay beside Lunar.

Stay beside everyone.

Live peacefully.

Grow older.

Laugh.

Travel.

Enjoy life.

Like a normal person.

But every time he imagined that future—

Omega Void Emperor appeared.

Entire universes burning.

Countless lives disappearing.

Friends dying.

Families disappearing.

Existence collapsing.

The peaceful future shattered.

And Harris knew.

Someone had to stop it.

Even if it meant becoming the villain in his friends' eyes.

Even if it meant walking away.

Even if it meant suffering alone.

He wiped his eyes.

Then closed them.

Slowly.

Carefully.

And called out.

"Creator."

Silence.

"Third Voice."

For a few moments nothing happened.

Then the world faded.

The stars appeared.

Darkness surrounded him.

The endless cosmic realm welcomed him once again.

The Creator stood nearby.

The Third Voice stood beside him.

Both immediately noticed Harris's expression.

The usual smile wasn't there.

Neither was his confidence.

Only determination.

The Third Voice crossed his arms.

"You're crying again."

Harris glared at him.

"That's your first sentence?"

"It was an observation."

"I hate your observations."

The Third Voice laughed.

The Creator shook his head.

Even after everything...

Those two still found ways to annoy him.

Harris took a deep breath.

Then immediately got to the point.

"Train me."

The Third Voice blinked.

The Creator blinked.

Several seconds passed.

Then both started laughing.

Harris frowned.

"What's funny?"

The Third Voice pointed at him.

"That's your problem."

Harris froze.

"What?"

"Your problem."

"Explain."

The Third Voice stepped closer.

Then tapped Harris's chest.

Right above his heart.

The moment he touched it—

Harris felt something.

A presence.

Small.

Faint.

But real.

His eyes widened.

The Creator smiled.

"Did you feel it?"

Harris remained silent.

The warmth continued.

Almost like something sleeping.

Something alive.

Something waiting.

Then slowly...

A smile appeared on his face.

"I understand."

The Third Voice raised an eyebrow.

"That was faster than expected."

Harris looked toward them.

"The answer is emotion."

The Creator nodded.

"Correct."

The stars around them glowed brighter.

The Third Voice smiled.

"The power you sealed never disappeared."

"The suit never disappeared."

"The Void never disappeared."

"They are sleeping."

Harris listened carefully.

The Creator continued.

"And emotions are the key."

Silence.

The warmth inside his chest became stronger.

Like a heartbeat.

Like a distant voice.

Waiting.

Watching.

The realization excited him.

If emotions were the key—

Then there was a path forward.

A way to become stronger.

A way to stop Omega Void Emperor.

A way to protect everyone.

The Third Voice suddenly became serious.

"But there is a problem."

Harris immediately frowned.

Of course there was a problem.

There was always a problem.

"What now?"

The Third Voice pointed directly at him.

"You."

"...Me?"

"Yes."

The Creator sighed.

"Your emotions are dangerous."

Harris looked confused.

The Third Voice continued.

"You care too much."

The answer surprised him.

"What kind of problem is that?"

"A very big one."

The Creator stepped forward.

"If you awaken your power through grief..."

The stars shifted.

A terrifying vision appeared.

A version of Harris standing alone.

Darkness covering his body.

Eyes filled with despair.

Everything around him destroyed.

The image felt familiar.

Too familiar.

Harris immediately understood.

Omega Void Emperor.

The Creator nodded.

"Exactly."

Silence.

The message was clear.

Pain could awaken power.

But pain could also corrupt it.

The Third Voice crossed his arms.

"We're allowing only two paths."

"Happy emotions."

"Anger."

"No despair."

"No hopelessness."

"No self-destruction."

Harris stared.

Then slowly smiled.

The smile looked harmless.

Too harmless.

The Creator immediately narrowed his eyes.

The Third Voice narrowed his eyes too.

They knew that smile.

It was the smile Harris used whenever he was planning something stupid.

"You are absolutely going to ignore us."

Harris placed a hand on his chest dramatically.

"I'm offended."

"You should be."

The Creator sighed.

The Third Voice sighed.

Both of them already knew.

Harris had understood their warning.

And he had probably already started planning around it.

Still…

Neither said anything else.

Because some lessons had to be learned naturally.

Eventually Harris nodded.

"Fine."

"I understand."

The Third Voice looked unconvinced.

The Creator looked unconvinced.

Harris looked innocent.

Nobody believed him.

Not even Harris.

The conversation continued.

Then suddenly Harris remembered something important.

The arrow.

Immediately his expression changed.

The joking atmosphere disappeared.

"One more thing."

The Creator looked at him.

"The arrow."

Instantly both cosmic beings became serious.

The stars around them darkened.

The Third Voice stepped forward.

"So they attacked you."

Harris nodded.

"Yes."

Silence followed.

Then Harris asked the question.

"Who was it?"

The Creator and Third Voice exchanged glances.

For the first time...

Neither answered immediately.

That alone made Harris uneasy.

Finally the Creator spoke.

"A version of you."

Silence.

Complete silence.

Harris blinked.

Once.

Twice.

Then a smile slowly appeared.

A calm smile.

A dangerous smile.

A smile neither cosmic being expected.

The Third Voice frowned.

"That's your reaction?"

Harris shrugged.

"What reaction did you expect?"

"Shock."

"Fear."

"Confusion."

Harris laughed.

Instead of fear...

Excitement appeared in his eyes.

"So it begins."

The Third Voice looked confused.

The Creator looked confused.

Harris folded his arms.

"If Omega Void Emperor is already sending versions of me..."

His smile widened.

"...then that means I'm already affecting his plans."

Neither cosmic being could read his thoughts.

Which was unusual.

Very unusual.

The Third Voice narrowed his eyes.

"What are you planning?"

Harris smiled.

"Let's wait and watch."

Even the Creator couldn't understand his idea.

The atmosphere became strangely silent.

Then the warmth inside Harris's chest appeared again.

Stronger this time.

A familiar warmth.

Comfortable.

Gentle.

Safe.

His vision slowly faded.

The cosmic realm disappeared.

The stars vanished.

The darkness dissolved.

And Harris returned to reality.

When he opened his eyes…

Everything was quiet.

The moon still shined above.

The fountain continued flowing.

The cold wind brushed across his face.

Then he noticed something.

Warmth.

Very close warmth.

He slowly looked down.

And froze.

Harlina was sleeping beside him.

No.

Not beside him.

Practically attached to him.

Her arms were wrapped tightly around him.

Her head rested against his chest.

Her face was slightly red even while sleeping.

She looked completely peaceful.

Completely safe.

Completely unaware of the war approaching.

A small smile appeared on Harris's face.

The warmth he felt earlier finally made sense.

It was her.

The same warmth.

The same comfort.

The same feeling.

His fingers gently moved through her hair.

For several moments he simply watched her sleep.

Then suddenly—

She spoke.

Softly.

Half asleep.

"D-don't leave me alone..."

Harris froze.

His heart stopped.

The words struck harder than any attack.

Her voice sounded frightened.

Like a child afraid of losing someone important.

A tear formed in Harris's eye.

Then another.

Before he realized it—

He was crying again.

A weak laugh escaped.

"You're making this difficult."

His voice shook.

He gently leaned forward.

Then kissed her forehead.

A long gentle kiss.

Filled with everything he couldn't say.

Everything he couldn't explain.

Everything he couldn't promise.

"I'm sorry."

Another tear fell.

"I really am."

The night remained silent.

Only the fountain listened.

Only the stars witnessed the moment.

And for the first time since learning about Omega Void Emperor...

Harris made a decision.

If emotions truly awakened power...

Then he would awaken it.

No matter how long it took.

No matter how painful it became.

No matter what he had to sacrifice.

The next morning would mark the beginning of that path.

And somewhere deep inside his heart...

Something sleeping had already begun to awaken.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 4: THE TRAINING OF HAPPINESS (PART 2)

The first rays of sunlight slowly appeared above the mountains.

Golden light spread across the campsite.

The stars disappeared.

The cold night slowly surrendered to morning.

Birds began singing throughout the forest.

The peaceful sounds echoed between the trees.

For most people, it was another beautiful morning.

For Harris—

It was the beginning of his training.

The beginning of a path that would eventually lead him toward the three books, the Divine Suit, and Omega Void Emperor.

He carefully looked down.

Harlina was still sleeping.

Her arms remained wrapped around him.

Like she was afraid he would disappear.

A small smile appeared on his face.

Despite everything…

Moments like this made him wish the future threat didn't exist.

He gently brushed away a strand of hair from her face.

The peaceful expression on her face almost convinced him to abandon his plans.

Almost.

But not completely.

Because deep inside his mind—

He could still see universes burning.

He could still hear the Creator's warning.

He could still remember the arrows.

The threat was real.

And every second mattered.

Slowly and carefully, Harris moved.

Trying not to wake her.

Trying not to disturb her sleep.

After several difficult moments, he finally managed to place her against a folded blanket nearby.

Harlina unconsciously hugged the blanket.

Then immediately mumbled—

"Harris..."

The boy froze.

A second later she returned to sleep.

Harris smiled.

"You really don't make this easy."

He stood up.

Then quietly left the campsite.

A few minutes later—

Harris stood at the highest point of the fountain.

The morning breeze moved through his hair.

His eyes were completely different from yesterday.

Focused.

Determined.

Calculating.

He crossed his arms.

"Emotion."

The word echoed in his mind.

The key to awakening his power.

The key to speaking with the suit.

The key to unlocking everything.

But one question remained.

How?

How could he create those emotions?

The answer arrived surprisingly quickly.

Happiness.

If positive emotions strengthened the connection—

Then he would create as much happiness as possible.

A dangerous smile appeared.

The kind of smile that usually meant trouble.

Without warning—

Harris jumped from the fountain.

Landed perfectly.

And immediately sprinted toward the forest.

Several hours passed.

The campsite remained quiet.

Everyone continued sleeping peacefully.

Until—

"HARRIS?!"

"HARRIS?!"

"HARRIS WHERE ARE YOU?!"

Harlina suddenly woke up.

The first thing she noticed—

He was gone.

Panic immediately appeared on her face.

The memories of last night returned instantly.

The fear.

The secret.

The threat.

The possibility that he might leave.

She jumped to her feet.

Searching everywhere.

The entire campsite began waking up.

Koji emerged from his tent.

"What happened?"

"Harris is missing!"

Immediately everyone became alert.

Meanwhile—

Far inside the forest—

Harris was carrying enough fruit to feed an army.

Several bags hung from his shoulders.

Flowers were stuffed inside his hoodie.

More flowers were tucked beneath his arms.

A giant basket rested on his head.

And somehow—

He was smiling.

Thirty minutes later—

He finally returned.

The moment he entered the campsite—

Everyone froze.

"What..."

Reku blinked.

"...happened to you?"

Harris proudly raised both hands.

"Good morning!"

Nobody answered.

Because the sight before them was ridiculous.

The legendary Void Walker.

The hero who defeated Omega Crimson Eclipse.

The strongest warrior of their generation.

Standing in front of them.

Covered in flowers.

Holding fruit.

Looking like a traveling fruit salesman.

The silence lasted several seconds.

Then—

Everyone burst into laughter.

Even Koji laughed.

Even Lunar smiled.

Even Harlina couldn't stop herself.

And for the first time that morning—

Harris felt it.

A small warmth inside his chest.

Tiny.

Weak.

But real.

His smile widened.

The training was working.

Harlina immediately marched toward him.

Then grabbed his ear.

Hard.

"OW!"

"Where did you go?!"

"The forest."

"WHY?!"

"Fruit."

"WE HAVE FRUIT!"

"Not enough fruit."

The entire campsite laughed again.

For a brief moment—

Everything felt normal.

And Harris silently treasured that feeling.

Because he didn't know how many moments like this remained.

After breakfast—

His expression changed.

The training had to continue.

He stood up.

Then pointed toward everyone.

"Stone game."

Silence.

"No."

Koji answered immediately.

"No."

Reku agreed.

"No."

Roku agreed.

"No."

Lina agreed.

"No."

Mika agreed.

"No."

Lunar agreed.

Absolutely everyone rejected the idea.

Harris blinked.

"That was fast."

Harlina crossed her arms.

"You are injured."

"Minor injuries."

"HARRIS."

"Moderate injuries."

"HARRIS."

"Okay fine."

Everyone stared.

"You are seriously injured."

"Thank you."

The group looked exhausted already.

Then Harris did something nobody expected.

He walked toward a nearby rock.

Everyone watched.

Confused.

Then—

BANG.

He slammed his shoulder against it.

The entire campsite froze.

"HARRIS!"

Before anyone could stop him—

BANG.

Another impact.

BANG.

Another.

Pain exploded through his body.

But Harris didn't stop.

The warmth in his chest increased slightly.

Emotion.

Determination.

Willpower.

Pain.

Everything mixed together.

Koji immediately grabbed him.

"ARE YOU INSANE?!"

"Probably."

"THAT WASN'T A JOKE!"

"I know."

The atmosphere became tense.

Then Harris looked directly at everyone.

Especially Harlina.

Especially Lunar.

"If I want to stay beside you all..."

His voice became serious.

"...I need to become stronger."

Nobody answered.

Because for once—

His words didn't sound reckless.

They sounded sincere.

Koji slowly exhaled.

Then shocked everyone.

"Fine."

Everyone looked toward him.

Koji pointed at Harris.

"I'll do the stone game."

Harris froze.

Then smiled.

One by one—

Others began agreeing.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

Eventually almost everyone.

Except two people.

Lunar.

And Harlina.

Neither moved.

Neither agreed.

Neither trusted what Harris was trying to do.

Because unlike the others—

They had seen something terrifying.

Last night.

The fear in his eyes.

The tears.

The secrets.

The burden.

They knew this wasn't training.

Not completely.

This was desperation.

Harris noticed immediately.

"You two aren't joining?"

"No."

Lunar answered.

"No."

Harlina answered.

Harris sighed.

Then smiled again.

A smile that somehow made both of them even more worried.

He tried joking.

He tried teasing.

He tried provoking.

He even called Lunar "Old Master."

Nothing worked.

Neither moved.

Finally Harris shrugged.

"Fine."

He turned around.

Then started walking toward the forest.

Everyone immediately stood.

"HARRIS!"

He waved casually.

"Let's meet tonight."

"HARRIS!"

"I'm going training."

"HARRIS!"

"Bye."

Then he ran.

Straight into the forest.

Ignoring every protest behind him.

Ignoring every warning.

Ignoring every shout.

Because now—

He had a new objective.

The power.

The suit.

The voice inside his heart.

As he ran deeper into the forest—

The smile slowly disappeared.

His expression became serious.

The trees grew denser.

The sunlight weakened.

The sounds of the campsite vanished.

Soon—

Only Harris remained.

He stopped near a clearing.

Then closed his eyes.

His hand touched his chest.

The same warmth appeared again.

"Suit."

Silence.

Nothing happened.

"Suit."

Still nothing.

"Can you hear me?"

No response.

Harris frowned.

Then sat beneath a tree.

Trying again.

And again.

And again.

Until suddenly—

A strange feeling appeared.

Not from his heart.

Not from the suit.

From somewhere nearby.

Someone was watching him.

His eyes opened instantly.

The presence felt familiar.

Very familiar.

Harris slowly stood.

Then looked toward the trees.

The bushes.

The shadows.

And finally—

A smile appeared.

Because he had already figured out who it was.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 4: THE ARROWS OF THE MULTIVERSE (PART 3)

The forest had become completely silent.

Not the peaceful silence of nature.

Not the calm silence Harris had enjoyed earlier.

This silence felt different.

Like something was hiding.

Watching.

Waiting.

Harris slowly turned toward the trees behind him.

A small smile appeared on his face.

The presence wasn't hostile.

In fact…

It was painfully familiar.

He folded his arms.

Then spoke loudly.

"You can come out now."

Silence.

Nothing moved.

Not a leaf.

Not a branch.

Not a shadow.

Harris sighed dramatically.

"Fine."

He pointed toward a group of bushes.

"Harlina."

The bushes immediately shook.

Several birds flew away.

Harris looked toward another tree.

"Lunar."

Silence.

Then Lunar slowly stepped out.

Looking completely defeated.

Harris immediately started laughing.

The scene was too obvious.

Harlina finally emerged from the bushes.

Her face was red.

Partly from embarrassment.

Partly from anger.

Partly because she had been discovered.

"You two are terrible spies."

Harlina crossed her arms.

"We weren't spying."

Harris raised an eyebrow.

"No?"

"No."

"Then why were you hiding behind a bush?"

Silence.

"Exactly."

Lunar sighed.

The lie had failed instantly.

Harris sat down beneath a tree.

Then pointed at them.

"Sit."

Neither moved.

"That wasn't a request."

Both finally sat.

Still glaring at him.

The atmosphere became awkward.

Then Harris smiled.

"So."

"So?"

"How long?"

Lunar answered.

"Since you left the camp."

Harris froze.

"You followed me the entire time?"

"Yes."

The Void Walker covered his face.

His dignity had been completely destroyed.

Harlina looked proud.

"As it should be."

The three sat quietly.

The wind moved gently through the forest.

For a few moments nobody spoke.

Then Harlina finally broke the silence.

"Why?"

Harris looked toward her.

She looked serious.

More serious than usual.

"Why are you trying so hard?"

The question hit harder than expected.

He looked away.

Because he knew the answer.

But he couldn't tell them.

Not fully.

Not yet.

After several moments—

He smiled.

"The future."

Harlina's expression fell.

That answer again.

Always the future.

Always the threat.

Always the burden.

Never himself.

Never his feelings.

Lunar understood immediately.

He had known Harris long enough.

The boy sitting before him was terrified.

Not of dying.

Not of pain.

Not of failure.

He was terrified of losing people.

Again.

And that fear was driving everything.

Lunar opened his mouth.

Ready to say something.

Then—

Danger.

Harris's eyes widened instantly.

Every instinct inside his body screamed.

Move.

Now.

Without hesitation—

He stood.

The forest around him seemed to slow.

The air itself changed.

A familiar presence appeared.

The same one from before.

The same feeling.

The same killing intent.

Arrow.

His head snapped toward the right.

Then toward the left.

Two directions.

His blood froze.

Two arrows.

Not aimed at him.

Aimed at—

"HARLINA!"

"LUNAR!"

Both looked confused.

They didn't understand.

Everything happened too quickly.

The arrows had already been released.

The speed was terrifying.

Even faster than before.

Even deadlier than before.

For one brief moment—

Harris saw the future.

Blood.

Death.

Loss.

No.

Never again.

His legs exploded forward.

The ground beneath him cracked.

Every muscle screamed.

Every injury reopened.

Pain surged through his body.

He ignored all of it.

One thought remained.

Protect them.

Nothing else mattered.

Not the mission.

Not the books.

Not the power.

Only them.

The distance vanished.

The arrows closed in.

Harlina still hadn't moved.

Lunar still hadn't reacted.

Harris arrived first.

Then—

THUD.

THUD.

Agony.

Pure agony.

The first arrow pierced his left shoulder.

The second buried itself near his chest.

The impact sent him backward.

Blood immediately stained his clothes.

The force nearly knocked him unconscious.

Yet he remained standing.

Barely.

His body trembled.

His vision blurred.

His breathing became unstable.

But before anything else—

He turned toward them.

"Are..."

Blood escaped his mouth.

"...you two okay?"

Silence.

Harlina froze.

Lunar froze.

Neither could process what had happened.

The arrows had been meant for them.

Harris had jumped in front of both.

Without hesitation.

Without fear.

Without thinking about himself.

Harlina's eyes filled with tears instantly.

"H-Harris..."

The sight broke her heart.

Blood covered his clothes.

Blood covered his hands.

Blood dripped onto the ground.

Yet somehow—

He was smiling.

The same stupid smile.

The same smile that always appeared whenever he was trying to reassure others.

Lunar clenched his fists.

For the first time—

Fear appeared in his eyes.

Because he realized something.

This wasn't training anymore.

The war had already begun.

And they were already targets.

Harris slowly turned.

His smile disappeared.

The warmth inside his chest exploded.

Not happiness.

Not determination.

Anger.

Pure anger.

Someone had targeted Harlina.

Someone had targeted Lunar.

Someone had tried to take people away from him.

Again.

The forest suddenly trembled.

The wind changed direction.

The air itself felt heavier.

Harlina noticed it first.

A faint black aura.

Then silver.

Then violet.

Energy.

Energy that shouldn't exist anymore.

Energy that had supposedly disappeared.

Energy that Harris himself believed was sealed.

His eyes slowly opened.

The color had changed.

For one brief moment—

The familiar Void Walker eyes returned.

The Creator's words echoed inside his mind.

"Anger can awaken it."

The warmth became fire.

The fire became power.

The power became instinct.

And instinct became action.

The world slowed.

Every sound disappeared.

Every distraction vanished.

Only one target remained.

Somewhere deep within the forest.

Watching.

Waiting.

Harris smiled.

A terrifying smile.

The smile of a hunter.

The smile of a warrior.

The smile of the Void Walker.

"I found you."

Then—

He vanished.

Harlina gasped.

Lunar's eyes widened.

Neither could follow his movement.

Not even for a second.

The trees shook violently.

A shockwave echoed through the forest.

Then another.

Then silence.

Only two seconds passed.

Two seconds.

That was all.

A distant scream echoed through the trees.

Then stopped.

Everything became quiet.

A moment later—

Harris reappeared.

Standing exactly where he had vanished.

Blood still dripping.

Aura fading.

Power disappearing.

The awakening had only lasted a few moments.

But it had been enough.

His knees suddenly gave out.

The adrenaline vanished.

The pain returned.

Every wound screamed simultaneously.

His body finally remembered how injured it was.

The world spun around him.

His vision darkened.

Harlina immediately ran toward him.

Lunar followed.

Both arrived just as he started falling.

Before losing consciousness—

A weak smile appeared.

The familiar warmth remained inside his chest.

The same warmth.

The same power.

The same friend he thought had disappeared.

His eyes slowly closed.

Then he whispered—

"You came back..."

And collapsed.

Completely unconscious.

Harlina immediately caught him.

Tears streamed down her face.

"HARRIS!"

No response.

Lunar checked his pulse.

Still alive.

Barely.

The injuries were severe.

Far too severe.

The arrows alone were dangerous.

Combined with everything else—

It was becoming critical.

Harlina's hands trembled.

For the first time since the war ended—

She felt genuine fear.

Not fear for herself.

Fear of losing him.

Again.

Lunar looked toward the direction Harris had attacked.

The attacker was gone.

Only traces of destroyed trees remained.

Evidence that something powerful had happened.

Evidence that Harris's power had returned.

At least partially.

But that realization brought little comfort.

Because the boy lying before them looked worse than ever.

The forest suddenly felt colder.

Much colder.

Lunar immediately stood.

"We're taking him back."

Harlina nodded.

No arguments.

No hesitation.

The situation had gone far beyond that.

Together they lifted Harris.

And began running toward the campsite.

Unaware that far beyond their universe...

Someone was watching.

A figure sitting upon a throne of darkness.

A figure whose face looked exactly like Harris.

Omega Void Emperor slowly opened his eyes.

And smiled.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 4: THE BOY WHO REFUSES TO STAY DOWN (PART 4)

The moment Harlina and Lunar emerged from the forest carrying Harris, the entire campsite fell silent.

Everyone immediately stood up.

The laughter from earlier vanished.

The peaceful atmosphere disappeared.

Only shock remained.

Koji was the first to react.

"HARRIS!"

He rushed forward.

The others followed behind him.

Nobody was prepared for what they saw.

Blood covered Harris's clothes.

The arrows were still embedded in his body.

His face had become pale.

His breathing was weak.

Yet somehow...

A smile still remained on his face.

The sight made everyone's hearts sink.

Harlina lowered her head.

Tears continued falling.

Lunar's expression remained unusually serious.

Koji immediately understood.

Something terrible had happened.

"What happened?"

Nobody answered immediately.

Because neither Harlina nor Lunar fully knew how to explain it.

How could they explain another Harris?

How could they explain the arrows?

How could they explain the sudden awakening?

How could they explain the war that was approaching?

Finally Lunar spoke.

"We need a hospital."

That was enough.

Nobody argued.

Within minutes everyone began moving.

Supplies were packed.

Transportation was prepared.

The relaxing trip was officially over.

Their only concern now was Harris.

Meanwhile...

Inside the space between consciousness and unconsciousness...

Harris opened his eyes.

The familiar cosmic darkness surrounded him.

Stars floated endlessly around him.

The Creator stood nearby.

The Third Voice stood beside him.

Both looked completely shocked.

Which immediately amused Harris.

"Why do you both look like that?"

Neither answered.

The Third Voice stared.

The Creator stared.

Several moments passed.

Finally—

"Are you insane?"

Harris blinked.

"That's a rude greeting."

The Creator pointed toward him.

"You are nearly dead."

"Oh."

"OH?!"

The Third Voice nearly exploded.

"You got pierced by two arrows!"

"Yes."

"You reopened multiple injuries!"

"Yes."

"You overtrained!"

"Yes."

"You awakened power through sheer stubbornness!"

"Yes."

Silence.

Then Harris tilted his head.

"So?"

The Creator froze.

The Third Voice froze.

For the first time in centuries...

Neither knew how to answer.

Because Harris genuinely didn't understand why they were shocked.

To him—

Everything made sense.

Someone attacked his friends.

He protected them.

His emotions awakened.

Problem solved.

Simple.

The Creator covered his face.

The Third Voice looked toward the stars.

Both were questioning reality.

Meanwhile Harris folded his arms.

"So."

"So?"

"How do I talk to the suit?"

Silence.

The cosmic realm itself seemed to freeze.

The Creator slowly lowered his hand.

The Third Voice stared at him.

Neither could believe what they were hearing.

"You are dying."

Harris nodded.

"Probably."

"And your first concern is the suit?"

"Obviously."

The Third Voice looked like he wanted to throw Harris into another universe.

The Creator sighed heavily.

Then something unexpected happened.

Both of them smiled.

Because for the first time—

They realized something.

They had underestimated him.

Not his power.

Not his intelligence.

His determination.

They had assumed he would hesitate.

They had assumed fear would slow him.

They had assumed uncertainty would weaken him.

Instead—

He had already begun moving forward.

No matter the cost.

The Creator finally nodded.

"You've changed."

Harris smiled.

"A little."

The Third Voice shook his head.

"No."

"You've changed a lot."

The stars glowed brighter around them.

The Creator looked directly into Harris's eyes.

"You exceeded our expectations."

For once—

Harris didn't joke.

Didn't laugh.

Didn't deflect.

He simply smiled.

Because deep down—

The only thing he cared about was protecting everyone.

Nothing else mattered.

Suddenly—

The Creator raised his hand.

A powerful force pushed Harris backward.

"What?"

"Go back."

The Third Voice crossed his arms.

"Your friends are worried."

Harris sighed dramatically.

"Again?"

"YES AGAIN."

The Creator pointed toward reality.

"Leave."

The world around Harris began dissolving.

The stars vanished.

The darkness shattered.

His vision blurred.

The last thing he heard was—

"Don't die before learning how to talk to the suit."

Then everything disappeared.

Reality returned.

The sound of wheels.

The sound of voices.

The sound of panic.

The smell of medicine.

The shaking of a moving vehicle.

Harris slowly opened his eyes.

Everyone surrounded him.

Koji.

Lunar.

Harlina.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

Every single one looked worried.

Extremely worried.

The sight made him smile.

Then he casually spoke.

"Can I have some water?"

Nobody reacted.

Nobody noticed.

Everyone was still arguing about hospitals.

Routes.

Treatments.

Emergency plans.

Only two people froze.

Harlina.

And Lunar.

Because they heard him.

The two slowly looked toward Harris.

Then their eyes widened.

"HARRIS!"

Everyone immediately turned.

The vehicle nearly exploded into chaos.

"HARRIS IS AWAKE!"

"WHAT?!"

"HE'S AWAKE?!"

Koji nearly climbed over three people.

"HARRIS!"

Harris smiled.

"Hi."

Koji looked ready to cry and punch him simultaneously.

Then something happened.

Something that horrified everyone.

Harris casually grabbed one arrow.

And pulled it out.

Blood immediately appeared.

Everyone froze.

Then—

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING?!"

The entire vehicle shook from the yelling.

Harris looked confused.

"What?"

"WHAT DO YOU MEAN WHAT?!"

Another arrow followed.

He pulled that one out too.

Everyone stared in horror.

Even Lunar looked speechless.

Harlina looked ready to faint.

The Void Walker casually examined the arrows.

"Hmm."

Then tossed them away.

Like they were toothpicks.

The entire vehicle entered silence.

The kind of silence that appears before an explosion.

Then—

The explosion happened.

Ten minutes later—

Everyone was yelling.

At once.

Simultaneously.

Continuously.

Without stopping.

Koji yelled.

Lunar yelled.

Reku yelled.

Roku yelled.

Lina yelled.

Mika yelled.

Even the driver joined.

And finally—

Harlina slapped him.

Hard.

The sound echoed through the vehicle.

Everyone froze.

Even Harris.

Tears appeared in her eyes.

She grabbed his hoodie.

Then shouted.

"STOP ACTING LIKE A HERO!"

Silence.

Her voice trembled.

"You're not some god!"

Another tear fell.

"You're a normal boy!"

More tears.

"My boyfriend!"

The entire vehicle became silent.

Nobody interrupted.

Nobody joked.

Nobody moved.

Because they could hear the fear in her voice.

The fear of losing him.

Again.

Harris lowered his head.

For once—

He accepted every word.

Without arguing.

Without joking.

Without smiling.

He listened quietly.

The others continued.

And Harris accepted everything.

Every complaint.

Every insult.

Every lecture.

Because he knew they were worried.

Eventually—

He raised his hand.

"Can I say something?"

Nobody answered.

"Please?"

Koji sighed.

"Fine."

Harris looked out the window.

Then spoke quietly.

"The wars before…"

Everyone listened.

"…were different."

The atmosphere changed instantly.

Harris's smile disappeared.

"This time..."

His voice became serious.

"...we're going to fight me."

Silence.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody laughed.

Because the truth sounded terrifying.

Versions of Harris.

Many of them.

Controlled.

Stronger.

Corrupted.

Koji finally spoke.

"So what?"

Everyone looked toward him.

Koji pointed directly at Harris.

"You are still our friend."

Silence.

"You are still my student."

Another silence.

"You are still Harris."

His voice became firm.

"Not a god."

"Not a monster."

"Not a weapon."

"Just Harris."

For a moment—

Nobody spoke.

Then Harris smiled.

A genuine smile.

The kind he rarely showed.

"Okay, Master."

Koji immediately yelled.

"STOP CALLING ME MASTER!"

The vehicle exploded into laughter.

Even Harlina smiled through her tears.

Several hours later—

The group returned to the campsite.

After emergency treatment and proper bandaging—

Harris now looked ridiculous.

Bandages covered almost his entire body.

His arms.

His shoulders.

His chest.

His forehead.

Everything.

Reku stared.

"You look like a mummy."

Everyone laughed.

Even Harris.

"Ancient Void Walker."

"Very ancient."

The jokes continued.

For a brief moment—

The fear disappeared.

Then Harris stood up.

Everyone froze.

He grabbed a hoodie.

Put it on.

Then smiled.

"Volleyball tomorrow?"

The entire campsite became silent.

"..."

"..."

"..."

"WHAT?!"

The entire group shouted.

"You are injured!"

"You are weak!"

"You almost died!"

Harris blinked.

"So?"

That single word destroyed everyone's patience.

Before he could escape—

Lunar grabbed a rope.

Harlina grabbed another.

The rest immediately helped.

Three minutes later—

Harris was tied.

Completely.

Arms.

Legs.

Waist.

Everything.

He stared blankly.

"What happened?"

"You are resting."

Lunar answered.

"I don't need rest."

"You absolutely need rest."

"I'm fine."

"No."

"I'm healthy."

"No."

"I can walk."

"No."

"I can run."

"NO."

The argument continued for nearly an hour.

Eventually—

The impossible happened.

Harris surrendered.

And everyone celebrated.

Because defeating Omega Crimson Eclipse had apparently been easier than convincing Harris to rest.

The sun slowly began setting.

The evening sky turned orange.

The camp became peaceful again.

Yet everyone knew.

Something had changed.

Something important.

The war was no longer a distant threat.

It had already begun.

And Harris...

Had already taken the first step toward awakening his power once more.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 4: THE PROMISE OF THE NIGHT (PART 5)

The orange light of the sunset slowly faded beyond the mountains.

The sky darkened little by little.

The forest became calm once more.

The events of the day still lingered in everyone's minds.

The arrows.

The blood.

The awakening.

The terrifying power that had briefly returned.

And most importantly—

The fact that Harris had almost died.

Again.

Because of that...

Nobody was willing to leave him alone.

Not even for a minute.

Harris sat in the center of the campsite.

Still wrapped in bandages.

Still looking like a walking mummy.

Still tied with enough rope to capture a wild beast.

And around him—

Everyone sat in a circle.

Watching him.

Directly.

Without blinking.

Five minutes passed.

Nobody looked away.

Ten minutes passed.

Still nothing.

Fifteen minutes passed.

The staring contest continued.

Finally Harris broke.

"What?"

Nobody answered.

Everyone continued staring.

Harris pointed at himself.

"Why are you all looking at me like I'm some strange creature?"

Reku immediately replied.

"Because strange creatures usually behave more normally."

The entire campsite burst into laughter.

Even Harris couldn't stop himself.

Then Lina crossed her arms.

"If we blink, you'll probably escape."

Roku nodded.

"If we sleep, you'll probably run into another forest."

Mika added—

"And fight another version of yourself."

Koji sighed.

"Then nearly die again."

Lunar remained completely serious.

"Then smile afterward."

Silence.

Everyone slowly nodded.

The description was accurate.

Too accurate.

Harris covered his face.

"I hate all of you."

"No you don't."

Harlina immediately answered.

"Unfortunately."

Koji added.

The camp erupted into laughter again.

For the first time that evening—

Harris felt something warm.

Not power.

Not awakening.

Not training.

Something simpler.

Happiness.

Real happiness.

The warmth inside his chest responded slightly.

The same feeling from before.

Small.

Gentle.

Almost like a sleeping heartbeat.

His eyes lowered.

A quiet smile appeared.

Maybe...

The Creator was right.

Maybe positive emotions really were the key.

The evening continued peacefully.

People told stories.

Shared memories.

Talked about old academy days.

Remembered embarrassing moments.

Especially Harris's embarrassing moments.

Most of the stories were somehow about him.

Which felt unfair.

Several hours later—

Dinner was finally prepared.

The smell spread throughout the campsite.

Everyone gathered together.

Except one person.

Harris.

Because he was still tied up.

He stared at the food.

Then stared at the ropes.

Then stared at everyone.

"..."

"..."

"..."

"Help."

Nobody moved.

"Please?"

Still nobody moved.

The group enjoyed the view.

Finally Harlina sighed.

Then picked up a spoon.

Immediately Harris sensed danger.

"No."

"Yes."

"No."

"Yes."

"I can eat by myself."

"No you can't."

"Why?"

"Because you're tied."

Harris realized she had a point.

A terrible point.

But still a point.

Several moments later—

The legendary Void Walker was being fed dinner.

In front of everyone.

Like a child.

His face turned red.

"I hate this."

"No you don't."

Harlina replied immediately.

She gently fed him another spoonful.

The others watched with amusement.

Then Koji suddenly spoke.

"Harris."

"What?"

"You said you're embarrassed?"

"Yes."

Koji grinned.

"Then what about the railway station?"

Silence.

The entire group suddenly became interested.

Harlina instantly froze.

Koji continued.

"You carried her on your shoulder through half the city."

Silence.

Everyone slowly turned toward Harlina.

Her face immediately became red.

Then redder.

Then somehow even redder.

"HARRIS!"

The camp exploded into laughter.

Harris immediately surrendered.

"Sorry."

"TO ME?"

"Sorry."

"THAT'S NOT AN EXPLANATION!"

Another explosion of laughter followed.

For a little while...

The war disappeared.

The future disappeared.

The threat disappeared.

Everyone simply enjoyed being together.

Night eventually arrived.

The campfire burned quietly.

One by one—

People entered their tents.

The laughter faded.

The conversations ended.

The forest became silent.

Only three people remained awake.

Harris.

Harlina.

And Lunar.

Harris looked toward them.

"You two should sleep."

"No."

Lunar replied instantly.

"No."

Harlina replied instantly.

The synchronized answer shocked even them.

Harris sighed.

"I'm not going anywhere."

Both stared at him.

The silence itself said—

We don't believe you.

Harris looked offended.

"I promised."

"You also promised to rest."

Lunar replied.

"..."

"You also promised not to overtrain."

Harlina added.

"..."

"You also promised not to get injured."

"..."

"You also promised—"

"Okay."

Harris surrendered.

The evidence was overwhelming.

Eventually all three entered the tent.

Harris expected them to finally relax.

Instead—

They brought more rope.

The moment he saw it—

He knew disaster had arrived.

"No."

"Yes."

"No."

"Yes."

"Harlina."

"No."

"Lunar."

"No."

The verdict had already been decided.

Several minutes later—

Harris was once again restrained.

Except this time—

The situation became even worse.

His right hand was tied to Lunar's wrist.

His left hand was tied to Harlina's wrist.

One leg connected to Lunar.

The other connected to Harlina.

Then Harlina hugged him.

And immediately fell asleep.

Harris stared at the tent ceiling.

"..."

"..."

"..."

"This is kidnapping."

Nobody answered.

Because both guards were asleep.

The Void Walker had officially become a prisoner.

An hour passed.

Then another.

Then another.

Eventually Harris opened one eye.

Still asleep.

He carefully moved.

Slowly.

Very slowly.

Trying to escape.

The ropes shifted slightly.

Success.

Another movement.

More success.

Then suddenly—

A strange feeling appeared.

Not outside.

Inside.

His chest.

The warmth returned.

Stronger than ever before.

Harris immediately froze.

The feeling spread through his entire body.

His heartbeat accelerated.

The air around him seemed to disappear.

The warmth became energy.

The energy became light.

The light became consciousness.

His vision blurred.

For a moment he thought—

The Creator.

Or the Third Voice.

But something felt different.

Completely different.

Ancient.

Familiar.

Powerful.

Alive.

His eyes widened.

"No way..."

The warmth answered.

For the first time.

A voice.

A real voice.

Not the Creator.

Not the Third Voice.

Something else.

Something that had been sleeping inside him all this time.

Something connected to his soul.

Something connected to the Divine Suit.

Something connected to the Void Walker itself.

The voice spoke.

And Harris froze completely.

Because the very first words were—

"So... you're finally ready to talk."

Darkness swallowed his consciousness.

The warmth expanded endlessly.

And for the first time since the war ended...

Harris finally met the being inside the Divine Suit.

Far away...

Beyond countless universes...

Beyond endless realities...

Beyond the reach of time itself...

Omega Void Emperor slowly opened his eyes.

A smile appeared on his face.

Because he had felt it too.

The awakening.

And for the first time...

The ruler of countless destroyed universes whispered a single name.

"Harris..."

The next stage of the war had begun.

TO BE CONTINUED...

END OF CHAPTER 4

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI ⚔️ 🖤 📖

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 5: THE VOICE CALLED "BUDDY" (PART 1)

Darkness surrounded Harris.

Not the darkness of fear.

Not the darkness of the Void.

A calm darkness.

A peaceful darkness.

The kind of darkness that existed before a new beginning.

For a few moments, Harris simply stood there.

Silent.

The warmth he had felt inside his chest continued growing.

Slowly.

Steadily.

Like a heartbeat that had been asleep for years.

Then—

The voice spoke again.

"Harris."

The moment he heard it, his eyes widened.

Unlike the Creator.

Unlike the Third Voice.

This voice felt different.

Warmer.

Closer.

Almost like it had been beside him his entire life.

A smile immediately appeared on Harris's face.

For the first time in many days—

He genuinely looked happy.

"So you finally talked."

The voice remained silent for a second.

Then replied.

"You are surprisingly excited."

"Of course."

"Why?"

"Because everyone keeps speaking in riddles."

The voice laughed softly.

The sound echoed through the darkness.

It was the first time Harris had heard it laugh.

And strangely...

It sounded familiar.

Almost like hearing himself laugh.

Harris crossed his arms.

"Okay."

"Okay?"

"How should I call you?"

The voice seemed surprised.

"You want to give me a name?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because calling you 'The Divine Suit Entity Living Inside My Soul' sounds too long."

Silence.

Then laughter.

Actual laughter.

The voice laughed harder than before.

For a moment even Harris started laughing.

The atmosphere became unexpectedly relaxed.

Finally the voice replied.

"You can call me anything."

Harris immediately answered.

"Buddy."

Silence.

The voice paused.

Almost like it wasn't expecting that answer.

"Buddy?"

"Yeah."

"Why Buddy?"

"Because you're helping me."

The darkness became quiet.

The voice didn't answer immediately.

And for some reason—

That silence felt emotional.

Finally the voice replied.

"Okay."

A huge smile appeared on Harris's face.

"Then Buddy it is."

The voice sighed.

"You really are strange."

"Thank you."

"That wasn't a compliment."

"I know."

The voice laughed again.

And for the first time—

Harris felt like he had gained another companion.

Not a weapon.

Not power.

A friend.

A buddy.

Someone he could talk to.

Someone who wasn't hiding behind mysterious clues every five minutes.

At least...

That was what he hoped.

Then Harris suddenly pointed forward dramatically.

"Buddy."

"Yes?"

"Are you ready?"

The voice became confused.

"For what?"

Harris's eyes sparkled.

"Training."

Silence.

Absolute silence.

Then—

"Training?"

"Yes."

"You just met me."

"Yes."

"You're severely injured."

"Yes."

"You nearly died."

"Yes."

"Your body is barely functioning."

"Yes."

"You are physically damaged."

"Yes."

"You are mentally damaged."

"Yes."

"You are emotionally unstable."

"Maybe."

"HARRIS."

"Okay yes."

The voice sounded exhausted already.

Like it had just inherited the world's biggest problem.

Finally Buddy spoke seriously.

"Harris."

"What?"

"You are willing to sacrifice yourself far too easily."

The smile on Harris's face weakened.

Only slightly.

But Buddy noticed.

The voice became softer.

"You don't value your own life enough."

For the first time—

Harris didn't joke.

Didn't laugh.

Didn't argue.

Because deep down—

He knew it was true.

After the war.

After losing his powers.

After seeing the future threat.

After hearing about Omega Void Emperor.

Something inside him had changed.

He wasn't afraid of dying anymore.

Not because he was brave.

Because he believed protecting everyone mattered more.

Buddy sighed.

Then finally spoke.

"We'll help you."

Harris immediately looked up.

"Really?"

"Yes."

A huge smile appeared.

Then Buddy continued.

"But under one condition."

The smile disappeared.

Immediately.

Because conditions always caused problems.

Harris folded his arms.

"What condition?"

"You must not leave your friends behind."

Silence.

The words echoed throughout the darkness.

Harris blinked.

Then frowned.

Then blinked again.

"What?"

"You heard me."

"That's your condition?"

"Yes."

The answer came immediately.

Without hesitation.

Without doubt.

Harris stared.

Completely confused.

"Why?"

Buddy remained silent.

Several moments passed.

Then Harris asked again.

"Why?"

Still silence.

The warmth in his chest continued beating.

But no answer came.

Harris's expression slowly changed.

From confusion.

To frustration.

Then anger.

"Tell me the reason."

"I can't."

"Why?"

"I simply can't."

The silence returned.

And that silence only made Harris angrier.

Because he already knew what he was planning.

Leave alone.

Find the books.

Face Omega Void Emperor.

Protect everyone from a distance.

If nobody followed him—

Nobody would get hurt.

At least that was what he believed.

Then Buddy spoke again.

"If you accept this condition, I'll help you."

Harris clenched his fists.

The darkness around him trembled slightly.

His voice became cold.

"No."

Buddy froze.

"What?"

"No."

The answer was immediate.

Firm.

Determined.

Harris looked directly into the darkness.

"If gaining this power means pulling my friends into danger..."

His eyes sharpened.

"...then I don't need this power."

The words echoed endlessly.

Even Buddy became silent.

For several long moments.

Nothing moved.

Nothing spoke.

Nothing existed except those words.

Then—

The darkness slowly disappeared.

Harris's consciousness returned.

His eyes slowly opened.

Night still surrounded the campsite.

The stars remained overhead.

The campfire had long since gone out.

Everything was quiet.

Everything was peaceful.

Yet Harris felt completely restless.

Then he noticed something.

Harlina.

She was still hugging him.

Tightly.

Like she was afraid to let go.

Her face rested against his shoulder.

Even while sleeping—

Tears remained at the corners of her eyes.

And then—

She whispered again.

"D-Don't leave me alone..."

The words struck harder than any attack.

Harder than any arrow.

Harder than any wound.

Harris froze.

His chest hurt.

Not physically.

Emotionally.

His eyes slowly widened.

Then—

For the first time since learning about Omega Void Emperor—

Tears appeared.

Real tears.

Silent tears.

He carefully touched Harlina's hair.

Then gently kissed her forehead.

"I'm sorry..."

His voice barely escaped.

"I'm sorry..."

Another tear fell.

Because for the first time—

He was beginning to understand something.

Everyone was afraid.

Not only him.

Not only the Creator.

Not only Buddy.

Everyone.

And that realization hurt.

A lot.

Yet despite that—

His determination remained unchanged.

The books.

The threat.

The war.

He still needed answers.

No matter what.

Slowly he closed his eyes again.

Then called out.

"Creator."

Silence.

"Creator."

Nothing.

"Third Voice."

No answer.

His expression darkened.

The frustration returned.

The fear returned.

The helplessness returned.

"Answer me."

Nothing.

He clenched his fists.

"Tell me where the three books are."

No reply.

The darkness inside his heart began growing.

Not because of anger.

Because of desperation.

He needed answers.

But nobody would give them.

And as the night continued—

Harris sat there silently.

Unable to sleep.

Unable to rest.

Unable to stop thinking.

While somewhere far beyond the stars...

An unseen enemy continued watching Universe 4.

And for the first time—

The loneliness inside Harris's heart began returning.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 5: THE WEIGHT OF THE HEART (PART 2)

The night continued.

The forest remained silent.

The cold wind gently moved through the trees.

Everyone around the campsite was sleeping peacefully.

Everyone except Harris.

His eyes remained open.

His mind refused to rest.

The words of Buddy continued echoing inside his head.

"Don't leave your friends behind."

Again.

And again.

And again.

No matter how much he tried to ignore it, the condition kept returning.

Harris slowly looked toward the sleeping faces around him.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

And finally—

Harlina.

All of them trusted him.

All of them believed in him.

All of them were willing to follow him.

And that was exactly what terrified him.

Because he knew what was coming.

The Creator had already warned him.

The Third Voice had already warned him.

Omega Void Emperor was not like Omega Crimson Eclipse.

This enemy wasn't trying to conquer a single world.

He was destroying universes.

Entire realities.

Entire histories.

Entire lives.

And Harris couldn't bear the thought of these people being caught in that nightmare.

His hands trembled.

The frustration inside him grew.

"Creator..."

Silence.

"Third Voice..."

Nothing.

His breathing became heavier.

"Just tell me where the books are."

No answer.

"Please."

Nothing.

The silence became unbearable.

For the first time in a long time—

Harris felt powerless.

Not because he lacked strength.

Because he lacked direction.

He had the will.

He had the determination.

He had the reason to fight.

But he had no path forward.

No clues.

No answers.

No books.

Nothing.

The pressure continued building.

His chest felt tighter.

His thoughts became darker.

His emotions became heavier.

Then suddenly—

He struck the ground beside him.

BANG.

The sound echoed through the darkness.

Harlina shifted slightly in her sleep.

But didn't wake.

Harris lowered his head.

Then hit the ground again.

BANG.

The frustration exploded.

"WHY?!"

Still nothing.

No Creator.

No Third Voice.

No answers.

Only silence.

His hands clenched harder.

His nails dug into his palms.

The helplessness became unbearable.

For years he had protected everyone.

For years he had fought impossible battles.

For years he had carried burdens nobody else could understand.

And now—

When he needed answers most—

Nobody would tell him anything.

His voice cracked.

"Why won't you answer me..."

The pain inside his heart became heavier.

The memories returned.

The war.

The sacrifices.

The suffering.

The loneliness.

The fear.

Everything.

And slowly—

His mind began sinking into darkness.

Not the Void.

Not power.

Just despair.

Then suddenly—

Harris whispered something.

Something that surprised even himself.

"I refuse the suit."

Silence.

The moment those words left his mouth—

The darkness around him seemed to tremble.

For a brief moment—

Nothing happened.

Then—

A familiar voice echoed.

"Harris."

His eyes widened.

Buddy.

The voice sounded calmer than before.

"We're ready."

Harris froze.

The words echoed through his mind.

For the first time—

The suit had accepted him.

Not because of power.

Not because of potential.

Because of his heart.

A weak smile appeared.

A tiny smile.

Yet before he could answer—

Everything spun.

The emotional pressure.

The physical injuries.

The mental exhaustion.

The sleepless nights.

Everything crashed into him at once.

His vision darkened.

The stars above blurred.

The world tilted.

And Harris collapsed.

Morning arrived.

Sunlight slowly spread across the campsite.

Birds sang.

The trees swayed gently.

The world welcomed a new day.

But Harris didn't feel any of it.

His body felt broken.

Every muscle hurt.

Every wound burned.

His head felt heavy.

Even breathing felt difficult.

Slowly—

He opened his eyes.

Pain immediately greeted him.

The kind of pain that made even moving a finger difficult.

He tried sitting up.

Failed.

He tried again.

His entire body trembled.

Eventually he managed to sit.

His breathing became uneven.

The tears he had suppressed all night finally returned.

Not because of physical pain.

Because of everything.

The books.

The threat.

His friends.

The future.

The fear.

The responsibility.

Everything.

For the first time since becoming the Void Walker—

Harris felt truly weak.

Not physically.

Mentally.

He lowered his head.

Trying desperately not to cry.

Trying desperately to stay strong.

Trying desperately to remain Harris.

But today—

He couldn't.

The tears escaped.

One after another.

His shoulders shook.

His hands trembled.

And he hated himself for it.

Because he believed he should be stronger.

Yet no matter how hard he tried—

The emotions wouldn't stop.

Eventually he wiped his face.

Then looked toward the sleeping group.

Everyone remained asleep.

A sad smile appeared.

"Sorry..."

Slowly—

He began cutting through the ropes.

Using nothing but physical strength.

The rope strained.

Then snapped.

One by one.

Carefully.

Quietly.

Without waking anyone.

Finally he stood.

Barely.

His legs almost gave out immediately.

But he forced himself forward.

One step.

Then another.

Then another.

Until he reached the fountain.

The place where he always came when he needed peace.

The place where he could think.

The place where nobody expected the strongest person to break.

The moment he arrived—

Everything finally collapsed.

Harris screamed.

A raw scream.

A painful scream.

A scream filled with fear.

Loneliness.

Frustration.

And grief.

The sound echoed through the entire campsite.

Birds flew away.

The forest fell silent.

And everyone woke instantly.

Inside the tents—

Harlina's eyes snapped open.

"HARRIS?!"

Lunar immediately stood.

Koji rushed outside.

Everyone began searching.

Panic spread instantly.

Because nobody had ever heard Harris scream like that.

Never.

Not during battles.

Not during wars.

Not during injuries.

Not during loss.

Never.

The sound alone shattered their hearts.

Then they found him.

Near the fountain.

Standing alone.

Crying.

Not silent tears.

Not hidden tears.

Not the tears he always concealed.

He was crying openly.

Loudly.

Broken.

And for a moment—

Nobody moved.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody breathed.

Because seeing Harris like that felt impossible.

The boy who always smiled.

The boy who always carried others.

The boy who always endured.

Was finally breaking.

And it hurt everyone watching.

"Harris..."

Harlina whispered.

His head slowly turned.

The moment he saw them—

He immediately looked away.

Trying to hide his face.

Trying to hide the tears.

Trying to pretend everything was okay.

But it wasn't.

And everyone knew it.

Without saying a word—

Harris suddenly jumped into the fountain.

SPLASH.

The cold water exploded upward.

Everyone gasped.

The water swallowed him.

Yet even underwater—

His shoulders continued shaking.

He was still crying.

"HARRIS!"

Koji immediately jumped in.

Lunar followed without hesitation.

The two rushed toward him.

Trying to pull him out.

Trying to stop him.

Trying to help.

Then—

Lina noticed something.

The water.

The color.

It wasn't clear anymore.

It wasn't blue anymore.

It wasn't reflecting the sky anymore.

Slowly—

The water turned red.

Blood.

Everyone froze.

The injuries.

The reopened wounds.

The pressure he had been placing on his body.

Everything had finally reached its limit.

"HARRIS!"

Harlina's voice broke completely.

Fear overwhelmed her.

Real fear.

The kind of fear that appears when someone precious is slipping away.

Koji and Lunar finally dragged him from the fountain.

His body felt weaker than ever.

His breathing was unstable.

His face had become pale.

Yet somehow—

He still tried smiling.

Trying to reassure them.

Trying to act strong.

Even now.

But after only a few steps—

His legs gave out.

The world spun.

His vision blurred.

And Harris collapsed once more.

Everyone rushed forward.

Panic spread instantly.

The treatment began immediately.

Bandages.

Medicine.

Anything they could do.

Anything to help him.

Anything to stop him from disappearing.

Hours later—

The treatment finished.

The campsite remained silent.

Nobody laughed.

Nobody joked.

Nobody smiled.

Because Harris still hadn't woken up.

And every passing minute made their fear grow larger.

Meanwhile—

Far beyond consciousness—

Three figures stood before Harris.

The Creator.

The Third Voice.

And Buddy.

All three called his name.

All three tried reaching him.

All three tried encouraging him.

But Harris remained silent.

His head lowered.

His heart trapped inside darkness.

The same darkness he had felt during the first arrival of Omega Crimson Eclipse.

The same loneliness.

The same despair.

The same fear.

Then suddenly—

Everything disappeared.

The Creator vanished.

The Third Voice vanished.

Buddy vanished.

The darkness deepened.

And a familiar voice echoed.

A voice that sounded almost exactly like his own.

"Harris..."

His eyes slowly opened.

And for the first time—

He felt pure rage.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 5: THE SHADOW THAT WEARS HIS FACE (PART 3)

The darkness stretched endlessly.

No stars.

No light.

No Creator.

No Third Voice.

No Buddy.

Only silence.

A suffocating silence.

The kind that made even breathing feel difficult.

Harris slowly raised his head.

The familiar voice echoed once again.

"Harris..."

This time it was closer.

Much closer.

Almost standing directly in front of him.

His fists tightened.

Because he already knew.

He knew that voice.

It sounded like his own.

The same tone.

The same calmness.

The same way of speaking.

Yet something felt wrong.

Something felt twisted.

Something felt broken.

The darkness slowly shifted.

A figure appeared.

Step by step.

Walking toward him.

Its face remained hidden.

Its presence felt cold.

Emotionless.

Merciless.

The figure stopped several meters away.

Then finally spoke.

"Are you ready?"

Harris narrowed his eyes.

"Ready for what?"

The figure laughed.

A hollow laugh.

One completely different from his own.

"Ready to lose everything."

Silence.

"Ready to watch them die."

The darkness trembled.

"Ready to watch Harlina disappear."

The moment those words left its mouth—

Something inside Harris exploded.

The sadness vanished.

The despair vanished.

The helplessness vanished.

Only anger remained.

Pure anger.

The figure continued speaking.

"Ready to lose Koji."

"Ready to lose Lunar."

"Ready to lose everyone."

"HARLINA TOO."

"STOP."

The darkness shook.

The figure smiled.

A cruel smile.

"You know it will happen."

"STOP."

"You can't save them."

"STOP!"

"You'll fail exactly like—"

Before the sentence finished—

Harris's fist slammed into the figure's face.

BOOM.

The entire darkness cracked.

Shockwaves spread endlessly.

The figure flew backward.

Its smile disappeared.

Harris stood there breathing heavily.

His eyes burned with fury.

His voice echoed throughout the darkness.

"You made one mistake."

The figure slowly stood.

Blood dripped from its mouth.

Yet it continued smiling.

"Oh?"

Harris pointed directly at it.

"You think you're going to face the Void Walker."

The darkness shook.

Black energy swirled around him.

His eyes glowed.

Then he smiled.

A fearless smile.

The same smile he wore against impossible odds.

The same smile he wore before every war.

The same smile that terrified enemies.

"No."

His voice became stronger.

"You're going to face Harris."

Silence.

The figure froze.

For a brief moment—

Even the darkness became still.

Because those words carried something unusual.

Not power.

Not hatred.

Not revenge.

Will.

The will to keep moving.

The will to protect.

The will to stand back up no matter how many times he fell.

The figure slowly faded.

Its voice echoed one final time.

"We'll meet soon."

Then everything disappeared.

The darkness shattered.

The illusion ended.

And Harris immediately shouted—

"BUDDY!"

The warmth returned instantly.

The familiar presence appeared.

"Harris."

A smile appeared on Harris's face.

The first genuine smile since the nightmare began.

"Buddy."

"Yes?"

"I accept your condition."

The silence that followed felt surprisingly emotional.

Because Buddy understood the meaning behind those words.

Harris wasn't accepting because he wanted power.

He was accepting because he finally realized something.

He couldn't carry everything alone.

No matter how much he wanted to.

No matter how much he tried.

No matter how much it hurt.

Buddy's voice became softer.

"Thank you."

Harris crossed his arms.

"Don't thank me yet."

"Oh?"

Harris looked serious.

"I also have a condition."

Buddy immediately laughed.

"You are negotiating with the Divine Suit?"

"Yes."

"You're unbelievable."

"I know."

The voice laughed again.

Then replied.

"Fine. What is your condition?"

For a moment—

Harris became silent.

His smile disappeared.

His eyes lowered.

Then he spoke.

"If I die..."

Buddy froze.

The warmth around him weakened.

"Harris."

"If I die."

"Harris."

"Listen."

Silence.

His voice remained calm.

Too calm.

"If I die before stopping Omega Void Emperor..."

His fists tightened.

"Protect my universe."

The words echoed endlessly.

Buddy remained silent.

Because for the first time—

The suit could hear how serious Harris truly was.

The Creator.

The Third Voice.

The future threat.

Everything.

Harris had already prepared himself for the possibility of death.

Not because he wanted it.

Because he accepted it.

Buddy's voice finally returned.

"I promise."

A weak smile appeared on Harris's face.

"Good."

Then Buddy immediately spoke.

"But I refuse your second condition."

Harris blinked.

"What?"

"The injury condition."

Silence.

Harris folded his arms.

"I haven't even said it yet."

"You were going to tell me not to heal your injuries."

Harris froze.

Several seconds passed.

Then—

"How did you know?"

Buddy sighed.

"Because you're Harris."

"Fair point."

The suit's voice became serious.

"Why?"

Harris looked away.

His answer came slowly.

"Because pain reminds me."

"Reminds you of what?"

"The reason I'm fighting."

Silence.

The answer hit harder than expected.

Buddy finally understood.

The injuries.

The suffering.

The pressure.

Harris wasn't trying to punish himself.

He was trying to make sure he never forgot.

Never forgot the people he wanted to protect.

Never forgot the threat.

Never forgot the responsibility.

Buddy sighed heavily.

"You really are impossible."

"Thank you."

"Again. Not a compliment."

This time both of them laughed.

For the first time since the chapter began—

The darkness felt lighter.

Warmer.

Hopeful.

Then suddenly—

Reality pulled Harris back.

His consciousness began returning.

The warmth faded.

The darkness disappeared.

The voices became distant.

And finally—

His eyes opened.

The campsite appeared before him.

The sky was already bright.

The treatment tent surrounded him.

For a moment—

Everything seemed peaceful.

Then Harris noticed something strange.

Voices.

A lot of voices.

Coming from outside.

He carefully stood.

Still weak.

Still injured.

Still bandaged.

But conscious.

He slowly walked toward the tent entrance.

And peeked outside.

Everyone was gathered together.

Koji.

Lunar.

Harlina.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

All of them sat in a circle.

Discussing something.

Very seriously.

"...we can't let him leave again."

"Agreed."

"Absolutely."

"Watch him twenty-four hours."

"Tie him if necessary."

"Already tried."

"Use more rope."

Harris immediately froze.

"..."

"..."

"..."

Then he slowly tried backing away.

Very slowly.

Very carefully.

Like a criminal escaping prison.

One step.

Two steps.

Three—

CRACK.

A stick broke beneath his foot.

The sound echoed everywhere.

The conversation stopped.

The entire group slowly turned.

Every single pair of eyes locked onto him.

Harris froze.

Completely.

Several seconds passed.

Then he awkwardly raised one hand.

"Hi guys."

The silence that followed was terrifying.

Because every single person stood up.

At the same time.

And started walking toward him.

Harris immediately realized something.

He was in danger.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 5: THE CHAINS OF CARE (PART 4)

The moment Harris said, "Hi guys," every single person slowly stood up.

Nobody smiled.

Nobody laughed.

Nobody spoke.

That silence alone was enough to make Harris take one step backward.

Then another.

Then another.

"Okay..."

He forced a nervous smile.

"I suddenly remembered I have something important to do."

Another step backward.

Nobody stopped.

Nobody replied.

They simply continued walking toward him.

Like a group of hunters surrounding their prey.

Harris looked left.

No escape.

He looked right.

No escape.

He looked behind him.

The forest.

Freedom.

Hope.

A chance to run.

His eyes sparkled.

Unfortunately, Lunar noticed immediately.

"Harris."

"Yes, Master?"

"Don't."

"I wasn't thinking anything."

"You were."

"I wasn't."

"You were planning to run."

"..."

"..."

"..."

"Maybe."

The next moment everyone rushed forward.

"H-Hey wait!"

Too late.

Within seconds Harris was captured.

Again.

His arms tied.

His legs tied.

Even his waist tied.

The amount of rope around him looked completely unreasonable.

Harris stared blankly.

"Am I a dangerous criminal now?"

"Yes."

"Definitely."

"Without question."

"One hundred percent."

Everyone answered at the same time.

Harris lowered his head.

"I regret saving all of you."

A slipper immediately hit his forehead.

BONK.

"Agh!"

Everyone finally laughed.

For the first time since morning, the tension eased slightly.

But Harlina wasn't laughing.

She was staring directly at him.

Her eyes were red.

The traces of dried tears were still visible.

The moment Harris noticed that, his smile weakened.

He knew.

She had cried a lot while he was unconscious.

And that guilt stabbed deeper than any wound.

Everyone sat around him.

The interrogation began.

Again.

Koji crossed his arms.

"Why did you cry this morning?"

Silence.

Harris looked away.

Lunar asked next.

"Tell us the truth."

Still silence.

Harlina slowly moved closer.

Her voice was shaking.

"Harris."

He froze.

Because he could hear the pain hidden inside her voice.

"Please answer."

He wanted to.

He really wanted to.

But he couldn't.

If he explained everything...

If he told them how terrified he was...

If he told them how much danger was coming...

They would never leave his side.

And that was exactly what he didn't want.

So he remained silent.

SLAP.

A gentle slap landed on his cheek.

Not from anger.

From sadness.

"Answer me."

Harlina's eyes were beginning to water again.

Harris lowered his head.

"I can't."

Another painful silence followed.

The answer hurt more than a lie.

Because everyone understood one thing.

There truly was something he couldn't tell them.

Something serious.

Something frightening.

Something heavy enough that Harris would rather suffer alone than share it.

Lunar finally changed the topic.

"The books."

Harris looked up.

"Any clues?"

"No."

"The Creator?"

"No."

"The Third Voice?"

"No."

"The Suit?"

Silence.

Everyone noticed.

Koji narrowed his eyes.

"The Suit talked to you."

Harris sighed.

He knew he had been caught.

"Yeah."

Everyone immediately leaned forward.

Even Reku and Roku.

"What happened?"

"What did it say?"

"Did it give clues?"

"Did it restore your powers?"

Questions came from every direction.

Harris scratched his head.

Then slowly explained everything.

The condition.

The promise.

The conversation.

And finally—

His condition about protecting the universe if he died.

The moment he finished—

The entire campsite exploded.

"WHAT?!"

"ARE YOU CRAZY?!"

"STOP TALKING ABOUT DYING!"

"HARRIS!"

Even Koji looked ready to throw him into the fountain himself.

Harlina stood up.

Her eyes filled with tears.

"You promised that?"

Harris immediately realized his mistake.

"...Maybe."

SLAP.

Another hit.

This one harder.

"You don't get to decide that alone!"

Her voice broke.

Everyone became silent.

Because those words came directly from her heart.

Harris couldn't reply.

For once—

He had no defense.

Then suddenly—

GRRRRRRRRRR.

A loud sound echoed.

Everyone stopped.

Another second passed.

GRRRRRRRRRR.

The sound came again.

Everyone slowly turned toward Harris.

His face immediately became red.

The sound came from his stomach.

He was hungry.

The entire group froze.

Then—

They burst into laughter.

Even Harlina.

Even Lunar.

Even Koji.

The serious atmosphere completely shattered.

Harris lowered his head.

"This is embarrassing."

"It is."

"Very embarrassing."

"Legendary embarrassment."

"I hate all of you."

More laughter followed.

Soon breakfast was prepared.

Everyone moved toward the food area.

Except Harris.

He remained sitting.

Watching.

Waiting.

Not moving.

Lunar noticed first.

"Why aren't you eating?"

"I'm not hungry."

His stomach immediately betrayed him.

GRRRRRRRRR.

Everyone laughed again.

"Liar."

Harris pointed toward everyone.

"You all fed me yesterday like a baby."

"So?"

"So I'm protesting."

Silence.

Then Koji laughed.

"That's your reason?"

"Yes."

"You're unbelievable."

"Thank you."

"Not a compliment."

The same answer Buddy had given earlier.

For a moment Harris almost laughed.

Then suddenly—

An idea appeared inside his mind.

A dangerous idea.

A Harris idea.

Which automatically meant trouble.

A few minutes later he raised his hand.

"Reku."

"Yeah?"

"I need the restroom."

Everyone immediately became suspicious.

Very suspicious.

Lunar narrowed his eyes.

"No running."

"I won't."

"Promise?"

"I promise."

Everyone looked even more suspicious.

Because Harris only used that smile when planning something.

A few moments later—

Lunar escorted him.

Like a prison guard.

Lina stood nearby.

Harlina waited outside.

Everything seemed secure.

Everything seemed perfect.

Everything seemed—

Wrong.

Because the moment nobody looked directly at him—

Harris escaped.

Again.

A few minutes later—

He sat comfortably on top of a large tree near the fountain.

Swinging his legs.

Smiling proudly.

"Freedom."

The wind brushed through his hair.

The sunlight touched his face.

For the first time all day—

He felt calm.

Then he looked toward the sky.

His smile slowly changed.

The peaceful expression disappeared.

A serious one replaced it.

"Let's begin."

His voice became colder.

"Omega Void Emperor."

The wind suddenly stopped.

A strange feeling crawled across his body.

An unfamiliar energy.

Yet strangely familiar.

His instincts activated immediately.

Something was wrong.

Very wrong.

Slowly—

He turned toward the campsite.

And froze.

Because sitting near Lunar—

Was himself.

Another Harris.

Same face.

Same body.

Same voice.

Same appearance.

Even the same rope.

The fake Harris was pretending perfectly.

Smiling.

Talking.

Waiting.

Like a predator hidden among prey.

And nobody had noticed.

Not a single person.

The blood drained from Harris's face.

Then he jumped from the tree.

BOOM.

The ground cracked.

And he sprinted toward the campsite with everything he had.

His injuries screamed.

His muscles burned.

Blood reopened beneath the bandages.

But he ignored all of it.

Because this time—

The target wasn't him.

It was his family.

"HARLINA!"

"LUNAR!"

"MOVE AWAY FROM HIM!"

Everyone turned.

Confusion filled their faces.

The fake Harris slowly smiled.

A cold smile.

An unnatural smile.

And Harris immediately understood.

The war had finally arrived.

The first move from Omega Void Emperor had begun.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 5: THE FIRST SOLDIER OF OMEGA (PART 5)

The moment Harris shouted—

"MOVE AWAY FROM HIM!"

The entire campsite froze.

Nobody understood what was happening.

Koji stood up immediately.

Lunar instinctively moved in front of the others.

Harlina turned toward the voice.

Then toward the person sitting beside them.

Then toward the real Harris who was running toward them at full speed.

For a moment—

Everyone's minds stopped working.

Because there were now two Harrises.

Two identical faces.

Two identical voices.

Two identical appearances.

Even the same clothes.

Even the same expressions.

The fake Harris slowly stood.

A smile appeared on his face.

A smile that felt completely wrong.

Cold.

Empty.

Emotionless.

The real Harris instantly stopped several meters away.

His eyes narrowed.

His instincts screamed.

This was no ordinary enemy.

This was one of Omega Void Emperor's soldiers.

A version of himself from another universe.

A Harris who had already lost everything.

The fake Harris looked directly at him.

Then laughed.

"Found you."

The words echoed across the campsite.

Everyone immediately felt a chill.

Because that voice wasn't normal.

It sounded broken.

Like a person who had forgotten how emotions worked.

The real Harris stepped forward.

"Move away from them."

The fake version tilted his head.

"Why?"

His smile widened.

"So I can kill them peacefully?"

The air suddenly became heavy.

Harlina froze.

Koji clenched his fists.

Lunar's eyes widened.

The fake Harris slowly raised his hand.

Dark energy gathered around it.

The ground beneath him cracked.

Trees shook violently.

The sky itself seemed to tremble.

Everyone immediately understood.

This enemy was dangerous.

Very dangerous.

The fake Harris looked toward Harlina.

Then smiled.

"I'll start with her."

Something inside Harris snapped.

Completely.

His eyes changed.

His expression vanished.

The smile disappeared.

Even his breathing changed.

For a brief moment—

Everyone felt something terrifying.

The same feeling they had felt during the greatest wars.

The same feeling they experienced whenever someone threatened the people Harris loved.

The fake Harris pointed toward Harlina.

"You know."

"I always enjoy watching your type suffer."

Silence.

A dangerous silence.

The real Harris slowly lowered his head.

Then—

He smiled.

Not happily.

Not peacefully.

The kind of smile that appeared before destruction.

The fake Harris suddenly froze.

Because for the first time—

He felt danger.

Real danger.

The real Harris lifted his head.

Golden light appeared around his body.

At first it was small.

Then larger.

Then larger.

Then larger.

The entire campsite became surrounded by a golden aura.

Everyone shielded their eyes.

The air shook.

The trees bent.

The ground cracked.

Even the fake Harris stepped backward.

Shock appeared on his face.

For the first time.

The real Harris smiled.

"Ready, Buddy?"

Inside his heart—

A familiar voice replied.

"Always."

BOOOOOOM!

Golden energy erupted.

The entire forest trembled.

Everyone stared in disbelief.

Because they could feel it.

His power.

It wasn't fully restored.

But it had returned.

A small piece.

A tiny fraction.

Yet it felt overwhelming.

The fake Harris immediately attacked.

Dark energy exploded toward the campsite.

Toward Harlina.

Toward Koji.

Toward everyone.

But before the attack could reach them—

Harris moved.

Nobody saw it happen.

Nobody saw him run.

Nobody saw him attack.

One moment he was standing.

The next—

He was already in front of the enemy.

His fist connected.

BOOM.

The fake Harris's eyes widened.

The attack shattered instantly.

The soldier flew backward.

Crashing through several trees.

The entire forest shook.

Everyone stood frozen.

Because it had happened too quickly.

Far too quickly.

The fake Harris slowly stood.

Blood dripped from his mouth.

Shock covered his face.

"Impossible."

The real Harris walked forward.

Slowly.

Calmly.

Fearlessly.

"Before you die."

His voice became cold.

"Tell me."

The enemy remained silent.

"Where is Omega Void Emperor?"

No answer.

"How many soldiers?"

Still silence.

"How many universes?"

Nothing.

The soldier laughed.

Then smiled proudly.

His loyalty never wavered.

Even facing death.

The real Harris sighed.

"So loyal."

Silence.

"Okay."

The golden aura intensified.

The soldier's eyes widened.

"Then bye."

The next second—

Golden light flashed.

Everything became white.

The forest shook violently.

The enemy's body froze.

Cracks spread across him.

Then—

He turned into countless particles of light.

And vanished.

Like dust carried away by the wind.

Silence.

Complete silence.

The first soldier of Omega Void Emperor had fallen.

Everyone stared.

Nobody moved.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody even breathed.

Because the battle ended in seconds.

Then suddenly—

The golden aura disappeared.

The light vanished.

The strength left Harris's body.

His knees trembled.

His vision blurred.

Blood appeared at the corner of his mouth.

His body swayed.

Inside his mind—

He whispered.

"Buddy."

No answer.

The suit remained silent.

Because it already knew.

The reason.

The injuries.

The pressure.

The damage.

Everything had exceeded its limits.

The power had returned.

But his body wasn't ready.

Harris smiled weakly.

"I understand."

Then he collapsed.

"HARRIS!"

Harlina was the first to reach him.

Then Koji.

Then Lunar.

Then everyone else.

They surrounded him instantly.

Fear returned to their faces.

Because no matter how powerful he looked—

He was still injured.

Still bleeding.

Still exhausted.

Harris slowly opened one eye.

Then another.

"Water."

Everyone froze.

Then immediately began searching.

A few seconds later—

Koji handed him water.

Harris drank slowly.

Then looked around.

Everyone was staring at him.

Completely shocked.

Completely confused.

Finally Lunar spoke.

"What happened?"

Harris blinked.

Then pointed toward the place where the fake Harris had been.

"He was sitting beside you."

Everyone looked down.

Embarrassment immediately appeared.

"He cooperated when you tied him."

No response.

"He had no injuries."

Everyone lowered their heads.

No response.

"He didn't even act suspicious."

Silence.

Then Harris laughed.

A loud laugh.

A genuine laugh.

Everyone looked confused.

Then he smiled.

"I'm kidding."

The entire group froze.

Then simultaneously—

"THAT IS NOT FUNNY!"

The forest echoed with their voices.

Harris laughed harder.

Even Harlina looked ready to hit him again.

Then suddenly—

GRRRRRRRRRR.

His stomach growled.

The entire campsite became silent.

A second later—

Everyone burst into laughter.

Again.

Harris covered his face.

"This is becoming a problem."

"It is."

"Definitely."

"The strongest enemy is hunger."

Even Harris laughed this time.

Finally food was prepared.

Everyone sat together.

Ready to eat.

But Harris remained standing.

Watching.

Waiting.

Not touching the food.

Koji noticed first.

"Why aren't you eating?"

Harris crossed his arms.

"You all fed me yesterday."

Everyone blinked.

"So?"

"I'm protesting."

The entire group groaned.

"HARRIS!"

He laughed.

Then suddenly turned and walked away.

Straight toward the forest.

Everyone stared.

"HARRIS!"

"I'm eating elsewhere!"

"WHY?!"

"PRINCIPLES!"

Nobody understood.

Not even him.

A few minutes later—

He sat beneath a tree.

Eating fruits.

Looking toward the sky.

A small smile rested on his face.

For the first time since learning about the multiverse threat—

His heart felt slightly lighter.

Because now he knew one thing.

The war had begun.

And he was no longer waiting for it.

Hours passed.

Evening arrived.

The sky turned orange.

The wind became gentle.

The atmosphere became peaceful again.

Then suddenly—

Harris returned.

Dragging something enormous.

Everyone stared.

A gigantic luggage bag.

Almost bigger than himself.

Koji blinked.

"What is that?"

Lunar blinked.

"What did you do now?"

Harlina sighed.

"I'm afraid to ask."

Harris placed the luggage down dramatically.

Then smiled.

A bright smile.

A warm smile.

The same smile everyone loved.

He opened the luggage.

And dozens of wrapped gifts appeared.

Everyone froze.

Completely.

Absolutely.

Speechlessly.

Harris spread his arms proudly.

Then said—

"Happy Friendship Day."

Everyone stared at him.

Confusion filled their faces.

Because Friendship Day wasn't until tomorrow.

Yet here he was.

Preparing everything early.

Just like Harris always did.

Thinking about everyone before himself.

One by one—

He handed gifts to everybody.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

And finally—

Harlina.

Everyone smiled.

Everyone thanked him.

Everyone became emotional.

Then Lunar noticed something.

"Harris."

"Yeah?"

"Where's your gift?"

The smile on Harris's face softened.

For a moment—

His eyes became distant.

Then he replied quietly.

"I received mine eleven years ago."

Everyone froze.

Nobody understood.

Except two people.

Lunar.

And Harlina.

Because deep down—

They knew the answer.

His gift wasn't an object.

It wasn't money.

It wasn't power.

It wasn't destiny.

His gift...

Was the people sitting around him.

The family he found.

The bonds he protected.

The friends who stayed.

The girl he loved.

And for the first time that day—

Nobody laughed.

Nobody teased him.

Instead—

Everyone smiled silently.

Because they finally understood.

The reason Harris kept fighting.

The reason Harris kept smiling.

The reason Harris kept standing back up.

Even after everything.

TO BE CONTINUED IN CHAPTER 6...

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI ⚔️🖤🌌📖🌌🖤⚔️

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 6: "THE GIFT CALLED FRIENDSHIP"

PART 1

The night slowly covered the campsite like a soft blanket.

The sound of the fountain echoed gently through the forest while the cold wind moved between the trees.

For the first time in many days, nobody was fighting.

Nobody was training.

Nobody was speaking about enemies.

Nobody was speaking about death.

Everyone was simply tired.

Tired from worrying.

Tired from arguing.

Tired from chasing Harris every time he tried to disappear.

The large tent was filled with laughter and quiet conversations as everyone prepared to sleep.

Harris stood near the entrance of the tent.

Frozen.

Completely frozen.

His eyes slowly moved toward the inside.

Then toward the outside.

Then toward the forest.

He was calculating his escape route.

Unfortunately for him, Lunar was watching everything.

Lunar folded his arms and smiled.

That smile immediately made Harris nervous.

"Where are you planning to go?"

Harris immediately looked away.

"Nowhere."

"Lie."

"I'm serious."

"Lie."

"I'm not lying."

"Lie."

Everyone laughed.

Harris sighed.

The problem wasn't that Lunar knew him.

The problem was that Lunar knew him too well.

Lunar suddenly pointed toward the center of the tent.

"Tonight you sleep there."

Harris looked.

Then froze.

The girls were sitting there.

Harlina.

Lina.

Mika.

And the others.

All staring directly at him.

A chill ran down his spine.

"Why?"

Lunar smiled.

"Because you can't escape."

The girls nodded together.

Harris felt betrayed.

Completely betrayed.

He slowly turned toward Koji.

"Master..."

Koji immediately looked away.

"I support Lunar."

Harris felt another betrayal.

He looked toward Reku.

Reku raised both hands.

"Don't look at me."

He looked toward Roku.

Roku immediately pointed toward Lunar.

"Him."

Everyone burst into laughter.

Harris lowered his head.

There was no hope.

No allies.

No escape.

Harlina suddenly stood up and grabbed his hand.

"Come."

His face instantly became red.

"Why are you holding my hand?"

"Because if I don't, you'll disappear."

Everyone laughed again.

Harris could only surrender.

A few minutes later everyone was sitting inside the tent.

The atmosphere became peaceful.

Stories started filling the night.

Everyone began talking about old memories.

The academy days.

Training accidents.

Childhood mistakes.

Funny moments.

Even Harris slowly started smiling.

For a moment he forgot everything.

The war.

The books.

Omega Void Emperor.

The future.

Everything disappeared.

Then Lina ruined it.

"Harris."

He immediately became alert.

"Yes?"

"How much do you love Harlina?"

Silence.

Complete silence.

The entire tent became quiet.

Even the wind outside seemed to stop.

Harris froze.

Harlina froze.

Koji almost dropped his cup.

Lunar immediately smiled.

He knew chaos was about to begin.

"What kind of question is that?!"

"The important kind."

"No."

"Yes."

"No."

"Yes."

"No."

A pillow suddenly hit Harris directly in the face.

Everyone laughed.

His face became red.

"I refuse."

"You don't have that option."

"I do."

"You don't."

"I do."

"You don't."

Another pillow.

More laughter.

Harris looked toward the ceiling.

Why was his life like this?

He had fought gods.

He had fought monsters.

He had survived impossible wars.

Yet somehow this was harder.

Much harder.

Mika suddenly handed him a glass of water.

He became suspicious.

Very suspicious.

"Why are you smiling?"

"Drink."

"No."

"Drink."

"No."

Harlina grabbed the glass.

"Harris."

His survival instincts activated.

He immediately drank it.

Everyone laughed.

The questioning continued.

"Answer now."

Harris sighed.

A deep sigh.

The sigh of a man accepting defeat.

He slowly looked toward Harlina.

The moment their eyes met, her face became red.

His face also became red.

Everyone immediately noticed.

And started laughing again.

Finally he spoke.

"I love her..."

The tent became silent.

"...more than myself."

Nobody laughed.

Nobody joked.

Nobody interrupted.

Because the honesty in his voice was impossible to ignore.

Harlina slowly lowered her head.

Her heart was beating so fast she thought everyone could hear it.

Harris continued.

"If she was ever in danger..."

His voice became softer.

"...I would save her even if it cost my life."

The smile disappeared from everyone's faces.

Harlina's eyes slowly became wet.

Because she knew.

Those words were not romantic words.

Those words were reality.

Harris would truly do it.

Without hesitation.

Without fear.

Without regret.

That was exactly what scared her.

Lina noticed her expression.

"Harris..."

"Yeah?"

"Why do you love her?"

His smile softened.

The playful atmosphere disappeared.

For a brief moment, only honesty remained.

"Because she never left."

Everyone became quiet.

He looked down.

Thinking about the past.

Thinking about every painful memory.

Thinking about every lonely night.

Thinking about every battle.

"Even when I wanted everyone to leave me alone."

His voice became quieter.

"Even when I pushed people away."

Harlina's eyes widened.

"Even when I acted like an idiot."

A slap landed on his head.

Everyone laughed.

Even Harris laughed.

"That one was deserved."

"Damn right."

More laughter.

The atmosphere became warm again.

But Harlina couldn't stop thinking about his words.

Because she knew exactly what he meant.

She remembered every time he tried to carry everything alone.

Every time he smiled while suffering.

Every time he lied about being okay.

Every time he tried to protect everyone at the cost of himself.

She hated that part of him.

And loved it at the same time.

Mika suddenly leaned forward.

"What is your favorite thing about her?"

Harris instantly answered.

"Her kindness."

Harlina froze.

Everyone immediately started making teasing noises.

"Oooooh."

"Look at her face."

"She's turning red."

Harlina threw a pillow.

Everyone dodged.

The laughter became even louder.

Then Lina asked another question.

"What else?"

Harris smiled.

"She worries too much."

Everyone nodded.

"True."

"Very true."

"Definitely true."

Harlina crossed her arms.

"I do not."

Everyone looked at her.

Nobody believed her.

Not even herself.

Then Harris continued.

"And she has two modes."

Everyone immediately became interested.

"Two modes?"

"Explain."

Harlina narrowed her eyes.

Harris suddenly felt danger.

Extreme danger.

The survival instinct of a Void Walker activated.

Unfortunately it was too late.

Everyone was waiting.

"The first mode..."

He pointed toward her.

"...is Love Mode."

The girls immediately cheered.

Harlina covered her face.

Her embarrassment reached critical levels.

"And the second mode?"

Harris looked directly at death.

Then answered.

"Slapping Mode."

The tent exploded.

Everyone laughed so hard they nearly fell over.

Even Koji couldn't stop laughing.

Harlina grabbed three pillows and launched all of them directly at Harris.

One.

Two.

Three.

Direct hits.

Everyone laughed even harder.

Harris surrendered completely.

The night continued with laughter.

But while everyone was smiling...

A small part of Harris remained quiet.

Because deep inside his heart...

He was wondering how long he could keep protecting these smiles.

How long before Omega Void Emperor arrived.

How long before the peace ended.

How long before he would be forced to leave.

He smiled so nobody would notice.

But behind that smile...

His heart hurt.

And as everyone continued laughing around him...

Harris silently looked at each of his friends.

Memorizing their faces.

Just in case.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 6: "THE GIFT CALLED FRIENDSHIP"

PART 2

The laughter inside the tent slowly began to fade.

One by one, everyone became sleepy.

The teasing finally stopped.

The pillows stopped flying.

The conversations became quieter.

Outside, the fountain continued to sing its peaceful song beneath the moonlight.

The cold wind moved through the trees.

For a brief moment, it felt as though the world had forgotten about war.

Forgotten about pain.

Forgotten about Omega Void Emperor.

Everyone slowly found a place to sleep.

Lina was still laughing about Harris's "Slapping Mode" comment.

Mika was teasing Harlina one last time.

Reku and Roku were arguing about who laughed the hardest.

Koji sat near the entrance, smiling quietly.

Lunar watched everyone with folded arms.

And Harris...

Harris was pretending to sleep.

Because if he looked at Harlina for even one more second, everyone would start another round of questions.

His face was still slightly red.

Unfortunately, fate had other plans.

"Harris."

His eyes opened immediately.

It was Lina.

"What now?"

"Nothing."

"Then why did you call me?"

Lina smiled.

"I just wanted to see if you were really asleep."

Everyone laughed.

Harris buried his face in a blanket.

"I regret everything."

More laughter.

A few minutes later, the tent finally became quiet.

One by one, everyone drifted into sleep.

Even Lunar eventually closed his eyes.

The campsite fell silent.

Only the sound of the fountain remained.

Harris slowly opened his eyes.

The moonlight entered through a small opening in the tent.

For a moment, he simply looked around.

Everyone was sleeping peacefully.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

And finally...

Harlina.

His gaze stopped.

As always.

It always stopped there.

The moonlight reflected softly across her face.

She looked peaceful.

Safe.

Happy.

The kind of happiness Harris wanted to protect forever.

A small smile appeared on his face.

Then sadness followed.

Because every time he looked at them, the same thought appeared.

"What happens if I fail?"

His smile weakened.

"What happens if Omega Void Emperor reaches this universe?"

The pain inside his chest returned.

He looked away.

He couldn't bear the thought.

Not tonight.

Slowly, carefully, Harris stood up.

Every movement was silent.

Every step was careful.

He didn't want to wake anyone.

Especially Harlina.

He knew if she woke up, he would never escape.

After a few moments, he finally stepped outside.

The cold night air greeted him.

The stars filled the sky.

The fountain glowed beneath the moonlight.

For the first time that day, Harris felt alone.

And strangely...

Peaceful.

He walked toward the large tree near the fountain.

The same place he always chose whenever his thoughts became too heavy.

He sat down.

Then leaned against the tree.

The water reflected the stars.

The wind brushed against his face.

And despite all the pain inside him...

He smiled.

Because for one night...

Everyone was safe.

That was enough.

Slowly, his eyes closed.

And for the first time in many nights...

Sleep finally reached him.

A deep sleep.

A peaceful sleep.

A sleep without nightmares.

Hours passed.

The moon crossed the sky.

The stars slowly disappeared.

Morning approached.

Inside the tent, the first person to wake up was Lina.

She stretched lazily.

Then looked around.

Everyone was still sleeping.

Almost everyone.

Her eyes widened.

"Harris?"

No response.

She sat up.

"Harris?"

Still nothing.

Suddenly her sleepy expression vanished.

She looked around again.

The blanket was empty.

"HARRIS?!"

The entire tent exploded into chaos.

Everyone woke up immediately.

"What happened?!"

"Enemy?!"

"Attack?!"

"Where's Harris?!"

Silence.

Everyone looked around.

No Harris.

The atmosphere instantly changed.

Harlina stood up so quickly she nearly fell.

Her face turned pale.

"No..."

Lunar immediately left the tent.

Koji followed.

Everyone began searching.

The fear in their hearts grew with every second.

Because this wasn't the first time Harris had disappeared.

And every time he disappeared...

Something terrible happened.

Harlina's hands were shaking.

She ran through the campsite.

Searching everywhere.

Near the fountain.

Near the forest.

Near the river.

Nothing.

Then Lunar suddenly stopped.

His eyes moved toward the large tree beside the fountain.

And he smiled.

"I found him."

Everyone rushed toward him.

Then froze.

Harris was there.

Sleeping peacefully beneath the tree.

One arm resting behind his head.

A small smile on his face.

Looking completely relaxed.

The tension immediately disappeared.

Several people almost cried from relief.

Harlina looked like she wanted to both hug him and slap him at the same time.

Koji sighed deeply.

"That idiot..."

Lunar laughed quietly.

"At least he's here."

Everyone sat down nearby.

Nobody wanted to wake him.

For once...

He looked peaceful.

Almost innocent.

Like a normal boy.

Not a Void Walker.

Not a hero.

Not a protector.

Just Harris.

The person they all cared about.

Then suddenly...

Harris spoke.

While sleeping.

"Harlina..."

Everyone froze.

Immediately all eyes turned toward Harlina.

Her face became red.

Very red.

Lina immediately smiled.

"Oh?"

Harlina covered her face.

"Shut up."

Then Harris spoke again.

"Koji..."

Koji froze.

A small smile appeared.

"Lunar..."

Lunar looked away.

Trying not to show emotion.

"Lina..."

"Mika..."

"Reku..."

"Roku..."

One by one.

Every name.

Every friend.

Every person important to him.

The smiles slowly disappeared.

Because they understood something.

Even in his sleep...

He was thinking about them.

Then Harris became quiet.

For a moment nobody spoke.

The wind moved softly through the trees.

The fountain continued to flow.

And then...

Harris whispered something.

So quietly.

So painfully.

"Please..."

Everyone leaned closer.

"...stay away from me..."

Silence.

Complete silence.

The words struck their hearts like a blade.

Harlina froze.

Koji lowered his head.

Lunar closed his eyes.

Nobody spoke.

Because they finally understood.

He wasn't trying to leave because he didn't love them.

He was trying to leave because he loved them too much.

He wanted to protect them.

Even if it meant suffering alone.

Even if it meant breaking his own heart.

Harlina's eyes filled with tears.

She looked at Harris.

Still sleeping peacefully.

Still carrying everything alone.

And for the first time...

She truly understood how afraid he was.

Not for himself.

For them.

Nobody woke him.

Nobody interrupted his sleep.

Instead, everyone quietly returned to the campsite.

Everyone except two people.

Harlina.

And Lunar.

They remained beside him.

Waiting.

Watching.

Protecting him.

Hours later...

Harris slowly opened his eyes.

The first thing he saw was sunlight.

The second thing he saw was Harlina.

The third thing he saw was Lunar smiling.

His soul immediately left his body.

"...Why are you both staring at me?"

"Finally awake?"

A sudden slap landed on his shoulder.

"OW!"

Harlina crossed her arms.

"Why did you sleep here?"

Harris blinked.

Then smiled nervously.

Because he already knew he was in trouble.

"Well..."

Another dangerous look.

He immediately answered.

"Because I couldn't hug you inside the tent."

Silence.

Harlina froze.

Lunar froze.

Then Harlina's face became completely red.

Lunar immediately started laughing.

Harris realized what he had just said.

His own face became red.

And somewhere in the distance...

Koji arrived carrying coffee.

Only to find three completely embarrassed idiots sitting under a tree.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 6: "THE GIFT CALLED FRIENDSHIP"

PART 3

For several seconds after Harris's answer, nobody spoke.

The morning breeze continued moving through the trees.

The fountain continued flowing peacefully.

Birds sang somewhere in the distance.

Yet beneath the large tree, time itself seemed frozen.

Harlina's face was completely red.

Lunar was trying his absolute best not to laugh.

And Harris...

Harris wanted the ground to open and swallow him.

Finally, Lunar lost the battle.

A loud laugh escaped from him.

Then another.

Then another.

Soon he was laughing so hard he could barely breathe.

"Harris..."

Lunar struggled to speak.

"...you really said that with a straight face."

Harris immediately covered his face.

"I didn't mean it like that."

Harlina looked away.

Her heart was beating so fast she thought everyone could hear it.

Unfortunately for her...

Koji arrived at exactly the wrong moment.

He carried three cups of coffee.

One for Harris.

One for Lunar.

One for Harlina.

The moment he arrived, he saw Harlina's red face.

Lunar laughing.

Harris hiding behind both hands.

Silence.

Koji looked at them.

Then at the coffee.

Then at them again.

"What happened?"

Nobody answered.

Koji became suspicious.

Very suspicious.

Then Lunar immediately pointed toward Harris.

"Him."

"Traitor."

Everyone laughed.

Even Harlina smiled.

Koji handed the coffee to Harris.

"Drink."

Harris accepted it.

The warm cup felt comforting against his hands.

For several moments he simply stared at the fountain.

The peaceful water.

The bright morning sky.

The gentle sunlight.

A beautiful morning.

Yet his mind remained elsewhere.

The Void Throne.

The three books.

Omega Void Emperor.

The coming war.

His smile slowly faded.

Koji immediately noticed.

Lunar noticed too.

And Harlina.

The three people who understood him best always noticed.

Harris slowly drank the coffee.

Then suddenly asked,

"Master."

Koji looked toward him.

"What?"

Harris remained silent for a moment.

Then asked the question that had been buried in his heart.

"If I went alone..."

Everyone became serious immediately.

"...and fought Omega Void Emperor by myself..."

Silence.

The air suddenly became heavy.

Harlina's expression changed instantly.

Lunar's smile disappeared.

Koji's eyes narrowed.

Harris continued.

"If I searched for the books alone..."

"...if I finished everything alone..."

"...and returned after the war..."

"...what would you all do?"

The question struck them harder than any attack.

Because they knew.

This wasn't curiosity.

This was a plan.

A plan Harris was seriously considering.

Koji stood up immediately.

The coffee nearly spilled from his hand.

"Harris."

His voice was firm.

Very firm.

"You think you're smart?"

Harris smiled weakly.

"No."

"You think you're a genius?"

"No."

"Then stop acting like one."

The smile remained.

But it became sad.

Koji pointed directly at him.

"Your plan might sound noble."

"Your plan might sound heroic."

"But it's stupid."

Harris laughed softly.

"That's harsh."

Koji wasn't finished.

"You are not escaping from us."

The smile weakened.

"What if I do?"

"You won't."

"What if I try?"

"You won't."

"What if I succeed?"

"You won't."

Lunar nodded.

"Agreed."

Harris sighed.

Then suddenly—

SLAP.

Harlina's hand connected directly with his shoulder.

Not hard.

But enough.

Enough to make him look at her.

Her eyes were filled with emotion.

"If you leave..."

Her voice trembled.

"...I won't talk to you again."

The words hit harder than any attack.

Harris froze.

The smile completely disappeared.

Because out of every threat in existence...

That was the one he feared most.

For several moments he couldn't answer.

Then quietly...

"...Okay."

The sadness in his voice made Harlina lower her head.

Because she knew.

He wasn't agreeing because he wanted to.

He was agreeing because he didn't want to hurt her.

The four sat quietly for a while.

Listening to the fountain.

Listening to the wind.

Listening to their own thoughts.

Eventually everyone returned to the campsite.

Breakfast was prepared.

Everyone gathered together.

Trying to enjoy the day.

Trying to pretend everything was normal.

But Harris couldn't stop thinking.

Every smile he saw made him more determined.

Every laugh made him more afraid.

Because now he knew exactly what he could lose.

Hours passed.

The afternoon sun climbed higher.

Most of the group rested near the tents.

Some played games.

Some talked.

Some relaxed.

Meanwhile Harris sat beneath the large tree near the fountain.

Alone.

Thinking.

Planning.

Searching for answers.

Searching for a way to protect everyone without involving them.

A hopeless plan.

But one he refused to abandon.

He closed his eyes.

The sound of the fountain faded.

The world became quiet.

Then—

A familiar voice echoed inside his mind.

"Harris."

A smile instantly appeared.

"So you're finally here."

Another voice laughed.

"You knew?"

Harris opened one eye.

"The Creator."

Then another.

"The Third Voice."

Then he smiled wider.

"And Buddy."

Three figures appeared before him.

The Creator.

The Third Voice.

And the presence of the suit itself.

For several seconds the three simply stared at him.

Confused.

Harris crossed his arms.

"You came to talk about the books."

Silence.

The Creator blinked.

The Third Voice blinked.

Buddy remained silent.

Harris pointed confidently.

"I knew it."

The three exchanged looks.

For the first time...

They were surprised.

The Third Voice laughed.

"You're getting better."

Harris grinned.

"So tell me."

The smile disappeared.

"Where is the first book?"

The atmosphere became serious.

The Creator stepped forward.

"The first book exists where your journey truly began."

Harris frowned.

The Void Throne.

A sudden chill ran through his body.

The smile vanished completely.

"The Void Throne Mountain..."

The Creator nodded.

Harris froze.

Of all places...

Why there?

The memories alone were enough to shake him.

The battles.

The sacrifices.

The pain.

The throne.

The gate.

Everything began there.

And now...

Everything was leading him back.

The Third Voice suddenly spoke.

"However..."

Harris immediately became suspicious.

"What now?"

"A condition."

He sighed.

"Of course."

The Creator looked directly into his eyes.

"You must not abandon your friends."

Silence.

The words struck him deeply.

The very thing he was trying to avoid.

The very thing he planned to do.

The Third Voice folded his arms.

"If you leave them behind..."

"We won't help you."

Buddy remained silent.

But Harris understood.

Buddy agreed.

For a long moment...

He said nothing.

Then finally lowered his head.

"...Okay."

The answer felt heavy.

Very heavy.

But he accepted.

Because deep inside...

Even he was tired of being alone.

The conversation ended.

The voices faded.

The world returned.

The sound of the fountain returned.

The wind returned.

The sunlight returned.

And then—

A sudden wave of fear crashed through him.

So intense.

So powerful.

That his entire body froze.

His eyes snapped open.

His heart pounded.

His breathing stopped.

The feeling was familiar.

Terrifyingly familiar.

Someone was here.

Someone dangerous.

Someone watching.

Harris slowly turned toward the fountain.

And what he saw made his blood run cold.

A face.

His face.

Standing on the opposite side of the fountain.

Smiling.

Waiting.

Watching.

Another Harris.

TO BE CONTINUED IN PART 4...

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI 🖤⚔️📖

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 6: "THE GIFT CALLED FRIENDSHIP"

PART 4

The moment Harris saw the figure standing beside the fountain, every sound around him seemed to disappear.

The wind stopped.

The birds became silent.

Even the sound of the flowing water felt distant.

Only the figure remained.

Standing there.

Smiling.

Looking exactly like him.

The same face.

The same eyes.

The same height.

The same presence.

Yet something was wrong.

Terribly wrong.

Because there was no warmth in those eyes.

No kindness.

No hesitation.

Only darkness.

Only cruelty.

Only the cold smile of someone who enjoyed suffering.

Harris slowly stood up.

His body was still injured.

His shoulders hurt.

His chest hurt.

His entire body felt heavy.

Yet he forced himself upright.

The figure smiled wider.

"Hello, Harris."

Harris narrowed his eyes.

"So you're finally here."

The fake Harris laughed.

"You sound disappointed."

"I expected better."

The smile on the fake Harris's face widened.

"Confident."

"No."

Harris clenched his fists.

"Just annoyed."

The fake Harris laughed again.

Then slowly pointed behind Harris.

"Instead of looking at me..."

"...why don't you look at your campsite?"

A chill ran through Harris's body.

Instantly he turned.

His eyes widened.

The campsite.

Everyone.

Koji.

Harlina.

Lunar.

Lina.

Mika.

Reku.

Roku.

All lying on the ground.

Covered in injuries.

Motionless.

Unconscious.

Blood stained the grass around them.

For a second…

Harris stopped breathing.

The world froze.

His heart shattered.

"HARLINA!"

He activated his power instantly.

Golden energy erupted around him.

The ground cracked beneath his feet.

The fountain water exploded upward.

His eyes filled with fury.

Pure fury.

The fake Harris only smiled.

"There it is."

The smile on Harris's face vanished.

Completely.

Only rage remained.

"You touched them."

The fake Harris nodded.

"I killed them."

The words echoed inside Harris's mind.

Again.

And again.

And again.

Something inside him snapped.

The air trembled.

Golden energy exploded from his body.

The surrounding trees shook violently.

The fake Harris looked impressed.

"Not bad."

Harris took a step forward.

Every step carried murderous intent.

"This is your last day."

The fake Harris laughed.

The laugh was cold.

Mocking.

Cruel.

"You still don't understand."

Harris said nothing.

His power continued rising.

The fake Harris suddenly disappeared.

Then appeared directly in front of him.

A fist crashed into Harris's stomach.

BOOM!

The impact sent him flying.

Blood escaped from his mouth.

His body smashed through several rocks before stopping.

Pain exploded through every nerve.

Yet Harris smiled.

The fake Harris frowned.

"...You're smiling?"

Harris slowly stood.

Blood dripped from his lips.

His breathing was unstable.

Yet the smile remained.

"So..."

He wiped blood from his mouth.

"...you're also a killer."

The fake Harris tilted his head.

Confused.

Then smiled again.

"Good observation."

A massive energy blast formed in his hand.

Before Harris could react—

BOOM!

The attack struck directly.

The explosion shook the entire forest.

Dust filled the air.

The ground cracked.

Trees shattered.

When the dust cleared, Harris was kneeling.

His body was covered in blood.

His vision blurred.

His breathing became painful.

Every part of his body screamed for him to stop.

Yet he stood.

Again.

The fake Harris stared.

For the first time...

He looked annoyed.

"Why are you standing?"

Harris laughed softly.

Blood continued flowing from his mouth.

"Because I hate losing."

The fake Harris shook his head.

"You are weaker than me."

"Probably."

"You can't win."

"Maybe."

"You'll die."

"Eventually."

The fake Harris narrowed his eyes.

Then smiled.

"Good."

Suddenly his body began fading.

Harris frowned.

The fake Harris pointed toward him.

"Tell Omega Void Emperor I said hello."

Then he disappeared.

Gone.

As though he had never existed.

The forest became silent again.

For several moments Harris stood motionless.

Then—

His legs gave out.

He fell to one knee.

Blood hit the ground.

His vision darkened.

But then he remembered.

The campsite.

His friends.

Instantly he forced himself up.

"No..."

He began running.

His body screamed in pain.

His injuries worsened with every step.

Yet he continued.

Faster.

Faster.

Faster.

He reached the campsite.

And froze.

Everyone was still lying there.

Motionless.

Unconscious.

The sight nearly broke him.

He stumbled toward them.

"Harlina..."

No response.

"Koji..."

Nothing.

"Lunar..."

Silence.

His heart raced.

Panic consumed him.

For the first time since the war...

He truly felt afraid.

Not for himself.

For them.

He clenched his fists.

Then spoke inside his mind.

"Buddy."

The voice immediately answered.

"I'm here."

"Cure them."

Silence.

"What about you?"

"Cure them."

"Harris—"

"That's an order."

Buddy became quiet.

For several seconds there was no response.

Then a warm golden light spread across the campsite.

The injuries disappeared.

The blood vanished.

The wounds healed.

One by one.

Everyone recovered.

Everyone except Harris.

His injuries remained.

His body continued weakening.

His vision blurred further.

Yet when he saw everyone breathing again…

He smiled.

A genuine smile.

Then he collapsed beside the fountain.

The sky above looked beautiful.

The clouds moved peacefully.

The sunlight felt warm.

Blood continued flowing from his mouth.

His body felt heavier than ever.

Yet he laughed.

A small laugh.

Then a louder one.

Finally he shouted toward the sky.

"I UNDERESTIMATED YOU!"

The forest echoed his voice.

His smile widened.

Pain filled every part of his body.

Yet he smiled even more.

A few minutes later...

Everyone began waking up.

Confusion spread through the campsite.

"What happened?"

"My head hurts."

"Why am I on the ground?"

"Was there an attack?"

Koji slowly sat up.

Lunar looked around.

Harlina blinked several times.

Then everyone heard a familiar voice.

"Hi guys."

Everyone turned.

Harris was lying beside the fountain.

Covered in blood.

Smiling like a complete idiot.

The entire group froze.

Harris raised a hand weakly.

"How was the feeling of death?"

Silence.

Complete silence.

Everyone stared at him.

Then—

"HARRIS!"

Everyone rushed toward him.

The shouting started immediately.

The panic started immediately.

The treatment started immediately.

And through all of it…

Harris kept smiling.

As if nothing had happened.

As if he wasn't standing at death's door.

As if pain meant nothing.

And that terrified everyone more than the injuries themselves.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 6: "THE GIFT CALLED FRIENDSHIP"

PART 5

The moment everyone reached Harris, the atmosphere became chaotic.

Koji immediately grabbed his shoulders.

Lunar knelt beside him.

Harlina's hands were shaking.

Blood covered Harris's clothes.

Blood covered his hands.

Blood covered the grass beneath him.

Yet the fool was smiling.

Actually smiling.

As if he had merely tripped while walking.

As if he hadn't just come back from the edge of death.

"HARRIS!"

Koji's voice echoed through the campsite.

"What happened?!"

Harris slowly looked toward him.

His breathing was weak.

Very weak.

Yet he still smiled.

"I met someone annoying."

Nobody laughed.

Nobody found that funny.

Because they could clearly see how serious his condition was.

Lunar immediately began treating his wounds.

Every touch caused pain.

Every movement hurt.

Every bandage felt like fire against his skin.

But Harris continued smiling.

That smile frightened everyone.

Because it wasn't normal anymore.

It looked forced.

It looked broken.

It looked like someone desperately trying to convince himself that everything was okay.

Then suddenly Harris laughed.

"This feels good."

Silence.

Complete silence.

Everyone froze.

Koji froze.

Lunar froze.

Even Reku and Roku froze.

Nobody understood what they had just heard.

Harlina slowly turned toward him.

"...What?"

Harris smiled.

"The pain."

Silence again.

"This feels good."

The entire group stared at him.

As if he had completely lost his mind.

A second later—

SLAP!

Harlina's hand struck his shoulder.

Not his face.

She didn't want to hurt him more.

But she was furious.

Her eyes were already becoming wet.

"Don't smile like that."

Harris blinked.

The smile remained.

"Like what?"

"Like a devil."

The smile finally weakened.

For a moment.

Just a moment.

Everyone saw how exhausted he truly was.

Then Harris suddenly looked around.

At Koji.

At Lunar.

At Harlina.

At everyone.

And quietly asked,

"You all told me not to leave you alone..."

Everyone listened carefully.

His smile trembled.

Then tears slowly appeared in his eyes.

"...but a few minutes ago..."

His voice broke.

"...you were all trying to leave me alone."

Silence.

Nobody knew what to say.

Because for those few terrible minutes...

Harris had truly believed they were dead.

That he had failed.

That he had lost everyone.

The tears continued falling.

Yet he was still smiling.

That sight broke everyone's hearts.

Harlina immediately hugged him.

Tightly.

As if she was afraid he would disappear again.

The others quietly lowered their heads.

Nobody joked anymore.

Nobody laughed anymore.

The reality of the situation had finally settled in.

Omega Void Emperor was real.

The threat was real.

And Harris was carrying far more than any of them realized.

Hours later...

The sun slowly began setting.

Orange light covered the campsite.

The atmosphere became peaceful again.

Most of the injuries had been treated.

Most of the panic had faded.

But everyone remained close to Harris.

Very close.

Too close for his liking.

Every time he moved, someone followed.

Every time he stood, someone watched.

Every time he breathed, someone checked if he was okay.

Finally Harris sighed.

"You all are acting like guards."

"Good."

Lunar answered immediately.

Everyone nodded.

Harris felt defeated.

Completely defeated.

As evening arrived, everyone gathered around the fountain.

The conversation eventually shifted toward the books.

The mission.

The future.

The journey.

Koji crossed his arms.

"So?"

Harris smiled.

"So?"

"Any clues?"

The entire group became interested.

Harlina immediately moved closer.

Lunar looked serious.

Everyone waited.

Then Harris smiled.

A dangerous smile.

A smile that usually meant trouble.

"Yes."

Everyone became excited.

"You found a clue?!"

"Where is it?"

"Tell us!"

Harris laughed.

Then pointed toward everyone.

"First answer my question."

Confusion spread instantly.

"What question?"

Harris smiled.

"The Friendship Day gift."

Silence.

Everyone blinked.

Nobody understood.

"What?"

"The gift."

"The one I received eleven years ago."

Everyone froze.

The answer.

The answer Harris had mentioned before.

The answer nobody could figure out.

The group began discussing immediately.

Ideas flew everywhere.

"A sword?"

"No."

"A book?"

"No."

"A memory?"

"No."

Hours seemed to pass.

Yet nobody found the answer.

Eventually Harris stood.

Still smiling.

Then walked toward the fountain.

And sat beside it.

Watching the water.

Waiting.

Thinking.

Meanwhile the group continued trying to solve the mystery.

Until finally—

Lunar froze.

Harlina froze.

The two looked at each other.

Then smiled.

They understood.

Immediately they ran toward the fountain.

The others followed.

Harris heard footsteps.

Without turning around, he smiled.

"You figured it out?"

Lunar nodded.

Harlina sat beside him.

"The gift..."

She smiled softly.

"...is us."

Silence.

The fountain continued flowing.

The evening wind moved gently through the trees.

Then Harris smiled.

A real smile.

The kind that rarely appeared.

"Correct."

Everyone froze.

Then slowly smiled.

Some laughed.

Some became emotional.

Because they finally understood.

Eleven years ago...

The greatest gift Harris had ever received wasn't power.

Wasn't destiny.

Wasn't becoming the Void Walker.

It was them.

His friends.

His family.

The people who stayed beside him.

The people who refused to abandon him.

The people he was trying so desperately to protect.

Harris looked toward the sky.

Then quietly spoke.

"The first book..."

Everyone immediately became serious.

"...is hidden in the Void Throne Mountain."

Silence.

Absolute silence.

Nobody expected that answer.

The place where everything began.

The place where legends were born.

The place connected to the Void Throne itself.

Koji's eyes widened.

"The Void Throne?"

Harris nodded.

Everyone understood now.

That was why he wanted to stay two more days.

That was why he didn't want to leave immediately.

He wanted one final peaceful memory.

Before stepping back into destiny.

Night arrived.

And unfortunately for Harris…

The girls had another plan.

The moment he entered the tent, something felt wrong.

Very wrong.

Everyone was smiling.

Too much.

"Harris."

He immediately stepped backward.

"No."

Nobody had even said anything yet.

"No."

The girls approached.

"No."

Lina revealed a box.

A large box.

Harris stared.

Then froze.

A makeup kit.

His soul left his body.

"No."

The girls smiled.

"YES."

Harris turned and ran.

Unfortunately—

Rope.

The trap activated instantly.

He fell directly onto the floor.

"BETRAYAL!"

Nobody cared.

The next thirty minutes became one of the darkest moments of his life.

The legendary Void Walker.

The hero who defeated Omega Crimson Ruler.

The protector of Universe Four.

Reduced to a victim of makeup.

Everyone laughed endlessly.

Photos were taken.

Memories were created.

And Harris promised revenge.

Someday.

Maybe.

Probably not.

Eventually everyone fell asleep.

The laughter slowly faded.

The night became peaceful again.

As expected…

Harris quietly escaped.

He walked toward the fountain.

Toward the large tree.

Toward his favorite place.

Then sat beneath it.

Looking toward the stars.

The world felt quiet.

Peaceful.

Then suddenly—

Warmth.

Harris blinked.

Confused.

He slowly looked down.

And froze.

Harlina.

Sleeping beside him.

Wrapped in the same blanket.

Hugging him tightly.

As if she never intended to let go.

Moonlight reflected across her silver-white hair.

Her face looked peaceful.

Safe.

Beautiful.

Harris smiled.

A small smile.

A genuine smile.

For a moment...

All his worries disappeared.

The books.

The war.

Omega Void Emperor.

The future.

Everything vanished.

Only this moment remained.

He gently moved a strand of hair away from her face.

Then whispered softly,

"Thank you."

She didn't hear him.

She was sleeping.

But he said it anyway.

Because he meant it.

And so...

Instead of sleeping...

Harris spent the entire night watching over her.

Protecting her.

Just as he always had.

Morning arrived.

The first rays of sunlight appeared.

Harris carefully lifted Harlina.

Carrying her gently back toward the tent.

Making sure she didn't wake up.

Then he refreshed himself.

Prepared coffee for everyone.

And began training.

His body still hurt.

His injuries still existed.

But his determination had become stronger.

Much stronger.

A new day had begun.

A day that would eventually lead toward the Void Throne Mountain.

Toward the first book.

Toward destiny itself.

Meanwhile...

Harlina suddenly woke up.

Her eyes widened.

"HARRIS?!"

Instant panic.

Everyone woke instantly.

The campsite exploded into chaos.

"HE'S MISSING AGAIN?!"

"HARRIS!"

"WHERE IS HE?!"

Then—

A familiar voice.

"Good morning."

Everyone turned.

And froze.

Harris stood there calmly.

Holding a tray full of coffee cups.

As if nothing had happened.

As if he hadn't caused a panic attack.

As if everyone wasn't seconds away from hunting him down.

Harlina immediately marched toward him.

SLAP.

"OW!"

"WHERE DID YOU GO?!"

Harris smiled.

"Training."

Silence.

Everyone stared.

Then began yelling at him simultaneously.

Koji.

Lunar.

Harlina.

Everyone.

Harris slowly tried backing away.

Planning another escape.

Unfortunately...

Everyone was already watching him.

A beautiful morning had begun.

And for once...

Harris wasn't facing it alone.

TO BE CONTINUED...

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI 🖤⚔️📖🌌

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7: THE FEAR THAT NEVER LEFT

PART 1

The beautiful morning that had begun with coffee and laughter did not remain peaceful for long.

Harris stood quietly in front of everyone, holding the empty tray after serving coffee. The sunlight shined through the trees around the campsite, and for a brief moment everything looked normal. Koji was drinking coffee while arguing with Lunar. Reku and Roku were still half asleep. Mika and Lina were laughing about something from the previous night. Harlina sat nearby holding her cup while secretly watching Harris.

For anyone else, it would have looked like a perfect morning.

But Harris could not enjoy it.

Every smile he saw reminded him of the vision.

Every laugh reminded him of their deaths.

Every peaceful moment reminded him that Omega Void Emperor was coming.

The memory of seeing everyone lying motionless on the ground refused to leave his mind.

His hands trembled slightly.

He quickly hid them behind his back.

Nobody noticed.

Or at least he thought nobody noticed.

Harlina noticed.

She always noticed.

The moment Harris slowly placed the tray on the table, he carefully looked around.

Everyone was distracted.

Perfect.

He slowly stepped backward.

One step.

Two steps.

Three steps.

Then he smiled.

"Goodbye."

Everyone turned.

"What?"

"See you later."

The moment those words left his mouth, Harris turned and ran.

"GET BACK HERE!"

Harlina's voice echoed across the campsite.

Harris immediately increased his speed.

Unfortunately, after only a few seconds, he suddenly stopped.

Everyone froze.

The person who was desperately trying to escape suddenly stopped running and walked toward the training area.

"What is he doing now?"

Lunar sighed.

"No idea."

Even Harris himself wasn't completely sure anymore.

His mind was becoming a battlefield.

One side wanted to spend time with everyone.

The other side wanted to become stronger before Omega arrived.

The fear inside him had become unbearable.

Without saying a word, Harris picked up several heavy stones.

Then he started training.

Again.

Everyone watched silently.

The same training.

The same dangerous training.

The same training that kept reopening his wounds.

Koji clenched his fists.

"Harris."

No response.

"Harris."

Still no response.

The boy continued lifting the stones.

Sweat slowly appeared across his face.

His breathing became heavier.

Still he refused to stop.

Harlina walked toward him.

"Harris."

Nothing.

She grabbed his arm.

Immediately he pulled away.

Not aggressively.

Not angrily.

Just enough to continue training.

That hurt her more than if he had yelled.

Because she knew exactly what it meant.

He was afraid.

Very afraid.

And whenever Harris became afraid, he carried everything alone.

Hours slowly passed.

Breakfast arrived.

Everyone gathered around the food.

Everyone except Harris.

"HARRIS!"

Koji shouted.

The boy didn't even turn around.

"Harris, breakfast."

"No."

"Why?"

"Not hungry."

His stomach immediately betrayed him.

GRRRRRRRRRRRRRR.

Everyone stared.

Harris froze.

The stomach sound echoed through the campsite.

Even the birds seemed to stop singing.

Reku burst out laughing first.

Then Roku.

Then Mika.

Soon everyone was laughing.

Even Harlina couldn't stop smiling.

Harris turned away.

"My stomach is lying."

That only made everyone laugh harder.

Yet despite the laughter...

He still didn't eat.

The smile slowly disappeared from everyone's faces.

Because they realized he wasn't joking.

He genuinely wasn't eating.

Again.

The same behavior.

The same self-destruction.

The same refusal to care about himself.

Lunar quietly lowered his coffee cup.

"Harris."

No response.

"Eat."

"No."

"That's not a request."

"No."

Lunar sighed.

The stubbornness was impossible to defeat.

Eventually breakfast ended.

Everyone returned to their activities.

Everyone except Harris.

He continued training.

The sun rose higher.

The temperature increased.

His injuries worsened.

Still he continued.

Lunch arrived.

Again everyone gathered.

Again Harris refused.

Again everyone tried convincing him.

Again he refused.

The second meal passed.

And still Harris had eaten nothing.

The cheerful atmosphere from the morning slowly vanished.

Everyone could feel something was wrong.

Very wrong.

Harris wasn't just training.

He was running from something.

From a memory.

From a fear.

From a nightmare.

As the afternoon continued, his movements slowly became weaker.

His punches lost power.

His breathing became unstable.

His legs shook.

Still he continued.

Again.

And again.

And again.

Until finally—

The memory returned.

The vision.

The scene.

The nightmare.

Koji lying motionless.

Lunar covered in blood.

Reku and Roku unmoving.

Lina and Mika gone.

Harlina reaching toward him while disappearing into darkness.

The same scene.

Again.

Again.

Again.

Harris dropped the stone.

His entire body froze.

The world around him disappeared.

The campsite disappeared.

The trees disappeared.

Everything vanished.

Only the nightmare remained.

"No..."

His voice was barely audible.

The memory continued.

"No..."

His breathing became unstable.

His heart raced.

The vision grew stronger.

"HARRIS!"

Someone called him.

He couldn't hear.

The nightmare drowned everything else.

Then suddenly—

A scream.

A loud scream.

A scream filled with fear.

A scream filled with pain.

A scream filled with helplessness.

A scream that shocked everyone.

It came from Harris.

For a moment the entire campsite froze.

Nobody moved.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody breathed.

Because they had never heard Harris cry like that.

Not once.

Not ever.

The boy who always smiled through pain.

The boy who always laughed through injuries.

The boy who hid every wound.

The boy who carried entire worlds on his shoulders.

Was crying.

Loudly.

Desperately.

Broken.

Harlina's heart shattered instantly.

"HARRIS!"

She ran first.

Everyone followed.

The moment they reached him, Harris was on his knees.

His hands were shaking.

Tears continuously fell from his eyes.

His breathing was unstable.

His entire body trembled.

"Harris!"

No response.

"Harris!"

Nothing.

He was trapped inside the nightmare.

Inside the memory.

Inside the fear.

Without hesitation, Harlina hugged him.

Tightly.

Very tightly.

As if she was afraid he would disappear.

A second later Koji joined.

Then Lunar.

Then Reku.

Then Roku.

Then Mika.

Then Lina.

Soon Harris found himself surrounded.

Completely surrounded.

By warmth.

By friendship.

By family.

Slowly…

Very slowly…

The nightmare began fading.

The darkness retreated.

The vision disappeared.

The voices vanished.

Harris blinked.

The first thing he saw was Harlina crying.

The second thing he saw was everyone hugging him.

The third thing he noticed was that he was covered in tears.

His own tears.

Confusion appeared on his face.

He looked around.

Then smiled weakly.

"What happened?"

Silence.

Everyone froze.

"What happened?"

The question stunned them.

Because Harris genuinely didn't understand.

He slowly looked around again.

Then asked another question.

"Why are you all hugging me?"

Nobody knew whether to laugh or cry.

Harlina immediately grabbed his shoulders.

"WHY DID YOU CRY?!"

Harris blinked.

"Oh."

The memory returned.

For a brief moment.

His smile faded.

Everyone noticed.

The sadness in his eyes was unlike anything they had seen before.

"What did you remember?"

Koji asked quietly.

Silence.

Harris lowered his head.

The smile disappeared completely.

The wind moved through the trees.

Nobody rushed him.

Nobody interrupted him.

Finally he spoke.

"I remembered something."

Everyone waited.

"Something darker than the Void."

Silence.

His voice trembled slightly.

"It scared me."

The confession alone shocked everyone.

Because Harris almost never admitted fear.

Almost never.

"What memory?"

Lunar asked.

The entire group waited.

Harris slowly closed his eyes.

The image appeared again.

Everyone dead.

Everyone gone.

Everyone taken away.

His hands tightened.

Then he slowly shook his head.

"I can't tell anyone."

The words immediately broke Harlina's heart.

Because she knew.

Whatever he saw...

Whatever he remembered...

He was carrying it alone again.

And that frightened her more than the nightmare itself.

Far away...

Hidden beyond the forest...

A familiar killing intent suddenly appeared.

Harris's eyes instantly opened.

The smile vanished.

The sadness vanished.

The fear vanished.

Only seriousness remained.

For the first time that day...

The Void Walker appeared again.

He slowly stood.

Everyone immediately noticed the change.

Lunar noticed first.

The expression.

The eyes.

The posture.

The danger.

Something was coming.

Something bad.

Very bad.

Harris quietly stepped forward.

Then spoke.

His voice calm.

Cold.

Dangerously calm.

"Everyone."

The group looked at him.

His eyes stared toward the forest.

Toward the approaching presence.

"Stay away from me."

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7: THE FEAR THAT NEVER LEFT

PART 2

The moment Harris said those words, the atmosphere around the campsite completely changed.

"Stay away from me."

His voice was calm.

Too calm.

The kind of calm that only appeared when something dangerous was about to happen.

Everyone immediately noticed it.

The playful atmosphere vanished.

The laughter vanished.

Even the wind felt heavier.

Lunar slowly stepped forward.

"What is it?"

Harris didn't answer.

His eyes remained fixed on the forest.

The killing intent was getting closer.

Closer.

Closer.

Every second it became stronger.

His heartbeat accelerated.

Not from fear for himself.

But fear for everyone standing behind him.

The nightmare from earlier was still fresh in his mind.

The image of their deaths refused to disappear.

And now...

That same feeling was approaching again.

"Harris."

Koji called.

Still no response.

Harlina grabbed his hand.

"What happened?"

For a moment Harris looked at her.

His expression softened.

Then immediately hardened again.

"Please."

His voice became serious.

"Move away."

Nobody moved.

Because nobody understood.

Only Lunar understood.

He had seen this expression before.

Many times.

This was the same face Harris made before risking his life.

The same face before every sacrifice.

The same face before every impossible battle.

Lunar immediately stepped in front of everyone.

"Move back."

The group looked confused.

"Huh?"

"NOW."

The seriousness in Lunar's voice shocked everyone.

They slowly stepped backward.

Not far.

But enough.

Harris nodded.

"Thank you."

Then—

The forest exploded.

A dark energy blast shot toward the campsite.

Everything happened in less than a second.

The target wasn't Harris.

The target was Koji.

"HARRIS!"

Someone screamed.

But Harris had already moved.

His body reacted before his mind.

He dashed forward.

The attack struck him directly.

BOOM!

The impact threw him several meters away.

The ground cracked beneath him.

Dust filled the air.

Everyone froze.

Koji's eyes widened.

The attack had been aimed directly at him.

And Harris had used his own body as a shield.

Again.

Always again.

The dust slowly cleared.

Harris stood up.

Blood ran down his arm.

Another injury.

Another wound.

Another sacrifice.

Yet he smiled.

"Good."

Everyone stared at him.

"Good?"

Harris wiped the blood from his mouth.

"It was aiming at me before."

His eyes narrowed.

"So now it's targeting everyone."

That realization made his expression darker.

Because it confirmed something terrible.

The enemy wasn't hunting him anymore.

The enemy was hunting the people he loved.

A figure slowly emerged from the trees.

The same killer.

The same assassin.

The same mysterious Harris version.

His face remained hidden beneath darkness.

His eyes glowed with cold hatred.

Everyone immediately felt the pressure.

Even Koji and Lunar instinctively stepped backward.

The killer looked directly at Harris.

No words.

No introduction.

No warning.

Just killing intent.

Pure killing intent.

Harris stepped forward.

His body hurt.

His injuries screamed.

His muscles begged him to stop.

But he ignored everything.

Because behind him stood his family.

And that was enough.

The killer moved first.

A black energy blade appeared instantly.

The attack shot directly toward Koji again.

"NOT HAPPENING!"

Harris intercepted it.

Another wound opened across his side.

Blood sprayed across the ground.

Koji froze.

The attack would have killed him.

Without question.

Yet Harris had taken it without hesitation.

Again.

And again.

And again.

"HARRIS!"

Harlina screamed.

But Harris ignored the pain.

Ignored the blood.

Ignored everything.

Only the enemy mattered.

The killer suddenly disappeared.

Everyone looked around.

Then—

A second presence appeared.

Directly behind Harlina.

Time stopped.

Harris's eyes widened.

No.

Not her.

Anyone but her.

The blade descended.

The world slowed.

Harlina couldn't react.

The others couldn't react.

Nobody was fast enough.

Nobody except Harris.

The moment he saw the attack—

Something inside him broke.

Not physically.

Emotionally.

The last restraint.

The last limit.

The last chain.

His eyes changed.

His aura exploded.

The air shook.

The ground cracked.

The fountain erupted upward.

Everyone froze.

A terrifying energy burst from his body.

Then Harris screamed.

A scream filled with rage.

A scream filled with terror.

A scream filled with love.

"DON'T TOUCH HER!"

BOOOOOOOOM!

A golden shockwave exploded across the entire forest.

The killer was thrown backward instantly.

Trees shattered.

The ground collapsed.

Even the clouds above trembled.

Everyone stared in complete shock.

Harris was different.

Very different.

The calm boy from earlier was gone.

The smiling idiot was gone.

Only a monster remained.

A monster created by desperation.

His eyes glowed.

His aura burned.

His body shook with power.

The killer finally looked surprised.

For the first time.

Harris charged.

The battle became insanity.

Punch.

Kick.

Impact.

Explosion.

The entire forest shook.

Every attack carried enough force to destroy massive sections of land.

But something was wrong.

Very wrong.

The killer remained untouched.

Every time Harris attacked—

The enemy dodged.

Every strike.

Every punch.

Every kick.

Everything.

Meanwhile Harris's condition worsened.

His wounds reopened.

Blood covered his clothes.

His breathing became heavier.

His body was breaking apart.

Yet he continued fighting.

Because he didn't care about himself.

He only cared about one thing.

Protecting everyone.

The killer suddenly landed a direct hit.

BOOM!

Harris crashed into several trees.

Blood spilled from his mouth.

Still he stood.

Another attack.

Another wound.

Another injury.

Still he stood.

The group could only watch helplessly.

For the first time...

They realized how terrifying Harris truly was.

Not because of power.

Not because of strength.

But because he simply refused to stop.

Even while dying.

He kept standing.

Again.

And again.

And again.

Harlina's tears wouldn't stop.

"Please stop..."

Her voice shook.

"Please..."

But Harris couldn't hear her.

His mind was consumed by one thought.

Protect them.

Protect them.

Protect them.

The killer suddenly raised his weapon.

A final attack began forming.

Dark energy gathered.

The pressure alone shook the forest.

Everyone felt death approaching.

Then—

A massive Void portal opened above the battlefield.

Everyone looked up.

The killer stopped moving.

Even Harris paused.

A new presence appeared.

A familiar presence.

Too familiar.

A figure slowly stepped out of the portal.

The same height.

The same face.

The same eyes.

The same voice.

Everyone froze.

Because another Harris had just arrived.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7 — PART 3

"THE HARRIS FROM ANOTHER UNIVERSE"

The peaceful atmosphere around the campsite disappeared in an instant.

Only moments ago everyone had been trying to calm Harris after his emotional breakdown.

Harlina, Koji, Lunar, Lina, Mika, Reku, and Roku were surrounding him, trying to remind him that they were alive.

That they were still here.

That he wasn't alone.

Harris slowly wiped the tears from his eyes.

He looked at everyone hugging him.

For a moment...

The terrifying vision disappeared.

The vision of their deaths.

The vision of blood.

The vision of Omega Void Emperor.

The vision he couldn't forget.

A weak smile appeared on his face.

"What happened?"

Everyone froze.

Harlina immediately smacked his shoulder.

"IDIOT! You were crying like the world was ending!"

Koji crossed his arms.

"You scared everyone."

Lunar stared at him carefully.

"What memory made you cry like that?"

The smile slowly disappeared from Harris's face.

His eyes lowered.

A darkness appeared inside them.

Something even Harlina noticed.

"I can't tell you."

Everyone became silent.

They knew that expression.

The expression Harris always showed whenever he carried pain alone.

Suddenly...

His body froze.

The smile vanished.

His eyes widened.

The air changed.

A familiar killing intent appeared.

Harris immediately stood up.

Everyone noticed the change.

Lunar's expression became serious.

"Harris?"

His voice became cold.

"Everyone..."

"Move away from me."

Nobody moved.

Harlina stepped closer.

"What happened?"

"NOW!"

The shout shocked everyone.

Even Harlina froze.

This wasn't fear.

This wasn't sadness.

This was danger.

Real danger.

Lunar immediately understood.

"Everyone back away!"

The group quickly moved.

Just in time.

A black energy arrow tore through the air.

WHOOOOOOOSH!!!

Its target wasn't Harris.

It was Koji.

"MASTER!"

Harris exploded forward.

BOOM!

The ground cracked beneath his feet.

He appeared directly in front of Koji.

The arrow pierced through Harris's side.

Blood splashed across the grass.

"HARRIS!"

Koji's face turned pale.

But Harris didn't even react.

His eyes were searching.

Searching for the killer.

Then...

Another arrow appeared.

This time...

Its target was Harlina.

Everything stopped.

Harris saw it.

Harlina didn't.

She was still turning around.

Confused.

The arrow was already seconds away.

Too far.

Too fast.

For the first time...

Harris realized he couldn't reach her.

And something inside him snapped.

"DON'T TOUCH HER!!!"

BOOOOOOOOOOOOOM!!!

A violent wave of energy erupted from his body.

The fountain exploded.

Trees bent backwards.

The entire campsite shook.

Everyone stared in horror.

His eyes had changed.

His aura had changed.

The pain.

The fear.

The guilt.

Everything became rage.

Pure rage.

The killer finally appeared.

A dark figure wearing a shattered black cloak.

The same killer.

The same monster who attacked everyone before.

The killer smiled.

That smile alone made Harris furious.

Without hesitation he attacked.

BOOM!

The fight began.

The killer fired dozens of energy arrows.

Harris charged straight through them.

One arrow pierced his shoulder.

Another cut his arm.

Another pierced his leg.

But he didn't stop.

Not once.

Not even for a second.

Because every attack aimed at him...

Wasn't aimed at Harlina.

Wasn't aimed at Koji.

Wasn't aimed at Lunar.

That alone was enough.

The battle became insane.

Explosions shook the forest.

Trees collapsed.

The ground shattered.

Everyone could only watch.

"Harris..."

Harlina's voice trembled.

He was winning.

But he was also losing.

His injuries were increasing rapidly.

The killer remained almost untouched.

Yet Harris continued smiling.

That terrifying smile.

The smile he always showed whenever he was suffering.

Then suddenly—

A giant Void Portal opened behind the battlefield.

Everyone turned.

A figure stepped out.

Silence.

The figure looked around.

Then smiled.

The group froze.

Because he looked exactly like Harris.

The same face.

The same voice.

The same eyes.

But his hair was longer.

His body carried countless scars.

And a massive scar crossed part of his face.

The stranger looked at everyone.

"Where is the Void Walker?"

Nobody answered.

Everyone was frozen.

Koji stepped forward.

"Who are you?"

The stranger smiled.

"My name is Harris."

Everyone froze harder.

Lunar immediately noticed the differences.

Different energy.

Different scars.

Different clothes.

Different expression.

This wasn't their Harris.

This was another one.

"A different universe..." Lunar whispered.

The stranger nodded.

"Universe 6."

Then—

"HARRIS!"

Harlina suddenly screamed.

Everyone turned.

Their Harris was still fighting.

Still bleeding.

Still out of control.

The killer suddenly vanished into darkness.

Escaping.

The battle ended.

But Harris didn't calm down.

His eyes immediately landed on the new arrival.

Another Harris.

Standing beside his friends.

Talking to them.

His mind reached only one conclusion.

Enemy.

Without warning—

BOOOOOOOOOOOM!!!

He launched forward.

Everyone screamed.

"HARRIS STOP!"

He couldn't hear them.

His rage had completely consumed him.

The new Harris sensed the danger.

His eyes widened.

"What the—"

Too late.

Their Harris appeared directly in front of him.

His fist was already raised.

The air itself began cracking.

The fountain exploded upward.

The ground shattered beneath both of them.

Universe 6 Harris instantly realized something terrifying.

This Harris was stronger than him.

Much stronger.

The punch moved forward.

Closer.

Closer.

Only centimeters away.

Harlina screamed.

"STOP!!!"

Then—

A familiar voice echoed inside Harris's mind.

Buddy.

"HARRIS!"

Everything froze.

The punch stopped.

Only a few centimeters from Universe 6 Harris's face.

Silence.

Then—

BOOOOOOOOOOOOM!!!

A pressure wave exploded outward.

The punch never landed.

Yet the force alone blasted Universe 6 Harris backward several meters.

He crashed through the grass.

Everyone stared in disbelief.

The attack never connected.

Yet it still carried that much power.

Universe 6 Harris slowly stood up.

Completely shocked.

"What… was that?"

Harris's eyes slowly returned to normal.

The rage disappeared.

The pain returned.

All his injuries reopened at once.

Blood poured from his wounds.

His body finally gave up.

His legs collapsed.

"Harris!"

He fell forward.

Unconscious.

Several minutes later...

Back at the campsite...

Everyone was treating Harris's wounds.

Bandages covered almost his entire body.

Universe 6 Harris sat nearby.

Still staring at him.

Still shocked.

Lunar sat beside him.

"Now you understand."

The other Harris nodded slowly.

"He protects everyone like that?"

Koji sighed.

"Unfortunately."

Harlina crossed her arms.

"Idiot never knows when to stop."

Suddenly—

GRRRRRRRRRR...

Everyone froze.

The sound came again.

GRRRRRRRRRR...

Harris's stomach.

The unconscious Harris was hungry.

Silence.

Then—

Everyone burst into laughter.

Even Universe 6 Harris laughed.

For the first time since arriving.

A few moments later Harris slowly opened his eyes.

The first thing he said:

"Is lunch ready?"

SLAP!

Harlina immediately hit him.

"It's dinner!"

"Not lunch!"

"Ouch..."

Universe 6 Harris stared.

Completely confused.

A few minutes later he quietly leaned toward Harris.

"Can I ask something?"

"What?"

"Why do you accept the slaps?"

Everyone froze.

Harris blinked.

"What?"

"Why don't you dodge?"

"You're fast enough."

Silence.

Then Harris looked toward Harlina.

Whose face immediately turned red.

A smile appeared.

"Because she's Harlina."

The answer somehow made even less sense.

Universe 6 Harris stared blankly.

Then his smile disappeared.

He looked away.

And quietly said—

"My Harlina stopped talking to me."

Silence fell over the campsite.

Everyone listened.

The Universe 6 Harris slowly touched the large scar on his face.

"After Crimson Eclipse."

"She hated the sacrifices."

"She hated seeing me destroy myself."

"I kept protecting everyone."

"She kept getting angry."

His voice trembled.

"Months passed."

"We didn't speak."

The campsite became completely silent.

"Then one night..."

A weak smile appeared.

"She finally spoke again."

Everyone watched him.

"The first thing she said..."

"...was that she loved me."

Harlina lowered her head.

Her face became red.

The Universe 6 Harris smiled sadly.

"I thought everything would be okay."

Then the smile disappeared.

"Omega arrived that night."

Silence.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody could.

Even Harris lowered his head.

Tears slowly appeared in his eyes.

Because for the first time...

He saw himself.

A future version.

A version who lost everything.

Harris slowly stood.

Walked toward him.

And placed a hand on his shoulder.

"I promise."

Universe 6 Harris looked up.

"I will save them."

The other Harris froze.

Tears appeared.

For the first time...

Hope returned to his eyes.

Later...

Dinner was finally ready.

Everyone started eating.

Except one person.

Harris.

He was sitting alone near the fountain again.

Looking toward the sky.

Thinking.

About Omega Void Emperor.

About the dead universes.

About the first book.

About Void Throne Mountain.

About the future war.

About protecting everyone.

His fists slowly tightened.

The anger returned.

Not toward himself.

Toward Omega.

Toward the monster destroying countless worlds.

Suddenly—

SLAP!

Harlina appeared beside him.

"Eat."

Harris blinked.

"That hurt."

"Good."

She grabbed his arm.

"You're eating."

Harris sighed.

Universe 6 Harris laughed.

Koji laughed.

Lunar laughed.

Everyone laughed.

And for a brief moment...

The darkness around Harris became a little smaller.

TO BE CONTINUED...

AUTHOR: HARRIS RAVI

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7 — PART 4

"TRUTH OR DARE"

The night slowly settled over the campsite.

The stars filled the sky.

The fountain continued to flow peacefully.

For the first time in many days, everyone was together.

Alive.

Safe.

Laughing.

Even though Omega Void Emperor still existed somewhere in the multiverse.

Even though countless universes were already falling.

Even though the journey to Void Throne Mountain was approaching.

For this one night...

Everyone wanted to forget the fear.

Everyone except Harris.

Because Harris couldn't stop thinking.

Every time he looked at his friends...

The vision returned.

Koji dying.

Lunar falling.

Harlina covered in blood.

The same nightmare.

Again.

And again.

And again.

So while everyone was eating dinner and talking…

Harris quietly slipped away.

As usual.

Toward the fountain.

Toward isolation.

Toward his thoughts.

Unfortunately for him…

Everyone already knew him too well.

The moment he disappeared, Harlina noticed.

The moment Harlina noticed, Lunar noticed.

The moment Lunar noticed, everyone noticed.

Five minutes later...

Harris was sitting on the fountain edge looking at the stars.

Then suddenly—

"HARRIS."

He froze.

That voice.

Danger.

He slowly turned around.

Everyone was standing there.

Harlina.

Lina.

Mika.

Reku.

Koji.

Lunar.

Roku.

Universe 6 Harris.

All staring at him.

Like hunters finding their prey.

Harris slowly stood.

"Good evening."

Nobody replied.

His survival instincts immediately activated.

"Okay..."

"Why are you all looking at me like that?"

Still silence.

Then Harlina smiled.

That smile scared him.

"Come here."

"No."

"Come here."

"No."

"Come here."

"No."

"Why?"

"Because I enjoy living."

Everyone burst into laughter.

Even Universe 6 Harris laughed.

Harris slowly started backing away.

One step.

Two steps.

Three steps.

Then—

RUN!

He immediately tried escaping.

"GET HIM!"

"HARRIS RUNNING!"

"STOP HIM!"

"HE'S ESCAPING AGAIN!"

The entire campsite exploded into chaos.

Harris sprinted through the campsite.

Jumped over bags.

Dodged chairs.

Leaped across rocks.

Universe 6 Harris watched in complete disbelief.

"Is this normal?"

Lunar sighed.

"You have no idea."

Five minutes later...

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7: "THE WEIGHT OF ONE HEART"

PART 3

Night slowly descended over the campsite.

The stars appeared one by one above the forest.

The fountain continued its gentle sound.

The air felt peaceful.

But unfortunately for Harris...

Peace was the last thing waiting for him.

The moment dinner ended, he immediately sensed danger.

Not Omega Void Emperor.

Not an assassin.

Not a Void Soldier.

Something far worse.

The girls were smiling.

Harris slowly stepped backward.

Lina smiled.

Mika smiled.

Reku smiled.

Even Harlina was trying to hide her smile.

His instincts screamed.

"RUN."

So he did.

Unfortunately...

He managed exactly three steps.

Before a rope wrapped around his waist.

"HARRIS!"

"No!"

"HARRIS!"

"NO!"

"HARRIS!"

"HELP!"

Nobody helped.

Not even Koji.

Not even Lunar.

Not even Universe 6 Harris.

They simply watched.

The legendary Void Walker was dragged back into the center of camp.

Like a criminal.

Like a captured animal.

Like someone about to face execution.

Universe 6 Harris stared.

"What are they doing?"

Lunar smiled.

"You'll understand."

A chair was placed in the center.

Harris was tied.

Again.

His soul nearly left his body.

Then Lina announced proudly.

"Truth or Dare."

The entire world became silent.

Harris froze.

Universe 6 Harris blinked.

"What?"

Lunar laughed.

"You are about to witness something scarier than Omega."

Universe 6 Harris thought he was joking.

He wasn't.

Not even slightly.

The game began.

Every girl immediately surrounded Harris.

The poor boy looked like a prisoner surrounded by judges.

"Truth or Dare?"

Harris sighed.

"Truth."

Everyone smiled.

A dangerous smile.

The kind that meant trouble.

Mika immediately attacked.

"How much do you love Harlina?"

Harris froze.

Universe 6 Harris nearly choked on his drink.

Harlina's face immediately turned red.

Everyone leaned forward.

Waiting.

Watching.

Harris slowly lowered his head.

"...a lot."

Everyone shouted.

"THAT'S NOT AN ANSWER!"

His face turned even redder.

Then he quietly spoke.

"If she was in danger..."

Silence.

His smile disappeared.

"I would sacrifice everything."

Everyone became quiet.

The atmosphere suddenly changed.

Because nobody doubted him.

Not even for a second.

Harlina lowered her head.

Tears quietly formed.

Harris continued.

"I would give my powers."

"I would give my future."

"I would give my life."

"I would give everything."

The silence became heavier.

Universe 6 Harris looked at him.

Then slowly smiled.

He understood.

Because he would do the same.

The next question arrived.

"Why do you love her?"

Harris immediately looked away.

"I refuse."

"No."

"I refuse."

"No."

"I refuse."

SLAP.

"ANSWER."

Everyone laughed.

Harris surrendered.

Then slowly looked toward Harlina.

The girl immediately became nervous.

"I love her because..."

He paused.

"...she never left."

Silence.

"Everyone sees the Void Walker."

"Everyone sees the hero."

"Everyone sees the fighter."

His voice softened.

"But she always saw Harris."

Harlina's eyes widened.

The girls smiled.

Universe 6 Harris quietly listened.

"I was selfish."

"I pushed people away."

"I hid injuries."

"I lied."

"I carried everything alone."

"But she never stopped worrying."

His smile returned.

A real smile.

"That is why."

Nobody spoke.

The answer was too honest.

Too real.

Too emotional.

Harlina quietly wiped away her tears.

Then another question arrived.

"What is your favorite thing about her?"

Harris instantly replied.

"Her caring personality."

Everyone nodded.

Then Lina grinned.

"And?"

Harris froze.

"No."

"And?"

"No."

"AND?"

He sighed.

Then pointed at Harlina.

"Her second personality."

Everyone became curious.

"Second personality?"

Harris nodded.

"The Slapping Mode."

The entire camp exploded into laughter.

Harlina immediately attacked him.

SLAP.

The laughter doubled.

Universe 6 Harris stared.

Then slowly moved away from Harlina.

A survival instinct.

Everyone noticed.

More laughter followed.

After almost an hour of teasing...

The game finally ended.

At least for Harris.

Or so he thought.

Because Universe 6 Harris suddenly stood up.

His expression had changed.

Lunar noticed.

"What happened?"

Universe 6 Harris looked toward Harris.

Then quietly asked.

"...why does he look so tired?"

Silence.

The camp became quiet.

Very quiet.

Lunar slowly looked toward the stars.

Then took a deep breath.

"You want to know?"

Universe 6 Harris nodded.

Lunar slowly began speaking.

And for the first time...

Someone told Harris's entire story.

The real story.

Not the legend.

Not the hero.

Not the Void Walker.

Just Harris.

Universe 6 Harris listened.

Everyone listened.

Lunar spoke about the boy who lost his parents at birth.

The boy raised by Koji.

The lonely child who smiled despite having nothing.

The child who never wanted others to feel alone.

The boy who carried pain silently.

The boy who hid every wound.

The boy who smiled while suffering.

The boy who trained until he collapsed.

The boy who never asked for help.

The boy who cried alone beside fountains.

The boy who spent nights awake protecting everyone.

The boy who carried the Void Walker burden.

The boy who sacrificed himself repeatedly.

The boy who endured the Crimson Eclipse.

The boy who almost died countless times.

The boy who kept pretending everything was fine.

The boy who injured himself just to speak with the Creator.

The boy who feared losing everyone more than death itself.

The boy who constantly planned to leave alone.

The boy who thought everyone would be safer without him.

The boy sitting right beside them.

Harris.

Nobody laughed anymore.

Nobody spoke.

The camp became silent.

Universe 6 Harris lowered his head.

Tears slowly appeared.

Then more.

Then more.

Until he could no longer stop them.

Because he finally understood.

The reason Harris smiled.

The reason Harris never rested.

The reason Harris kept sacrificing himself.

The reason Harris looked broken.

Universe 6 Harris finally whispered,

"You carried all that..."

Harris looked away.

Embarrassed.

"It wasn't that bad."

Everyone immediately shouted.

"IT WAS!"

Even Harlina joined.

Universe 6 Harris laughed through tears.

Then stood.

Walked toward Harris.

And grabbed his shoulder.

"You are an idiot."

Harris blinked.

"What?"

"You are a complete idiot."

The camp laughed.

Then Universe 6 Harris smiled.

"But you're stronger than me."

For the first time...

Harris didn't know how to answer.

The stars continued shining above them.

The fountain continued flowing.

And somewhere far away...

Omega Void Emperor waited.

Unaware that more Void Walkers were beginning to unite against him.# VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7: "THE WEIGHT OF ONE HEART"

PART 4

The laughter from the camp slowly faded as the night grew deeper.

The stars shined brightly above the forest.

The fountain continued its calm song.

For a rare moment...

Nobody was fighting.

Nobody was running.

Nobody was bleeding.

Everyone simply sat together.

Universe 6 Harris remained beside Lunar, still thinking about everything he had just heard.

The more he thought about it...

The more unbelievable it felt.

He had met countless versions of himself across broken universes.

Some were warriors.

Some were rulers.

Some were survivors.

Some had become soldiers under Omega Void Emperor.

But none of them...

None of them carried pain the way this Harris did.

Yet somehow...

This Harris still smiled.

Universe 6 Harris quietly looked toward him.

Harris was sitting beside the fountain.

Looking at the water.

Thinking.

Always thinking.

Always carrying something alone.

The version from Universe 6 suddenly stood up.

Then walked toward him.

"You should sleep."

Harris smiled.

"You too."

"I am serious."

"So am I."

Universe 6 Harris sighed.

"You really are impossible."

Harris laughed softly.

"Everyone says that."

The version sat beside him.

For a few minutes neither spoke.

The sound of water filled the silence.

Finally Universe 6 Harris asked,

"Are you scared?"

Harris looked at him.

Then looked toward the sky.

"...every day."

The answer surprised him.

"You admit it?"

Harris nodded.

"I am terrified."

The version froze.

Because this was not the answer he expected.

Harris smiled weakly.

"I am not afraid of dying."

His eyes slowly became distant.

"I am afraid of surviving alone."

Silence.

The words felt heavier than any battle.

The version lowered his head.

He understood that fear.

Because he was already living it.

His universe was gone.

His friends were gone.

His Harlina was gone.

And every morning he woke up alone.

For the first time...

Neither version of Harris spoke.

Because both understood each other's pain.

A few moments later—

"HARRIS!"

The voice echoed through the campsite.

Both Harrises froze.

Then slowly turned.

Harlina stood there.

Arms crossed.

Angry.

Very angry.

Behind her stood Lina.

Mika.

Reku.

And Roku.

All of them looking suspicious.

Harris immediately stood.

"Good night."

Then tried walking away.

"STOP."

He froze.

Universe 6 Harris watched with fear.

The legendary Void Walker...

The strongest Void Walker in existence...

Had been defeated by a single word.

Harlina slowly approached.

Then grabbed Harris by the hoodie.

"You are sleeping with everyone tonight."

"No."

"Yes."

"No."

"Yes."

Universe 6 Harris slowly stepped backward.

He wanted absolutely no part in this battle.

Unfortunately—

Lunar grabbed his shoulder.

"You too."

"What?"

"You too."

The version immediately understood Harris's suffering.

The girls won.

As usual.

A few minutes later...

The campsite became peaceful once more.

Blankets covered the ground.

Everyone prepared to sleep.

Unfortunately for Harris...

The girls had another plan.

The moment he sat down...

Several ropes appeared.

His eyes widened.

"No."

Nobody listened.

"No."

Still nobody listened.

Five minutes later...

Harris was tied.

Again.

Universe 6 Harris stared in horror.

"How many times does this happen?"

Koji laughed.

"You have no idea."

The version looked toward Harris.

Harris looked back.

Both silently agreed that this situation was hopeless.

The girls finally settled down.

One by one everyone fell asleep.

The camp became quiet.

Only the fountain could be heard now.

Universe 6 Harris remained awake.

Lunar remained awake.

And Harris remained awake.

As usual.

The version looked toward him.

"You don't sleep much, do you?"

Harris smiled.

"Not recently."

The version nodded.

He already knew why.

Because every time Harris closed his eyes…

He saw the same thing.

Death.

Loss.

Failure.

His friends disappearing.

Omega Void Emperor winning.

The future he feared more than anything.

Eventually even Universe 6 Harris fell asleep.

Only Harris remained awake.

The moonlight reflected across the campsite.

Across the fountain.

Across his friends.

He slowly looked toward each of them.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

Then finally…

Harlina.

His smile softened.

His eyes became emotional.

Because they looked happy.

Peaceful.

Safe.

Exactly what he wanted.

A small voice inside him whispered.

"Leave now."

"Go alone."

"Protect them."

His hands slowly tightened.

The old plan was returning.

The same plan.

Leave during the night.

Find the books alone.

Fight Omega alone.

Carry everything alone.

The plan felt logical.

The plan felt safe.

The plan felt familiar.

Then—

He looked toward Harlina.

She was sleeping peacefully.

Still holding part of his sleeve.

Even in sleep.

As if she was afraid he would disappear.

His expression broke.

The voice inside him became weaker.

Then another voice appeared.

Buddy.

"You promised."

Harris closed his eyes.

Buddy continued.

"You accepted my condition."

His hands trembled.

"I know."

"Then stop trying to leave them."

Silence.

For the first time...

Harris had no answer.

Because deep inside...

He knew Buddy was right.

The night continued.

Eventually exhaustion finally defeated him.

For the first time in many days...

Harris actually slept.

Morning arrived.

The first rays of sunlight touched the campsite.

Before anyone else woke—

Harris opened his eyes.

Instantly.

Years of training.

Years of danger.

Years of war.

He carefully stood.

Without waking anyone.

Then stretched.

His injuries still hurt.

His body still felt heavy.

But something felt different.

His mind felt calmer.

Stronger.

More focused.

He quietly packed supplies.

Prepared equipment.

Prepared luggage.

Prepared everything for departure.

Then moved toward the cooking area.

Coffee.

Everyone's favorite weapon against mornings.

Soon the smell spread throughout the camp.

Universe 6 Harris woke first.

He followed the smell.

Then froze.

Harris was already preparing everything.

The version smiled.

"You never stop working."

Harris laughed.

"You noticed?"

"You are impossible."

A few moments later...

The two began training together.

A simple sparring session.

At least that was the plan.

Five minutes later...

The ground was destroyed.

Trees were shaking.

And loud impacts echoed through the forest.

Universe 6 Harris attacked first.

Fast.

Very fast.

But Harris moved faster.

Months of physical training.

Stone training.

Endurance training.

Pain training.

Everything showed now.

Even without full power.

His instincts had become terrifying.

The version stepped back.

Breathing heavily.

"How are you this strong physically?"

Harris smiled.

"Throwing rocks."

The version blinked.

"What?"

"Long story."

The training continued.

Punches.

Dodges.

Counters.

Neither used full power.

Yet the battle still looked unbelievable.

Suddenly—

"WHAT ARE YOU TWO DOING?!"

Both froze.

Everyone had woken up.

And everyone was angry.

Very angry.

Harlina pointed directly at Harris.

"You are injured!"

Harris slowly pointed toward Universe 6 Harris.

"He started it."

The version immediately pointed back.

"He challenged me."

Both were caught instantly.

The entire camp began chasing them.

Koji.

Lunar.

Harlina.

Everyone.

The two Harrises ran for their lives.

Universe 6 Harris laughed.

For the first time in a very long time.

He laughed.

Because watching Harris being chased by everyone...

Was somehow the funniest thing he had ever seen.

Far away...

Hidden beyond dimensions...

Omega Void Emperor watched silently.

And for the first time...

A faint feeling of concern appeared within him.

Because the Void Walkers were beginning to unite.

And that was something even he feared.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 7 — PART 5

"THE PROMISE THAT STOPPED THE VOID WALKER"

The train slowly moved through the evening light as the group finally left the campsite behind. The forests, the fountain, the countless arguments, the laughter, the tears, and the battles slowly disappeared behind them as the tracks carried them back toward town.

For the first time in many days, Harris was unusually quiet.

He sat beside the window, resting his head against the glass.

The golden sunset reflected in his eyes.

Everyone secretly watched him.

Koji watched him.

Lunar watched him.

Harlina watched him.

Even the Harris from Universe 6 watched him.

Nobody trusted that peaceful expression.

Because every time Harris became calm, he was usually planning something dangerous.

The Universe 6 Harris slowly leaned closer to Lunar.

"He is planning something."

Lunar sighed.

"I know."

"You know?"

"I've known for a long time."

The Universe 6 Harris looked confused.

Lunar smiled bitterly.

"Our Harris always smiles before doing something stupid."

Meanwhile Harris was simply staring outside.

Watching the sky.

Watching the clouds.

Watching the world he wanted to protect.

His hand slowly clenched.

Omega Void Emperor.

The thought alone made his chest hurt.

But another thought hurt even more.

The image of his friends lying motionless.

The image he saw near the fountain.

The image that still haunted him.

His breathing became slightly unstable.

Before the darkness could return...

A small warm hand grabbed his.

Harris blinked.

Harlina.

She wasn't looking at him.

She simply held his hand silently.

As if telling him she already knew.

As if telling him he wasn't alone.

Harris smiled.

A real smile.

And for a moment...

The nightmare disappeared.

Hours later the train finally reached town.

Everyone stepped onto the platform.

The cool evening wind welcomed them.

Lights illuminated the streets.

The familiar town felt strangely peaceful.

Universe 6 Harris looked around in amazement.

His eyes slowly widened.

"This place..."

Harris smiled.

"My home."

For a moment the alternate Harris looked away.

His own home no longer existed.

His own world had already fallen.

Harris noticed the sadness immediately.

Without saying anything...

He placed a hand on his shoulder.

"You'll bring them back."

The alternate Harris froze.

"I promise."

The Universe 6 Harris lowered his head.

For the first time...

Someone had promised him hope.

The group slowly split apart.

Koji headed home.

Lunar walked with the Universe 6 Harris.

The others said their goodbyes.

Soon...

Only Harris and Harlina remained.

The streets were quiet.

The evening breeze moved through the town.

Neither of them spoke.

Neither of them needed to.

After everything they had survived...

Silence itself felt comforting.

Eventually they reached the house.

The door opened.

The familiar warmth greeted them.

The moment the door closed behind them...

Something unexpected happened.

Harlina suddenly felt herself pulled forward.

Her eyes widened.

Harris had wrapped both arms around her.

Tightly.

Very tightly.

As if he never wanted to let go.

She froze completely.

His face buried itself against her shoulder.

For several seconds...

Neither of them moved.

Then she felt something.

A small tremble.

His shoulders were shaking.

Harlina's eyes widened.

"Harris...?"

His voice came out quietly.

"I almost lost you."

Silence.

"I almost lost all of you."

His grip tightened.

"I saw it."

His voice cracked.

"I saw all of you die."

Harlina immediately understood.

The vision.

The nightmare.

The reason behind his recent behavior.

The reason behind his fear.

Slowly...

Her arms wrapped around him.

Holding him just as tightly.

"I'm here."

A tear rolled down Harris's cheek.

"I'm still here."

Another tear followed.

And another.

Harlina gently lifted his face.

Their eyes met.

For a moment neither of them spoke.

Then Harris slowly leaned forward.

A soft kiss landed on her forehead.

Another on her cheek.

Harlina's face instantly turned bright red.

"H-Harris!"

He smiled.

A small genuine smile.

The kind she had not seen in him for a very long time.

A smile that didn’t carry war.

Didn’t carry fear.

Didn’t carry death.

Just... him.

Harlina stood frozen for a second, face completely red, hands still holding his shirt as if letting go would break something fragile inside him.

“H-Harris…” she whispered again, softer this time.

He didn’t answer immediately.

Instead, he rested his forehead lightly against hers.

His breathing slowly calming down.

“I’m sorry,” he finally said.

Harlina blinked. “For what?”

“For making you worry… for making you see me like this.”

Her grip tightened instantly.

“Don’t you dare apologize for surviving.”

That hit him harder than any attack.

Harris closed his eyes for a moment.

And for the first time…

he didn’t argue.

He just stayed there.

Holding her.

As if the world outside didn’t exist.

KITCHEN SCENE – LATER THAT NIGHT

The silence slowly turned softer as they moved into the kitchen.

Harlina started preparing food quietly.

Harris stood beside her for a moment… then helped without being asked.

It was awkward.

Not because they didn’t know what to do…

But because peace felt unfamiliar now.

Harlina glanced at him.

“You’re acting weird today.”

Harris paused.

“...Weird how?”

“You’re not running away.”

That made him stop completely for a second.

Then he gave a small tired smile.

“I’m tired of running.”

She looked at him carefully.

“...That sounds dangerous.”

“It is.”

A pause.

Then softer—

“But staying feels even more dangerous.”

Harlina’s eyes softened.

“Because you think you’ll lose us?”

Harris didn’t answer.

That silence was enough.

She stepped closer and lightly tapped his forehead.

“Idiot.”

He blinked.

“That’s my punishment now?”

“Yes.”

He actually smiled again.

A real one.

For a second… everything felt normal.

RETURN OF THE OTHER HARRIS (UNIVERSE 6)

At the same time, in another room…

Universe 6 Harris stood with Lunar.

His expression was serious.

“He’s lying,” he said.

Lunar didn’t even look surprised.

“I know.”

“He’s still planning to leave.”

Lunar sighed.

“But not tonight.”

The Universe 6 Harris frowned.

“How do you know?”

Lunar looked toward the house.

“Because for the first time…”

“He’s scared of what leaving will do to them more than what staying will do to him.”

A long silence followed.

Even the alternate Harris didn’t argue.

DINNER SCENE – EMOTIONAL PEACE

Later, they all sat together.

Food was placed on the table.

Everyone eating.

Talking.

Laughing slowly again.

Harris kept looking down at his plate.

Harlina noticed.

She silently picked up food…

and fed him.

He froze.

“What are you—”

“Eat.”

“…I can eat myself.”

“I said eat.”

He looked away, embarrassed.

But he ate.

And for a moment…

his hands stopped shaking.

His eyes softened.

“…I missed this,” he said quietly.

Harlina didn’t respond.

But her eyes softened too.

Across the table, Koji watched silently.

Lunar noticed something strange.

This wasn’t just peace.

It felt like… borrowed time.

NIGHT – BEDROOM SCENE

Later, the room was dim.

Harris stood near the bed.

Harlina sat there, watching him.

“You’re thinking again,” she said.

“I always am.”

“About leaving?”

Silence.

“…Yes.”

She stood up immediately.

Grabbed his collar lightly.

“And I told you already.”

“If you disappear, I’ll find you and slap you in every universe.”

He blinked.

Then laughed.

A small tired laugh.

“That sounds terrifying.”

“It is.”

Another pause.

Then softer—

“…Don’t leave alone.”

That line hit him deeper than anything else.

Harris slowly lifted her.

She gasped slightly.

“H-Hey!”

He placed her gently on the bed.

She froze.

He sat beside her.

“I’m not leaving tonight.”

“…Tonight?”

He smiled faintly.

“That’s all I can promise right now.”

Her eyes softened.

“…Idiot.”

Then she pulled him down slightly.

Blanket covered them both.

Close.

Warm.

Safe.

For the first time in a long time…

Harris didn’t fight sleep.

NIGHT SILENCE

Harlina realized something as he finally closed his eyes.

He wasn’t pretending anymore.

He wasn’t planning mid-sleep escape.

He was just…

sleeping.

Her hand stayed on his head gently.

“…You’re really tired,” she whispered.

No answer.

Only steady breathing.

Outside the room…

Lunar stood silently.

Koji leaned against the wall.

Universe 6 Harris watched from a distance.

“They think he’ll run,” Koji said.

Lunar shook his head.

“No.”

“He’s not running tonight.”

“…Then what is he doing?”

Lunar looked at the closed door.

“He’s choosing pain… so they don’t have to.”

MORNING

Light slowly entered the room.

Harris woke first.

He didn’t move immediately.

Just looked at the ceiling.

Then at Harlina sleeping beside him.

For a moment... he stayed still.

Then gently stood up.

Covered her properly.

And walked out.

Inside the kitchen...

he started making coffee.

Quiet.

Careful.

Almost peaceful.

But his eyes...

still carried war.

Universe 6 Harris entered.

Lunar followed.

Koji followed.

Harlina soon walked in too.

They all stopped.

Harris turned.

“Good morning.”

Silence.

Something felt off.

Too calm.

Too controlled.

Lunar narrowed his eyes.

“...You didn’t leave.”

Harris smiled slightly.

“No.”

Koji crossed his arms.

“Why?”

Harris looked down at his coffee.

“…Because for once…”

Harris’s words still hung in the air.

“I wanted to be here when they wake up.”

Harlina stared at him for a moment longer.

Not blinking.

Not reacting.

Just… reading him.

Like she was trying to find the hidden meaning behind every silence he carried.

Then her expression softened slightly.

“…That’s not like you,” she said quietly.

Harris gave a small, tired smile.

“I know.”

A pause.

The room felt heavier again, but in a different way now.

Not fear.

Not confusion.

Something closer to acceptance… mixed with worry.

Harlina stepped closer.

“So what changed?”

Harris didn’t answer immediately.

His eyes lowered to the floor.

“…Nothing changed,” he said.

Then he looked at her.

“Everything did.”

That made her go quiet.

From the hallway, footsteps slowly gathered.

Koji entered first.

Then Lunar.

Then Universe 6 Harris.

They all stopped when they saw the tension.

Koji crossed his arms.

“…Morning drama already?”

Harris exhaled lightly.

“I wasn’t planning drama.”

Lunar narrowed his eyes.

“You never are. It just follows you.”

That earned a faint smile from Harris.

But it didn’t last.

Because Harlina was still watching him.

Carefully.

Closely.

Like she already knew what was coming next.

“…You’re thinking about leaving again,” she said suddenly.

The room froze.

Koji straightened slightly.

Universe 6 Harris’s gaze sharpened.

Lunar didn’t react—but his eyes didn’t move from Harris.

Harris stayed silent for a long moment.

Then…

“…Yes.”

Simple.

Honest.

No escape.

That one word hit harder than any lie could have softened.

Harlina’s face tightened.

“But you said—”

“I know what I said,” Harris interrupted gently.

His voice was calm.

Too calm.

“That’s why I’m telling you now.”

Silence deepened.

Even the morning light felt colder.

Harris continued.

“I’m not leaving because I want to run away from you.”

He looked at all of them one by one.

“I’m leaving because staying near me is becoming dangerous for you.”

Koji’s expression darkened.

Lunar stepped forward slightly.

“…That’s not your decision alone.”

Harris nodded slowly.

“I know.”

Harlina clenched her fists.

“And we already told you,” she said firmly.

“You don’t get to decide who stays or leaves.”

A beat.

Then she stepped closer again.

Her voice lowered.

“If you try to leave alone…”

Her eyes softened—but her words stayed sharp.

“…I will follow you even if it kills me.”

That made Harris freeze.

For the first time that morning…

his calm cracked slightly.

“…Harlina,” he whispered.

She didn’t back down.

“You’re not a burden.”

“You’re not a threat.”

“You’re not some disaster that needs to be isolated.”

Her voice trembled slightly now.

“You’re Harris.”

Silence.

Universe 6 Harris looked away.

Koji sighed.

Even Lunar softened his expression.

Harris slowly lowered his head.

“…I don’t know how to stop it,” he admitted.

The truth came out quietly.

Almost broken.

“I don’t know how to stop what I’m becoming part of.”

That line changed everything.

Because it wasn’t confidence.

It wasn’t planning.

It was fear.

Real fear.

Harlina stepped forward instantly and grabbed his hand.

“Then don’t stop it alone.”

Harris looked at her.

She tightened her grip.

“Let us be part of it.”

Silence.

Then Koji spoke.

“…If you’re walking into something that big, you think we’re just going to sit back?”

Lunar nodded.

“We already died once in your vision anyway.”

Universe 6 Harris smirked faintly.

“…Might as well try not to make it accurate.”

For the first time that morning…

Harris didn’t have an answer.

Just silence.

And in that silence…

something shifted.

Not a decision.

Not yet.

But the beginning of one.

Harris finally exhaled slowly.

“...Then we prepare together.”

Harlina’s grip tightened.

“Good.”

Koji turned away.

“About time.”

Lunar sighed.

Universe 6 Harris closed his eyes briefly.

And for a moment...

the world felt slightly less heavy.

But far away...

beyond mountains, beyond skies, beyond universes...

the Void Throne Mountain still waited.

Universe 6 Harris closed his eyes briefly.

And in that instant…

the air around Harris shifted.

Not physically.

Not visibly.

But something inside him clicked open—like a sealed door inside his mind had been touched.

Harris blinked.

“…Buddy?”

No response from the room.

But inside him… there was movement.

A faint pulse.

A presence that didn’t belong to the world outside.

The surroundings faded for a moment.

The kitchen, the house, the morning light—all of it felt distant, like it was being viewed through water.

Harris stood in a place that wasn’t a place.

Dark space.

Floating silence.

And then—

a voice.

Calm.

Familiar.

“You called.”

Harris didn’t even look surprised anymore.

“…Buddy.”

A soft flicker appeared in front of him.

Not a body.

Not a face.

More like a living interface of light and awareness.

Buddy.

The Suit.

But not just armor.

Something deeper now.

Harris's breathing steadied.

"You were silent for too long," he said.

Buddy responded calmly.

"I was waiting."

"For what?"

"For you to stop running from your truth."

Silence.

Then another presence entered.

The air changed again.

Heavier.

Older.

Like existence itself was observing.

A second voice followed.

“You are finally aligned.”

Harris’s eyes narrowed.

“…Creator.”

A faint distortion formed beside Buddy.

Not a person.

Not fully a form.

But something that felt like origin itself speaking.

And then—

a third voice.

Sharper.

Strangely similar to Harris’s own tone.

“You are close now.”

Harris’s fists clenched.

“…Third Voice.”

The three presences stood around him in that void-like mental space.

Buddy spoke first.

“The condition remains.”

Harris already knew.

He didn’t ask.

He said it.

“I cannot abandon my friends.”

Silence.

The Creator responded calmly.

“Correct.”

The Third Voice added immediately.

“And they cannot be removed from your path.”

Harris frowned.

“…Why does everything depend on them?”

Buddy’s tone softened slightly.

“Because your power is not built on isolation.”

The Creator continued.

“It is built on connection.”

The Third Voice leaned slightly closer in feeling.

“And that is exactly why Omega Void Emperor fears you.”

Harris’s eyes narrowed.

“…Tell me everything.”

A pause.

Then the Creator spoke.

“The first book lies within Void Throne Mountain.”

Harris already knew that.

But hearing it again made it heavier.

Buddy continued.

“The second truth is sealed with the Void Queen’s remnants.”

The Third Voice added.

“And the third…”

A pause that felt dangerous.

“…is inside you.”

Harris froze.

“…Inside me?”

Buddy confirmed.

“Yes.”

Silence expanded.

Then Harris spoke slowly.

“What about Omega Void Emperor?”

The air darkened slightly.

The Creator’s tone became serious.

“He is not just your enemy.”

Buddy added.

“He is your fractured possibility.”

The Third Voice finished it.

“He is what happens when you lose everyone completely.”

That hit harder than any attack.

Silence stretched.

Then Harris exhaled slowly.

“…So he’s me.”

Buddy responded gently.

“A version without restraint.”

The Creator added.

“A version without connection.”

The Third Voice concluded.

“A version without Harlina.”

That name broke the silence.

Harris’s eyes sharpened instantly.

“…Don’t say her name like that.”

A pause.

Then Buddy spoke softer.

“That reaction… is why you are not him.”

Silence again.

Then everything began fading.

The void space started collapsing back into reality.

But before it fully disappeared…

Buddy spoke one last time.

“When the time comes…”

The Creator added.

“You will not walk alone.”

The Third Voice finished.

“You will decide what kind of Harris remains.”

Suddenly—

Harris snapped back into the real world.

He was still standing in the house.

Morning light.

Real voices.

Real people.

Koji talking.

Lunar watching.

Harlina holding his hand.

Universe 6 Harris observing him quietly.

But Harris didn’t move immediately.

His eyes were slightly distant.

Harlina noticed instantly.

“…Harris?”

He blinked.

Then slowly looked at her.

For a moment…

he didn’t answer.

Then he whispered:

“…It’s already starting.”

The room went silent again.

Because now they all knew—this wasn’t just a journey anymore.

It was an awakening.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 8: THE VOID THRONE JOURNEY

PART 1

The morning sunlight slowly entered through the windows of Harlina's house.

For the first time in many days, everything felt peaceful.

No attacks.

No screams.

No battles.

No blood.

Only silence.

But Harris knew peace would not last.

He stood near the window, staring at the sky.

His eyes looked calm.

His mind was not.

Inside his consciousness, he could still see the vision from last night.

Countless universes.

Countless versions of himself.

Entire worlds burning.

Friends dying.

And above them all…

A throne.

A throne made from the ruins of destroyed universes.

Sitting upon it was Omega Void Emperor.

Thousands of Harris versions stood behind him like an army.

The image disappeared.

Yet the feeling remained.

Harris slowly closed his eyes.

"Just wait..."

"I'll reach you soon."

A familiar hand touched his shoulder.

He opened his eyes.

Harlina was standing behind him.

Her silver hair glowed under the morning light.

Her eyes were filled with concern.

She had noticed it again.

The same expression.

The same hidden pain.

The same burden.

"Harris."

He turned.

"What?"

"What are you thinking about?"

He smiled immediately.

The smile he always used when hiding the truth.

"Nothing."

Harlina narrowed her eyes.

"Lie."

Harris laughed.

"Maybe a little."

She crossed her arms.

"Tell me."

He looked outside again.

"The future."

Her expression instantly changed.

Whenever Harris talked about the future...

Danger followed.

Before she could ask another question, Harris suddenly walked toward the kitchen.

"Coffee first."

"Questions later."

Harlina sighed.

He was escaping again.

But she followed him anyway.

A few minutes later everyone gathered together.

Koji.

Lunar.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

Universe 6 Harris.

And Harlina.

Everyone sat around the table.

The atmosphere felt serious.

Because Harris had called everyone together.

Nobody spoke.

Everyone waited.

Finally Harris stood up.

His smile disappeared.

"The first book has been found."

Everyone nodded.

"We already know where the next step leads."

Koji crossed his arms.

"Void Throne."

Harris nodded.

"Void Throne Mountain."

The room became silent.

Even Universe 6 Harris looked serious.

The Void Throne was not just a location.

It was where everything connected.

The Void Walker.

The ancient books.

The throne.

The legends.

Everything began there.

Universe 6 Harris suddenly spoke.

"Harris."

"Hm?"

"You know something."

The room became quiet again.

Universe 6 Harris stared directly into his eyes.

"You've been acting differently."

"You're hiding something."

Harris smiled.

The dangerous smile.

The one everyone had learned to fear.

Lunar immediately noticed.

Koji noticed.

Harlina noticed.

Universe 6 Harris noticed.

Everyone noticed.

Yet Harris simply replied.

"We should prepare."

That answer only confirmed their suspicions.

Inside his mind, Buddy sighed.

"You're terrible at lying."

Harris smiled internally.

"I know."

The Third Voice appeared.

"You're planning something again."

"Maybe."

The Creator sighed.

"Definitely."

Harris ignored all three of them.

One hour later preparations began.

Everyone packed supplies.

Weapons.

Food.

Medicine.

Emergency equipment.

Everything needed for a dangerous journey.

Meanwhile...

Universe 6 Harris noticed something strange.

Harris wasn't carrying anything.

No weapons.

No supplies.

No food.

Nothing.

Universe 6 Harris pointed at him.

"Why haven't you packed anything?"

Everyone turned.

Harris froze.

"..."

"..."

"..."

"I forgot?"

Everyone answered at the same time.

"LIE."

Harris looked away immediately.

Universe 6 Harris sighed.

"He's definitely planning something."

Lunar nodded.

"Absolutely."

Koji nodded.

"Without a doubt."

Harlina crossed her arms.

"One hundred percent."

Everyone agreed.

Even Buddy.

Several hours later the journey finally began.

The group left town and headed toward Void Throne Mountain.

The weather was peaceful.

Birds flew across the sky.

The wind felt refreshing.

Everyone enjoyed the journey.

Except Harris.

Because he could feel it.

That presence.

The same presence.

The same energy.

The Killer.

Following them.

Watching them.

Waiting.

Hidden somewhere inside the forest.

Far away...

The Killer silently observed them.

His eyes narrowed.

Then suddenly...

Harris smiled.

The Killer froze.

Because Harris slowly turned his head toward the exact location where he was hiding.

For a brief second...

Their eyes almost met.

The Killer smiled.

"So you found me."

Harris continued walking.

Inside his mind he replied.

"Of course."

The Killer's smile widened.

"Interesting."

"Yesterday you couldn't even touch me."

"Today you're smiling."

Harris smiled even more.

"Keep following me."

The Killer froze.

He could not hear Harris directly.

Yet somehow...

It felt like Harris was speaking to him.

"Good."

"Follow me all the way to Void Throne."

Buddy immediately noticed.

"You're planning something."

Harris remained silent.

The Creator appeared.

"So that's your idea."

The Third Voice looked shocked.

"You actually intend to do that?"

Harris simply smiled.

None of them liked that smile.

Hours passed.

The enormous silhouette of Void Throne Mountain finally appeared.

Everyone stopped walking.

The mountain towered above the clouds.

Dark energy flowed around its peak.

The atmosphere itself felt ancient.

Even Universe 6 Harris looked amazed.

"So this is Void Throne."

Harris nodded.

"Yeah."

But his smile slowly disappeared.

Universe 6 Harris suddenly felt something.

A strange feeling.

A terrible feeling.

He turned toward Harris.

"Harris."

"What?"

"Why does it feel like you're saying goodbye?"

Everything became silent.

Nobody laughed.

Nobody moved.

Because everyone had felt it too.

Especially Harlina.

She immediately looked toward Harris.

Her heart started beating faster.

The way he was looking at everyone...

The way he was smiling...

The way he was acting...

It felt wrong.

Very wrong.

For a moment Harris said nothing.

Then he laughed.

"You all think too much."

Nobody believed him.

Not even for a second.

Harris slowly looked at everyone.

Koji.

The man who raised him.

Lunar.

The teacher who never abandoned him.

Reku.

Roku.

Lina.

Mika.

Universe 6 Harris.

And finally...

Harlina.

His gaze remained on her longer than everyone else.

She noticed.

And her heart sank.

Because she recognized that look.

The same look he had before every sacrifice.

The same look he had before every dangerous decision.

The same look he always made when he planned to carry everything alone.

Harris quietly lowered his head.

His voice became almost impossible to hear.

"Please forgive me."

Nobody heard him.

Except Buddy.

And Buddy immediately understood.

"Harris..."

Too late.

Golden energy exploded around him.

BOOOOOOOOOOM!

The ground shook.

The mountain trembled.

The sky echoed with power.

Everyone froze.

A massive golden barrier instantly surrounded them.

"What?!"

"HARRIS!"

Harlina ran forward.

BANG!

Her hand struck the barrier.

Nothing happened.

Koji attacked.

Nothing.

Lunar attacked.

Nothing.

Universe 6 Harris released his power.

Nothing.

The barrier didn't move.

Not even a little.

Everyone turned toward Harris.

He stood outside.

Alone.

The same way he always did.

Harlina's voice trembled.

"Harris..."

"What are you doing?"

For the first time...

His smile looked sad.

"I'm protecting you."

"Protecting us from what?"

Harris remained silent.

Then his smile disappeared completely.

"The Killer."

Everyone froze.

The atmosphere instantly changed.

Universe 6 Harris clenched his fists.

Harlina's face turned pale.

Koji stepped forward.

"HARRIS!"

"STOP ACTING LIKE YOU'RE ALONE!"

Those words hit harder than any attack.

For a brief moment...

Harris looked away.

Because deep inside...

Those words hurt.

More than anyone knew.

Then...

A laugh echoed across the mountain.

A dark laugh.

A familiar laugh.

Everyone froze.

Harris slowly turned around.

A figure stepped out from the shadows.

The Killer.

Another Harris.

The same face.

The same eyes.

Yet completely different.

The Killer smiled.

"Still sacrificing yourself for everyone?"

"Some things never change."

Harris smiled back.

"Ready for Round Two?"

The Killer laughed.

"You sound confident."

Harris looked at the barrier.

At his friends.

At Harlina.

At everyone who had become his strength.

Then he turned back toward the Killer.

His smile widened.

"Yesterday..."

"My confidence was my power."

He pointed toward the barrier.

"Today..."

"My confidence is my friends."

The Killer's smile disappeared.

For the first time...

He felt something was different about this Harris.

Something dangerous.

Something he hadn't expected.

And the battle for Void Throne was finally about to begin.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 8: THE VOID THRONE JOURNEY

PART 2

The mountain became silent.

The wind stopped moving.

Even the clouds above Void Throne Mountain seemed to freeze.

Harris and the Killer stood facing each other.

Two versions.

Two paths.

Two completely different destinies.

Behind the golden barrier, everyone watched nervously.

Harlina's hands were pressed against the barrier.

Koji's fists were clenched.

Lunar's eyes never left Harris.

Universe 6 Harris stared quietly.

The more he watched...

The more he felt something was wrong.

Very wrong.

The Killer slowly laughed.

"You really think you can defeat me?"

Harris smiled.

"No."

The Killer blinked.

Everyone inside the barrier froze.

The answer surprised everyone.

The Killer narrowed his eyes.

"No?"

Harris shrugged.

"I don't think."

"I know."

The Killer's smile disappeared.

Suddenly—

BOOOOOOM!

Dark energy exploded around him.

The mountain trembled.

The ground cracked beneath his feet.

His aura spread across the entire mountain.

Even inside the barrier everyone felt the pressure.

Mika took a step back.

Lina grabbed Reku's arm.

Roku swallowed nervously.

Koji remained silent.

Universe 6 Harris narrowed his eyes.

The Killer was stronger than yesterday.

Much stronger.

The Killer raised his hand.

A massive sphere of Void energy formed.

"Then prove it."

The attack shot forward.

Like a meteor.

Like a collapsing star.

Like destruction itself.

Everyone screamed.

"HARRIS!"

But Harris didn't move.

He simply stood there.

Smiling.

The attack reached him.

At the last second—

He moved.

A single step.

The attack missed him completely.

BOOOOOOOOOM!

Half the mountainside exploded.

Everyone froze.

The Killer froze.

Harris smiled.

"Too slow."

The Killer's eyes widened.

Yesterday he couldn't even react properly.

Today...

He had dodged effortlessly.

The Killer suddenly attacked again.

And again.

And again.

Hundreds of attacks.

Thousands.

The mountain shook continuously.

Explosions covered the battlefield.

Yet every time...

Harris dodged.

One step.

Half step.

A slight movement.

Nothing more.

Inside the barrier everyone watched in disbelief.

Universe 6 Harris finally understood.

"He's not stronger."

Lunar looked at him.

"What?"

Universe 6 Harris continued.

"He's reading him."

Everyone looked toward Harris.

He wasn't overpowering the Killer.

He wasn't matching the Killer.

He was predicting him.

Every attack.

Every movement.

Every intention.

Harris suddenly smiled.

"Found it."

The Killer froze.

"What?"

Harris pointed at him.

"You move your left shoulder before every attack."

The Killer's face darkened.

"Impossible."

Harris smiled.

"You should fix that habit."

The Killer attacked furiously.

The battle became even more violent.

But Harris continued dodging.

Inside his mind...

Buddy spoke.

"You've improved."

Harris smiled.

"Not enough."

The Creator appeared.

"You're still planning it."

"Of course."

The Third Voice looked worried.

"Harris."

"Don't."

Harris ignored him.

The Killer suddenly stopped attacking.

His eyes narrowed.

Finally...

He understood.

"You aren't trying to defeat me."

Harris smiled.

"Good."

"You finally noticed."

Everyone froze.

Even the Creator froze.

The Killer stepped back.

"What are you planning?"

Harris slowly raised his hand.

Golden energy began gathering around him.

The sky darkened.

The mountain trembled.

The atmosphere changed completely.

Even Universe 6 Harris felt fear.

A strange fear.

A fear he couldn't explain.

The Killer's eyes widened.

"No..."

Harris smiled.

"Yes."

Golden energy erupted.

BOOOOOOOOOOM!

The entire mountain shook.

The barrier shook.

The sky cracked.

Everyone inside the barrier stared in shock.

The energy surrounding Harris continued growing.

Growing.

Growing.

Growing.

Until the entire mountain was covered in golden light.

The Killer took a step back.

For the first time...

He looked nervous.

Harris slowly opened his eyes.

They glowed brilliantly.

Then he spoke.

"The Ultimate Domain Expansion."

Everyone froze.

The Killer froze.

The Creator froze.

The Third Voice froze.

Even Buddy remained silent.

The golden energy exploded.

"INFINITE DESTRUCTION."

BOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOM!

The entire mountain disappeared inside a golden domain.

Everyone could see it.

A massive world of endless golden skies.

Infinite space.

Infinite power.

Infinite destruction.

The Killer's face finally changed.

Fear.

Real fear.

The Creator stared in disbelief.

"He actually did it."

The Third Voice looked shocked.

"Without fully awakening his powers?"

Buddy remained silent.

Even Buddy was surprised.

Inside the barrier, Universe 6 Harris stared at Harris.

Then he whispered.

"What are you doing?"

Because now he finally understood.

This wasn't a battle.

It was a plan.

A dangerous plan.

A reckless plan.

A Harris plan.

The Killer looked around nervously.

"You shouldn't have this power."

Harris smiled.

"You're right."

The Killer attacked.

But the attack instantly disappeared.

The domain erased it.

The Killer froze.

"What?"

Harris smiled wider.

Then—

He shouted loudly.

So loudly that everyone could hear.

"The Creator told me a way to save you."

Everyone froze.

The Killer froze.

Universe 6 Harris froze.

"What?"

Harris pointed directly at him.

"I don't need to defeat you."

"I only need to save you."

The Killer's expression changed.

For the first time...

Confusion appeared.

Harris slowly continued.

"The answer was never power."

The Creator closed his eyes.

Because he finally understood.

Harris had figured it out.

The Third Voice looked shocked.

"No..."

Harris smiled.

"Yes."

Everyone waited.

Then Harris spoke a single word.

A word that changed everything.

"Sacrifice."

Silence.

Absolute silence.

Inside the barrier...

Everyone froze.

Koji's eyes widened.

Lunar's expression darkened.

Harlina's face turned pale.

Universe 6 Harris immediately understood.

And his heart sank.

"No."

The Killer stepped backward.

"What are you talking about?"

Harris pointed toward the center of the Killer's chest.

"There."

The Killer froze.

The Creator sighed.

The Third Voice lowered his head.

Buddy remained silent.

Because they all knew.

Harris had discovered it.

The real source.

The thing controlling every soldier.

The thing Omega used.

The hidden core.

The hidden gem.

The control crystal.

The Killer finally understood.

And for the first time…

He looked afraid.

Meanwhile—

Inside the barrier.

Universe 6 Harris suddenly collapsed.

Everyone rushed toward him.

"HARRIS!"

His vision faded.

Darkness surrounded him.

Then—

The Third Voice appeared.

Universe 6 Harris immediately stood.

"What happened?!"

The Third Voice looked serious.

"You must stop him."

Universe 6 Harris clenched his fists.

"Then remove the barrier!"

The Third Voice remained silent.

Universe 6 Harris shouted.

"DO IT!"

The Creator appeared beside him.

But neither moved.

Universe 6 Harris froze.

"What?"

The Creator sighed.

"We can't."

"What do you mean you can't?!"

The Third Voice slowly answered.

"Because we don't know what he's planning anymore."

Universe 6 Harris froze.

The Creator nodded.

"We can't predict Harris."

The words shocked him.

The Creator.

The Third Voice.

Unable to predict Harris.

Universe 6 Harris returned to consciousness.

Everyone looked at him.

"What happened?"

He immediately looked toward Harris.

And for the first time…

He felt fear.

Because he realized something.

Not even the Creator knew what Harris was going to do next.

Far away—

Inside the domain—

Harris smiled.

And slowly raised his hand.

The battle was about to enter its most dangerous stage.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 8: THE VOID THRONE JOURNEY

PART 3 (CORRECTED CONTINUITY)

The entire mountain trembled under the power of the Domain Expansion.

Golden light covered the battlefield.

The Killer stood motionless.

For the first time since he had appeared...

He wasn't smiling.

He wasn't attacking.

He wasn't acting like Omega's soldier.

Instead...

He was staring at Harris.

Harris slowly lowered his hand.

The Eternal Arrow had not appeared yet.

He was waiting.

Watching.

Observing.

The Killer clenched his head.

Suddenly—

Pain.

A terrible pain.

His body began shaking violently.

Everyone inside the barrier froze.

Universe 6 Harris immediately stepped forward.

"What is happening?"

The Creator looked serious.

"He found it."

The Third Voice nodded.

"Harris found the weakness."

Inside the Domain—

The Killer screamed.

"AARRRGHHHHHHHH!"

Dark energy exploded around him.

Memories started returning.

Small fragments at first.

A laugh.

A smile.

A familiar voice.

A promise.

A friendship.

A home.

Then more memories came.

Thousands of them.

His knees hit the ground.

BOOM.

The Killer grabbed his head.

"No..."

"Stop..."

"Please stop..."

But the memories continued.

A girl with silver hair.

A friend laughing beside him.

Training with Koji.

Arguments with Lunar.

Moments with his universe.

Moments Omega tried to erase forever.

Tears started flowing from his eyes.

Harris smiled.

"There you are."

The Killer froze.

That voice…

That smile…

It felt familiar.

The darkness around his eyes slowly disappeared.

The red glow faded.

The hatred faded.

The anger faded.

And beneath everything…

A broken Harris remained.

The real Harris of Universe 2.

The Harris who had lost everything.

The Harris who had been forced to become a weapon.

The Harris who never wanted to hurt anyone.

He slowly looked at Harris.

"Harris..."

Everyone behind the barrier froze.

The way he spoke had changed.

The mind-controlled tone was gone.

His real voice had returned.

Harris smiled.

"Welcome back."

The Killer's eyes widened.

Then suddenly—

CRACK.

A strange sound echoed.

The Creator immediately stood.

The Third Voice froze.

Buddy became serious.

The Killer screamed again.

His chest began glowing with dark energy.

"No!"

Dark cracks spread across his body.

Something was trying to stop the memories.

Trying to control him again.

Trying to pull him back.

Omega's control.

The dark energy concentrated near his heart.

Then—

A black crystal slowly emerged from his chest.

Everyone froze.

Universe 6 Harris shouted,

"THE GEM!"

Lunar's eyes widened.

Koji clenched his fists.

Harlina pressed her hands against the barrier.

The crystal floated outside the Killer's chest.

Dark energy surrounded it.

The entire mountain shook.

The crystal was alive.

It was the source.

The thing controlling every mind-controlled Void Walker.

The thing Omega used to create his army.

The thing that had ruined Universe 2 Harris's life.

The Killer looked at it.

Then looked at Harris.

And finally understood.

"You weren't trying to defeat me..."

Harris smiled.

"No."

The Killer's eyes trembled.

"You were trying to save me."

Harris laughed.

"You finally understand."

The Killer smiled weakly.

A real smile.

Not Omega's smile.

His own smile.

Tears rolled down his face.

He remembered everything now.

The destruction.

The deaths.

The suffering.

The day Omega arrived.

The day his universe fell.

The day his friends were taken away.

The day he was turned into a soldier.

His knees trembled.

"Why?"

Harris looked confused.

"Why what?"

"Why save me?"

The mountain became silent.

Harris answered immediately.

"Because you're Harris."

The Killer froze.

Everyone froze.

Harris continued.

"You protected your friends."

"You fought until the end."

"You never surrendered."

"So I won't abandon you."

The Killer lowered his head.

Tears continued falling.

Universe 6 Harris silently smiled.

Koji smiled.

Lunar smiled.

Even Harlina wiped away tears.

Because that answer...

Was exactly what their Harris would say.

The black crystal suddenly glowed brighter.

The memories had weakened Omega's control.

Now the crystal was completely exposed.

The Creator smiled.

"You found the opening."

The Third Voice nodded.

"The only opening."

Buddy finally spoke.

"Harris."

"Now."

Harris slowly raised his hand.

Golden energy gathered.

The Eternal Arrow appeared.

Everyone froze.

The legendary arrow.

The same arrow mentioned in the ancient records.

The weapon capable of destroying the control source itself.

The Killer looked at the arrow.

Then smiled.

For the first time in years...

He felt free.

Not completely.

But enough.

Enough to choose.

Enough to hope.

Enough to trust.

He looked directly at Harris.

Then asked softly,

"Can you save my universe?"

Harris smiled.

"Yes."

The Killer laughed.

"You're still overconfident."

Harris laughed too.

"Maybe."

The Killer took a deep breath.

Then stood up.

Despite his injuries.

Despite his pain.

Despite everything.

He stood.

And faced the crystal.

Not Harris.

The crystal.

His true enemy.

The thing that had stolen years of his life.

The thing that had stolen his freedom.

His friends.

His happiness.

His future.

He pointed at it.

And said only one thing.

"Destroy it."

Harris smiled.

"Gladly."

The Eternal Arrow flew.

FLASH!

The arrow crossed the battlefield instantly.

The crystal tried to defend itself.

Dark energy exploded everywhere.

The mountain shook.

The skies cracked.

The Domain Expansion trembled.

But it was useless.

The Eternal Arrow struck the crystal directly.

CRACK.

A small fracture appeared.

Everyone held their breath.

CRACK.

Another fracture.

Then—

CRACK!

The crystal shattered completely.

BOOOOOOOOOOOOOM!

Golden light exploded across the entire mountain.

Dark energy vanished.

Omega's influence disappeared.

The Domain Expansion collapsed.

The skies returned to normal.

The mountain became quiet.

The crystal turned into dust.

Gone forever.

The Killer froze.

The darkness around his body disappeared.

The red glow vanished.

His eyes returned to normal.

His memories fully returned.

Everything.

Absolutely everything.

He fell to his knees.

Not from pain.

But from relief.

Freedom.

After so many years...

Freedom.

He looked at his hands.

Then at Harris.

Tears flowed freely.

"Harris..."

Before he could continue—

Harris suddenly staggered.

Everyone froze.

Blood dripped from his mouth.

His body had exceeded its limits again.

Universe 2 Harris's eyes widened.

"No."

Harris smiled.

The same stupid smile.

The same smile everyone knew.

The same smile he showed even while dying.

Then—

THUD.

He collapsed.

Directly onto the mountain ground.

Unconscious.

Still smiling.

The barrier disappeared instantly.

Everyone rushed toward him.

"HARRIS!"

Harlina reached him first.

Koji and Lunar followed.

Universe 6 Harris arrived.

And finally—

Universe 2 Harris stood beside them.

Free.

Alive.

Cured.

No longer the Killer.

No longer Omega's soldier.

Just Harris.

A Harris who had finally come home.

And beside the unconscious Harris…

He made a silent promise.

"This time… I'll help save your universe too."

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 8: THE VOID THRONE JOURNEY

PART 4

The moment the barrier disappeared, everyone rushed forward.

"HARRIS!"

Harlina reached him first.

She immediately dropped to her knees beside him.

His body was covered in wounds.

Fresh blood stained his clothes.

His breathing was weak.

Far weaker than before.

Yet…

He was still smiling.

The same smile.

The smile that always appeared whenever he protected someone.

The smile everyone hated seeing.

Because it usually meant he had done something reckless again.

Harlina grabbed his shoulders.

Tears streamed down her face.

"You idiot..."

"You absolute idiot..."

Her voice trembled.

"You promised..."

"You promised you wouldn't do things alone anymore..."

Koji arrived beside her.

For once...

Even he had no words.

He simply looked at Harris.

Then lowered his head.

Lunar clenched his fists.

His anger and relief collided inside him.

Universe 6 Harris stood silently.

Meanwhile—

Universe 2 Harris stared at the unconscious boy lying before him.

The boy who had saved him.

The boy who had saved a complete stranger.

The boy who had willingly risked his life for another version of himself.

Universe 2 Harris slowly knelt beside him.

His voice shook.

"Why..."

"Why would you do this for me?"

No answer came.

Only silence.

Because Harris was unconscious.

The mountain wind gently passed through the battlefield.

The Void Throne stood silently in the distance.

The battle was over.

But the consequences remained.

Suddenly—

A faint glow appeared near Harris.

Everyone turned.

The First Book.

The ancient book floated out from the entrance of the Void Throne.

Golden energy surrounded it.

Everyone froze.

The Creator's voice echoed inside Harris's mind.

Though Harris couldn't hear it.

"The first key has been found."

The Third Voice sighed.

"And somehow..."

"He nearly died obtaining it."

Buddy remained silent.

Even Buddy seemed exhausted.

Back in reality—

The First Book slowly floated toward Harris.

Then landed gently beside him.

Almost as if the ancient artifact itself had acknowledged him.

Universe 6 Harris stared at it.

"So that's the first book..."

Lunar nodded.

"The thing we've been searching for."

Koji looked toward the mountain.

"And he got it alone."

Immediately—

SLAP.

Everyone turned.

Harlina had slapped Harris.

Even though he was unconscious.

Koji blinked.

Universe 6 Harris blinked.

Lunar blinked.

Everyone blinked.

Harlina crossed her arms.

"That's for later."

Silence.

Then everyone started laughing.

Even through their tears.

Even through their fear.

The tension finally broke.

Universe 2 Harris smiled softly.

For the first time in years...

He heard genuine laughter.

Not fear.

Not war.

Not destruction.

Laughter.

A sound he thought he had lost forever.

A few moments later—

Koji carefully picked up Harris.

"Let's go."

Everyone nodded.

The journey back began.

The path down Void Throne Mountain felt completely different.

This time…

The danger was gone.

The Killer was gone.

The battle was over.

Yet nobody celebrated.

Because all their attention remained focused on Harris.

Koji carried him.

Lunar walked beside him.

Harlina refused to leave his side.

Every few seconds she checked his breathing.

Every few seconds.

Again.

And again.

And again.

Universe 2 Harris finally spoke.

"He does this often?"

Everyone immediately answered.

"YES."

The response came so fast that Universe 2 Harris jumped.

Lina sighed.

"Too often."

Reku nodded.

"Way too often."

Roku crossed his arms.

"He thinks his body is a shield."

Mika added.

"He doesn't understand fear."

Universe 6 Harris laughed.

"No."

"He understands fear."

Everyone looked at him.

Universe 6 Harris continued quietly.

"He's terrified."

"Terrified of losing all of you."

The group became silent.

Nobody argued.

Because everyone knew it was true.

Several hours later.

The group finally reached the city.

An ambulance immediately transported Harris to the hospital.

The doctors nearly fainted after seeing his condition.

The nurses looked horrified.

One doctor stared at the reports.

Then at Harris.

Then back at the reports.

Then back at Harris.

"How is he conscious?"

Lunar sighed.

"Good question."

The doctor looked confused.

"Was conscious?"

Koji nodded.

"Until twenty minutes ago."

The doctor sat down.

Completely defeated.

Universe 2 Harris laughed.

Now he finally understood why everyone reacted the way they did.

This Harris was completely insane.

Hours passed.

Treatment finally finished.

The doctors left.

The room became quiet.

Everyone sat around the hospital room.

Nobody wanted to leave.

The First Book rested safely on a nearby table.

Protected.

Guarded.

Watched.

Especially from Harris.

Because everyone already knew what would happen if he woke up.

The first thing he would ask about—

Was the book.

Not his injuries.

Not his health.

Not the battle.

The book.

Inside his unconscious mind—

Harris opened his eyes.

A familiar place.

A familiar darkness.

A familiar group waiting for him.

Creator.

Third Voice.

Buddy.

All three were standing together.

Waiting.

Harris looked around.

Then smiled.

"Good evening."

The Creator folded his arms.

The Third Voice folded his arms.

Buddy folded his arms.

Harris blinked.

"...Why are all of you angry?"

The Creator pointed at him.

"You nearly died."

Harris nodded.

"Correct."

The Third Voice stared.

"That's your response?"

Harris nodded again.

"Correct."

Buddy immediately smacked the back of his head.

THUD.

"Ouch."

"You deserved that."

Harris rubbed his head.

Then smiled.

"So..."

The Creator narrowed his eyes.

"No."

Harris blinked.

"I didn't ask yet."

"We know."

The Third Voice sighed.

"You want information about the second book."

Harris immediately pointed.

"Exactly."

The Creator groaned.

Buddy groaned.

The Third Voice groaned.

All three looked exhausted.

The Creator sat down.

"Harris."

"What?"

"Can you enjoy one victory before running toward another disaster?"

Harris thought carefully.

For three seconds.

Then answered.

"No."

The Creator covered his face.

The Third Voice started laughing.

Buddy looked ready to throw him off a cliff.

Back in reality—

Several hours later—

Harris slowly opened his eyes.

The hospital room was dark.

Night had arrived.

Everyone was asleep.

Koji was sleeping in a chair.

Lunar was sleeping against the wall.

Universe 6 Harris was sleeping nearby.

Universe 2 Harris was also asleep.

The First Book remained safely on the table.

And beside him—

Harlina.

Sleeping while holding his hand.

Even in her sleep...

She refused to let go.

Harris stared quietly.

His smile softened.

A genuine smile.

Not the one he used to hide pain.

Not the one he used to hide fear.

A real smile.

He slowly sat up.

Pain immediately attacked his entire body.

"Ow."

Everything hurt.

Absolutely everything.

He slowly looked toward the First Book.

The book looked back.

Almost suspiciously.

Harris narrowed his eyes.

The book narrowed its eyes.

At least that was how it felt.

He slowly moved toward it.

Like a thief.

A very injured thief.

One step.

Two steps.

Three steps.

Almost there.

Almost.

Almost—

"HARRIS."

He froze.

The entire room froze.

Slowly.

Very slowly.

He turned around.

Everyone was awake.

Every single person.

Staring at him.

Universe 2 Harris was trying not to laugh.

Universe 6 Harris was already laughing.

Lunar looked annoyed.

Koji looked exhausted.

Harlina looked furious.

Harris smiled nervously.

"...Good evening?"

Silence.

Then—

SLAP.

VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 8: THE VOID THRONE JOURNEY

PART 5 (MISSING SCENES CONTINUATION)

The slap echoed throughout the hospital room.

SLAP!

Harris slowly turned his head back.

A red mark appeared on his cheek.

The room was completely silent.

Universe 2 Harris blinked.

Universe 6 Harris blinked.

The doctors outside almost dropped their files.

Harris rubbed his cheek.

Then smiled nervously.

"...Good evening?"

Another slap almost arrived.

He immediately raised both hands.

"WAIT!"

Harlina pointed directly at him.

"Where were you going?"

Harris looked left.

Then right.

Then at the ceiling.

Then at the floor.

Then finally at the First Book.

Everyone followed his eyes.

Silence.

The room exploded.

"THE BOOK!"

"HARRIS!"

"SERIOUSLY?!"

"YOU JUST WOKE UP!"

Koji grabbed his head.

Lunar covered his face.

Universe 6 Harris started laughing loudly.

Universe 2 Harris finally understood.

This wasn't a friend group.

This was a prison.

And Harris was the prisoner.

Harris pointed weakly toward the book.

"I only wanted to see it."

"No."

"I only wanted to touch it."

"No."

"I only wanted to read one page."

"NO!"

Harris sighed.

Defeated.

For approximately three seconds.

Then he tried again.

"Half a page?"

Another slap sound nearly happened.

He immediately surrendered.

"Okay, okay!"

Everyone finally sat down.

The room became peaceful again.

For about ten seconds.

Then—

GRRRRRRRRRRRRR.

A loud sound echoed.

Everyone froze.

Harris froze.

Universe 2 Harris looked around.

Universe 6 Harris looked around.

Then everyone slowly looked downward.

Toward Harris.

His face immediately turned red.

His stomach growled again.

The room exploded with laughter.

Even Harlina laughed.

Even Koji laughed.

Even Lunar laughed.

Universe 2 Harris was laughing so hard he nearly fell off the chair.

Harris pointed at his stomach.

"You traitor."

More laughter.

The door suddenly opened.

Several nurses entered carrying food.

A lot of food.

An absolutely terrifying amount of food.

Universe 2 Harris looked at the food.

Then looked at Harris.

Then looked back at the food.

Then back at Harris.

His face slowly changed.

Fear.

"Why is there enough food for ten people?"

Lina smiled.

"That's for Harris."

Universe 2 Harris froze.

"What?"

Mika nodded.

"Only Harris."

Universe 6 Harris laughed.

"Welcome to the team."

Harris immediately stepped backward.

"No."

Everyone stood up.

"No?"

Harris pointed toward the door.

"I suddenly feel healthy."

Everyone moved closer.

"I think I should train."

Closer.

"Maybe climb a mountain."

Closer.

"Fight Omega."

Closer.

"I am definitely not hungry."

SLAP.

"Sit down."

Harris surrendered.

Again.

The feeding operation began.

One hour later.

The hospital room looked like a battlefield.

Not because of enemies.

Not because of Omega.

Not because of Void powers.

Because of food.

Harris sat defeated.

His mouth was full.

His expression showed absolute betrayal.

Everyone looked satisfied.

Universe 2 Harris finally understood something important.

The strongest Void Walker in existence.

The one who scared enemies.

The one who fought impossible battles.

The one who challenged destiny.

Could not defeat food.

Or Harlina.

Or slaps.

He quietly wrote that information into memory.

It might be useful later.

Night deepened.

One by one everyone became exhausted.

The journey.

The battle.

The lack of sleep.

Everything finally caught up with them.

Koji fell asleep first.

Then Reku.

Then Roku.

Then Lina.

Then Mika.

Then Lunar.

Universe 6 Harris eventually slept.

Universe 2 Harris remained awake for a little longer.

Watching everyone.

Watching the strange group that had accepted him.

Watching the people Harris protected.

Then he stood up.

And quietly walked toward the window.

A few moments later—

He noticed someone missing.

"Harris?"

The bed was empty.

Universe 2 Harris froze.

Then sighed.

"Of course."

Hospital Terrace

Moonlight illuminated the city.

A gentle wind moved through the night.

And sitting near the edge—

Was Harris.

Looking toward the stars.

Looking toward the sky.

Looking toward the future.

The future he feared.

The future he wanted to protect.

The future that contained Omega Void Emperor.

Universe 2 Harris quietly approached.

Then sat beside him.

Neither spoke.

For several minutes.

Just silence.

Then Universe 2 Harris finally asked:

"Why?"

Harris smiled.

"Again?"

Universe 2 Harris nodded.

"Why save me?"

Harris looked toward the stars.

Then answered honestly.

"Because someone should have saved you."

Universe 2 Harris froze.

Harris continued.

"You remind me of myself."

Silence.

"You tried carrying everything alone."

"You tried protecting everyone."

"You blamed yourself."

"You suffered alone."

"You kept smiling."

His smile slowly faded.

"And you lost."

Universe 2 Harris lowered his head.

Pain returned to his eyes.

Harris looked at him.

"But your story isn't over."

Tears appeared in Universe 2 Harris's eyes.

For years nobody had spoken to him like this.

Nobody.

Then Harris smiled again.

"So stop acting like a dead man."

Universe 2 Harris laughed.

A genuine laugh.

The first real laugh in years.

Inside Harris's mind.

Creator.

Third Voice.

Buddy.

Watching.

Creator smiled.

"He really is impossible."

Third Voice laughed.

"He saved another version of himself."

Buddy folded his arms.

Then looked at Harris.

"Stop leaving your friends."

Harris immediately pointed at Buddy.

"Then tell me where the second book is."

"No."

"Please."

"No."

"Just one clue."

"No."

"Half a clue."

"No."

"One letter?"

Buddy disappeared.

The Creator disappeared.

The Third Voice disappeared.

Leaving Harris alone.

He shouted:

"COWARDS!"

Morning arrived.

Sunlight entered the hospital room.

Everyone slowly woke up.

The first person to panic—

Was Harlina.

"HARRIS!"

She jumped from the chair.

The bed was empty.

Everyone woke instantly.

Koji stood up.

Lunar stood up.

Universe 6 Harris stood up.

Universe 2 Harris sighed.

"I know where he is."

Everyone looked at him.

Universe 2 Harris slowly pointed upward.

"The terrace."

Lunar immediately understood.

Harlina immediately understood.

Both ran.

Terrace

They found him.

Sleeping peacefully.

Using his folded arms as a pillow.

As if he wasn't supposed to be in a hospital.

As if he hadn't nearly died yesterday.

As if nothing happened.

Everyone stared.

Then they heard him talking during sleep.

"Harlina..."

Harlina froze.

"Koji..."

Koji froze.

"Lunar..."

Lunar froze.

"Lina..."

"Mika..."

"Reku..."

"Roku..."

"Universe 6..."

"Universe 2..."

Everyone's hearts warmed.

Even while sleeping...

He was thinking about them.

Then—

His expression changed.

His smile disappeared.

And he whispered:

"Please..."

"Stay away from me..."

Everyone froze.

Then came the rest.

The words that broke their hearts.

"I don't want to lose you too..."

Silence.

Absolute silence.

Tears appeared in several eyes.

Universe 2 Harris lowered his head.

Because he finally understood Harris completely.

Everything.

The smiles.

The sacrifices.

The reckless actions.

The loneliness.

The fear.

It was never because Harris didn't care.

It was because he cared too much.

When Harris finally woke up—

He found everyone staring at him.

Some were crying.

Some were angry.

Some were both.

He blinked.

Then asked:

"Why are you all crying?"

Silence.

Then—

SLAP!

Harlina pointed at him.

"Don't ever say 'lose you too' again."

Harris rubbed his cheek.

Then smiled.

"Okay."

A few minutes later—

The doctor arrived.

"You can go home."

Harris immediately stood.

"FINALLY!"

Everyone sighed.

The doctor sighed.

The universe sighed.

And the journey toward the Second Book was slowly beginning.

*# VOID WALKER — SEASON 7

CHAPTER 8: THE VOID THRONE JOURNEY

PART 6 — SEASON FINALE

The doctor had finally given permission.

Harris could leave the hospital.

The moment those words left the doctor's mouth—

Harris stood up instantly.

"Finally."

Everyone stared at him.

The doctor stared at him.

Universe 2 Harris stared at him.

Universe 6 Harris stared at him.

Harlina slowly raised her hand.

Harris immediately sat back down.

"...I wasn't escaping."

Nobody believed him.

Not even himself.

A few hours later...

The group finally left the hospital.

The city was peaceful.

For the first time in many days.

No battles.

No attacks.

No explosions.

No enemies.

Just peace.

A rare thing in Harris's life.

The First Book was safely stored away.

Far away from Harris's hands.

A decision everyone agreed upon.

Especially Harlina.

Especially Lunar.

Especially Koji.

Because everyone knew—

If Harris got the book...

He would immediately try finding the Second Book.

As the group reached the city entrance—

Universe 2 Harris stopped walking.

Everyone turned.

He was looking at them.

At all of them.

The people who had saved him.

The people who had accepted him.

The people who reminded him of what he had lost.

Silence filled the street.

Then Universe 2 Harris bowed.

A deep bow.

Everyone froze.

"Thank you."

No one spoke.

His voice trembled.

"For saving me."

"For reminding me who I was."

"For giving me hope again."

His eyes slowly moved toward Harris.

"And thank you..."

"Harris."

Harris smiled.

"You're welcome."

Universe 2 Harris laughed softly.

"You really are stupid."

Harris grinned.

"I hear that a lot."

Everyone laughed.

For a brief moment—

The pain disappeared.

The fear disappeared.

Only friendship remained.

Soon afterward—

Everyone returned to their homes.

Universe 6 Harris and Universe 2 Harris stayed temporarily with Lunar and Koji.

Meanwhile—

Harris and Harlina walked home together.

The evening sun painted the sky orange.

For once...

Neither spoke.

Neither needed words.

They simply walked beside each other.

Their hands touching occasionally.

Their shoulders brushing together.

A peaceful silence.

Something both of them had missed.

After everything that happened...

The silence felt beautiful.

When they finally entered the house—

The door closed behind them.

And suddenly—

Harris stopped.

Harlina turned.

"What happened?"

No answer.

Then—

Harris stepped forward.

And hugged her tightly.

Very tightly.

Harlina froze.

His arms trembled slightly.

For a moment…

Neither spoke.

Then Harlina slowly understood.

He was remembering.

The dream.

The deaths.

The fear.

The nightmares.

The possibility of losing everyone.

Especially her.

Slowly—

She wrapped her arms around him too.

And held him closer.

No words.

Just warmth.

Just comfort.

Just understanding.

After a long time—

Harris finally smiled.

Then gently kissed her forehead.

Then her cheek.

"I missed this."

Harlina's face immediately turned red.

Very red.

She tried to look away.

Failed.

Then hid her face against his chest.

Which only made Harris laugh.

And made her face even redder.

Later...

The two entered the kitchen.

Preparing dinner together.

Just like old times.

A peaceful evening.

Harlina prepared vegetables.

Harris prepared drinks.

Though Harlina spent most of the time stopping him from accidentally injuring himself.

Again.

And again.

And again.

At one point—

He tried lifting a heavy pot.

She smacked his hand away.

"You're still injured."

"I'm fine."

"No."

"I'm healing."

"No."

"I survived."

"No."

"..."

"..."

Harris surrendered.

Again.

Dinner finally arrived.

The two sat together.

For the first time in a long time.

No enemies.

No battles.

No missions.

Just them.

They fed each other.

Talked.

Laughed.

Shared old memories.

The night felt peaceful.

Almost too peaceful.

As if the universe itself was allowing them one moment of rest before the next storm.

Halfway through dinner—

Harris suddenly became quiet.

Harlina noticed immediately.

"What happened?"

Harris smiled.

But this time—

The smile looked different.

Sad.

"I missed this."

Harlina froze.

Harris looked down.

"For a while..."

"I thought I wouldn't see this again."

The words hit harder than any attack.

Harlina immediately understood.

The dream.

The vision.

The fear.

The future he had seen.

She reached across the table.

And held his hand.

Firmly.

"You will."

Her voice was gentle.

"But only if you stop trying to die every five minutes."

Harris laughed.

And so did she.

Night arrived.

The medicine finally made Harris sleepy.

The exhaustion from countless battles finally caught him.

The two entered the bedroom.

The moonlight illuminated the room.

Everything felt calm.

Peaceful.

Safe.

For the first time in days—

Harris slept without planning.

Without worrying.

Without pretending.

Without hiding.

He simply held Harlina close.

And closed his eyes.

Several hours later...

Midnight.

Suddenly—

Darkness.

Screams.

Fire.

Destruction.

The nightmare returned.

Omega Void Emperor stood above countless ruined universes.

Thousands of Harris versions.

Broken.

Controlled.

Defeated.

Friends dying.

Worlds collapsing.

The same nightmare.

Again.

Again.

Again.

Then—

Omega looked directly at him.

And smiled.

"Stop him."

The words echoed endlessly.

"Stop him before he collects the remaining books."

"Hurry, Void Walker."

"Or everything dies."

Harris woke instantly.

Heavy breathing.

Sweat covered his body.

His heart raced.

The nightmare felt too real.

Too familiar.

Too possible.

Beside him—

Harlina immediately woke up.

"Harris?"

He looked toward her.

Then smiled.

The same protective smile.

"Just a dream."

She knew he was lying.

Not completely.

But enough.

Still—

She didn't push him.

Instead she simply hugged him.

And stayed beside him until he calmed down.

Eventually—

The two fell asleep again.

Together.

Morning arrived.

Sunlight entered the room.

Harris woke first.

For once...

No pain.

No enemies.

No alarms.

Just peace.

He smiled.

Then gently kissed Harlina's forehead.

Then her cheek.

Before quietly leaving the bed.

A few minutes later—

The smell of coffee filled the house.

Harlina eventually entered the kitchen.

Still half asleep.

Harris handed her a cup.

She accepted it.

The two sat together.

Drinking coffee.

Watching the sunrise.

A peaceful beginning.

After finishing his coffee—

Harris wrapped his arms around her.

And smiled.

"Can I go train with the others?"

Harlina narrowed her eyes.

Immediately suspicious.

"Training?"

"Yes."

"Not searching for the Second Book?"

"..."

"Not escaping?"

"..."

"Not secretly planning something?"

"..."

She sighed.

"You're terrible at lying."

Harris laughed.

Then pointed toward the First Book.

"Can I at least read it?"

"No."

Immediate answer.

No hesitation.

No mercy.

Harris looked genuinely heartbroken.

Harlina almost laughed.

Almost.

A short time later—

The two prepared to visit the others.

Outside—

The sky was clear.

The wind was calm.

The world seemed peaceful.

But far away...

Beyond countless universes...

Omega Void Emperor slowly opened his eyes.

And smiled.

Because he had felt it.

The First Book had been found.

Which meant only one thing.

The race for the remaining books had begun.

Meanwhile—

Harris walked forward with his friends.

Smiling.

Laughing.

Living.

Completely unaware that the greatest war in existence was waiting ahead.

The Creator watched silently.

The Third Voice watched silently.

Buddy watched silently.

And all three shared the same thought.

"The journey has only just begun."

END OF SEASON 7

Next Season

VOID WALKER — SEASON 8

"THE SECOND BOOK AND THE SHADOW OF OMEGA"

"You are not fighting the Void Walker..."

"You are fighting Harris."